DIRECTORS OF MT. LAKE INSTITUTE HOLD MEETING

Rev. I. S. Middaugh Is Elected Chairman of Organization

Rev. I. S. Middaugh, Mountain Lake Park, was elected chairman; Mr. O. T. Graser, secretary, and Rev. W. B. Brock, treasurer of the Mountain Lake Park Institute at its organization meeting held in the office of the county agent in Oakland on Monday, January 4.

The following directors were present: J. H. Carter, Miss Sara B. Huff, Frank E. Baker, H. A. Loraditch, J. B. Watson, O. T. Graser, Rev. W. B. Brock, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, and Darwin Martin and Albert Schrock representing the Mayor of the Park. The board will meet the first Monday of each month at two o'clock.

The purpose and general plan of work was developed and the music program, recreational program, social program and educational program were discussed.

Plans for the budget were also made, and it was decided that $2600 was the amount necessary.

"While the organizations which come to the Park will leave many thousands of dollars in the communities for board, room rent, garage expenses, purchases, etc.," Rev. Middaugh said, "the program which brings them here has no means of obtaining funds for its own support, hence it must look for support from the people who will profit by its work and who are really interested."

Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn have raised $535, and this week the subscription is being started in Oakland.

The general purpose of the Institute is to build a satisfying country life in the communities of the Allegheny Tableland area.

Red Cross Roll Call Reaches Sum of $397.00

With ten new names in the Red Cross Roll Call turned in to Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman, the total amount of money received to date is $397. Every chairman has reported except Kitzmiller, Mrs. Tower stated. The total for this year is $8 more than was turned in last year, but the quota was raised to $600 this year by National headquarters. With the list from Kitzmiller, it was estimated that the grand total would reach nearly $500.

Mrs. A. B. Mason reported from Friendsville, Roselle Bishoff, Opal C. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Friend, Mrs. J. W. McCullough, Mrs. A. B. Mason.

Mrs. J. E. Helbig, Deer Park, continues her list with J. W. Walter and C. A. Ashby.

Mrs. Paul Naylor continues the Oakland list with William A. Chisholm.

Mrs. S. B. Falkenstine continues for Mountain Lake Park with Mrs. W. L. Camden and Mrs. Gay Hayden.

Garrett County School Employes Receive Checks for December Pay

All salary and other checks for December to employes of the Board of Education of Garrett county were mailed on Monday, according to F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent of Education. In a letter sent to teachers and others in the employ of the School Board on December 21 it was stated that checks for December might be delayed, due to the small amount of taxes collected to that time.

In the letter accompanying the remittances on Monday Mr. Rathbun pointed out that all school employes should pay their taxes promptly to J. J. Ashby, treasurer, or make satisfactory arrangements for the payment of the same, as it was only through the collection of taxes that their checks were made available each month.

To Discuss Maple Sugar Production at Series of Meetings

A series of meetings for Garrett county maple sugar and maple syrup producers will be held next week, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

Bittinger school house, Tuesday, January 12, 7:30 p. m.; Ryan's Glade Grange Hall, Wednesday, January 13, 7:30 p. m.; Grantsville school building, Thursday, January 14, 7:30 p. m.

S. B. Shaw, chief of the Maryland State Department of Markets, will be at the Bittinger meeting and discuss the further inspection of grading of syrup. Richard Kilbourne, extension forester, will attend all three of the scheduled meetings.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES MILK ORDINANCE FOR OAKLAND

To Place Warning Signal at Dangerous Street Intersection

Discussion of a proposed milk ordinance for the town of Oakland, as set out by State authorities, was one of the principal features of the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council held in the City Hall on Monday evening. The ordinance was laid over until the next meeting of the body when it will be again presented and disposed of by ballot of the members.

Regulations in the proposed ordinance require an inspection of the dairy barn, an inspection of the cattle, an inspection of the wagon or vehicle hauling the milk, and certain requirements will also be demanded of persons who do the milking and who deliver the milk to consumers.

Bills amounting to approximately $2,600 were presented and ordered paid. These bills include a deferred payment on the indebtedness to the Amisite Corporation for street improvement and the yearly payment of an amount to the Oakland Volunteer Fire Company.

To Place Warning Signal

A warning signal will be placed at the corner of Second and Oak streets where numerous automobile accidents have ccurred during the past year.

That the same streets for coasting would be used this year was announced by Mayor Stemple Tuesday morning, as follows: Pennington street and Fifth street from Green to Oak between the hours of 4:00 p. m. and 10:00 p. m., and on Saturdays from 10:00 a. m. until 10:00 p. m.

Routine matters occupied the remained of the session of Council.

The next regular meeting will be held on Monday, February 1.

Junior Dixon Has Leg Broken In Coasting Accident Sunday

Lawrence Dixon, Jr., aged 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Dixon, Second street, had his left leg broken near the hip in the first coasting accident of the season on Sunday evening when he was unavoidably struck by an automobile driven by Dr. Ralph Kercheval, at the corner of Third and Pennington street as the lad was crossing the latter street on his sled.

He was given medical attention in Oakland and taken to Memorial hospital, Cumberland, Monday, where he will probably remain several weeks under the care of Dr. W. A. Gracie of the hospital staff.

Chronology of World Events To Be Found on Page Seven

A chronology of the year 1931, covering events and happenings other than those in the immediate community, appears on page seven of this issue of The Republican.

The chronology was compiled by E. W. Pickard for the Western Newspaper Union and covers events of foreign, international, domestic interest, happenings in the sport and aviation world, disasters and concludes with a necrology.

COUNTY AGENT'S ANNUAL REPORT SHOWS PROGRESS

Advancement Made In Carrying Extension Work to Farmers of Garrett County During 1931

LISTS SUMMARY OF WORK

The annual report of John H. Carter, County Agent for Garrett county, for the year 1931, showing achievements and advancement in a number of extension projects and presenting an encouraging outlook for 1932, has been forwarded to Dr. T. B. Symons, Extension Director, University of Maryland.

In summing up the outstanding achievements during the past year the following are included in the report of Mr. Carter:

Six hundred twenty-five visits made to farms, 106 demonstrations of methods held, 92 meetings held with an attendance of 9,547, in promoting extension work, one farmers' tour of the U. S. Government farms at Beltsville conducted, one training meeting of local 4-H Club leaders held, two new 4-H Clubs organized, increasing 4-H Club membership of the county from 66 to 84, second annual tri-county 4-H Club camp held with 20 in attendance from Garrett county.

Work covering home gardens and home beautification, market garden and truck crops, forestry, agriculture and home engineering, poultry, dairy, livestock, farm management and farm and home marketing were also included in the report.

In extending the program in the county, organizations which cooperated with Mr. Carter included five of the granges, farmers' clubs, Grange Milling and Supply Co., the Garrett County Maple Products Association, the Ryan's Glade Lamb and Wool Pool, the Agricultural Fair Association, the Allegheny Tableland Association and the vo-ag departments of the high schools of the county.

Dairy improvement, potato production and maple syrup production were the three most important projects carried on, according to Mr. Carter's report.

The dairy program was confined to

MARRIED

White—Murphy—Miss Rose Helen Murphy, daughter of Mrs. Mary Murphy and the late Joseph Murphy, Pennington street, Oakland, and Mr. Francer Howard White, son of Mrs. Catherine White, of Mountain Lake Park, were quietly married at Cumberland on Saturday, January 2, it has just been announced.

Rev. Fr. James A. Duyer, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church, Cumberland, performed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Oakland High School, class of 1925, and has been employed in the local telephone office for the past several years. The couple will remain in Oakland for several weeks when they will go to Detroit, Mich., where the groom is employed.

1367 MARRIAGE LICENSES WERE ISSUED LAST YEAR BY CLERK OF COURT; NUMBER GREATER THAN IN ANY YEAR

Couples From West Virginia Secured 829 of the Total—September Was Heaviest Month

COUPLES FROM 18 STATES

A total of 1367 marriage licenses, an average of 114 per month, was issued from the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland during 1931, to couples from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and 14 other scattered states and the District of Columbia. The total was 67 in excess of the all-time record of 1300 made in 1927 and 107 greater than was issued last year.

During February, August and September of the year just closed, new monthly records were made, September now being the largest month on record with 170 permits issued.

829 From West Virginia

Eight hundred and twenty-nine of the 1367 couples were from the State of West Virginia; 242 from Pennsylvania; 127 from Maryland; 46 from Ohio, and the remainder from New Jersey, Michigan, Virginia, Maine, New York, Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Mexico, Texas, California, Nevada, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Connecticut and the District of Columbia.

In the remaining number of licenses issued the contracting parties were from different states, Maryland-West Virginia couples having the greatest number with 45; Pennsylvania-West Virginia couples came next with 23. Fifty-four applicants were refused licenses during 1931.

Of the total number of licenses issued during the year, approximately 20 to 25 are never used by applicants, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk.

Whenever a license is used the minister performing the ceremony must return the certificate to the Court House within a certain period.

Month	Number
January	49
February	89
March	72
April	89
May	114
June	138
July	120
August	160
September	170
October	129
November	114
December	123
Total	1367

In the past thirteen years 13,872 marriage licenses have been issued from the office of the Circuit Clerk.

GEORGE D. BROWNING IS HEAD OF COMMISSIONERS

Is Reelected President at Meeting Monday; Road Contract Awarded

The Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county met and reorganized Monday, when Mr. George D. Browning was again chosen president of the body.

With the exception of one year, Mr. Browning has been president of the Commissioners' Board for more than eleven years. The other members of the board are Messrs. George W. Harvey and James A. Fitzwater.

Road Contract Awarded

C. C. Mason, of Swanton, was given a contract for the building of the proposed county improved highway along the north bank of the Savage River from the Piedmont municipal dam at Bond Junction to the Savage River bridge, west of Bloomington, a distance of approximately 2.4 miles. The contract price was $6,949. Work on the improvement is to begin immediately.

69 ENROLLED AT END OF AMERICAN LEGION DRIVE

Gonder's Team Wins; Campaign For Members Will Continue

With a total of 69 members enrolled for 1932 in Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, the local membership campaign concluded on January 4, with Joe Gonder's team winning the competition for gaining the most men.

Mr. Gonder's team received 18 new members and 22 renewals, while C. M. Sincell's team received 4 new members and 25 renewals. The turkey and bean banquet, scheduled for the conclusion of the campaign, will be held on a date to be announced by A. G. Hesen, post commander.

Inasmuch as the National headquarters of the Legion is calling for a National membership drive, members of the local post will endeavor to raise their membership. The campaign will continue from January 4 to April 3, and each week will be in charge of one of the former post commanders. Those to be in charge are as follows: January 4 to 10, A. G. Hesen and J. M. Gonder; January 11 to 17, Joseph Gonder; January 18 to 24, Edward P. Kahl; January 25 to 31, I. R. Rudy; February 1 to 7, Delbert Davis; February 8 to 14, C. M. Sincell; February 15 to 28, Edward C. Lawrence.

Another Hold-Up Attempt On Route 50 Is Foiled

Darrell Martin, 16 years old, employed as driver and weigher at the Martin mine near Table Rock, on Route 50, was slightly injured Tuesday when he was struck on the forehead with a rock because he refused to give money to a stranger who had stopped at the mouth of the mine and demanded it.

Tuesday about noon a car bearing a West Virginia license plate, stopped at a point a short distance east of the mine opening. One of the occupants, according to the Martin boy, alighted from the car and walked up the highway and demanded some money and when he was told by young Martin to be on his way he picked up the rock and threw it. Martin ran into the mine shanty where he secured a .32-calibre revolver and fired it at the man, evidently a foreigner, as he ran toward the parked car along the highway into which he jumped and was driven away at a high speed by his companion.

Elmer Selders, who operates the mine, was engaged at work in the mine at the time, but appeared a few minutes after the men had left.

Celebrate 54th Anniversary of Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hamill, of Oakland, celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of their wedding at their home on Liberty street last Friday.

It was planned by the couple to entertain a number of their friends, but the inclement condition of the weather prevented.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamill were married in Keyser, West Va., on December 31, 1877. They resided for a time at Keyser and also at Kitzmiller, but have spent most of their married life in Oakland. Of the four children born to the couple, two are living, Mrs. H. A. Loraditch and Miss Margaret Hamill. One son died while quite young, and Roy Hamill died several years ago at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

BODY OF MISSING FLIER IS FOUND ON CHEAT MOUNTAIN

Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt, Wedged In Cockpit of Plane, Is Burned Beyond Recognition

CRASHED INTO TREE

Wedged in the cockpit of his wrecked plane, the body of Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt, missing army pilot, was found yesterday on one of the highest peaks of the Cheat Mountains.

A farmer and a trapper came upon the wreckage while tramping through the hills in search of the aviator, who disappeared Christmas Day while en route from Selfridge Field, Mich., to his home at Hot Springs, Va.

The body of the dead man was charred almost beyond recognition; the plane, with a broken wing, was badly burned. The machine had apparently struck a tree on Pool's Knob and crashed, bottom down, in the bushes. The peak where Bobbitt met his death rises almost 4,000 feet.

Three miles south of the peak Bobbitt would have found a clearing on which he could have landed, the only clearing in that part of the mountains.

Found in Dense Woods

M. S. Simmons, 36, farmer, and Carl Reefer, 40, trapper, found the wreckage. They notified Sergt. Arnold Moore, of the West Virginia State police, who left with a squad of men to bring the body to Elkins.

Returning to the village of Valley Head after making their discovery, Simmons and Reefer blazed a trail Indian fashion, back through the hills, cutting into trees with an axe and battering down underbrush to guide the troopers.

The spot where Bobbitt croshed is in one of the wildest sections of West Virginia.

Reports of having seen the plane flying over Garrett county on Christmas Day led to the belief that he may have crashed in Garrett county and caused an investigation to be set on foot by the War Department in the vicinity of Red House.

Oakland High Basketeers To Open Season Tonight

Oakland High School basketball teams will open the season against Bayard High School tonight at the local school auditorium. The girls' game will begin at 7:15 and the boys' game at 8:00 o'clock.

Joe Rice and Ed. Maroney are the only two regulars from last year's team, and the remainder of the team will be chosen from Paul Dawson, Richard Wolfe, Maurice Butler, Schell Hoyc, Fred. Peddicord and others. Maroney will not be able to play tonight. B. O. Aiken will referee. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

Other High School Notes

Wednesday afternoon the staff of the Acorn met to discuss becoming a member of the Quill and Scroll, a nation-wide organization. The staff will present a play soon.

The athletic commercial boys were defeated again on Wednesday by Mr. Willis' boys.

The democracy class is now studying International Relationship. Persons interested in the problems may be present in the regular class session at any time.

Parents are urged to see that their boys and girls are in school. So many students do not realize that their absence from school means that they have something offered to them at no direct cost and fail to take advantage of the opportunity.

Reginald Ford, school reporter.

Health Officer Makes Report for Month of December

Eighteen cases of communicable diseases were reported in Garrett county for the month of December by Dr. George E. Clarke, health officer.

The list is as follows: Whooping cough, 2; scarlet fever, 6; chicken pox, 1; syphilis, 3; pneumonia, 1; gonorrhea, 1; measles, 4.

Two of the six scarlet fever cases are still under quarantine, Dr. Clarke said.

Public and Parochial Schools Reopened Monday Morning

The public schools of the county and the parochial school in Oakland reopened following the holiday season on Monday morning, following a vacation period of about ten days. The enrollment in the various schools was up to the standard.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for January 3

THE SON OF GOD BECOMES MAN

LESSON TEXT—John 1:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Comes to Live on Earth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Comes to Live on Earth.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Seeing God in Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fact and Meaning of the Incarnation.

The lessons for this quarter are taken from the Gospel of John, giving an opportunity for the presentation of this great message from God. In order intelligently to present the lessons of the quarter, the teacher must get hold of John's central purpose and bend every lesson thereto. Happily the writer has plainly declared his purpose—John 20:30, 31. It is twofold:

1. To prove that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God.

2. To show that eternal life is to be obtained through faith in him.

With this twofold objective, John proceeds lawyer-like to lay down his propositions and to introduce his witnesses one by one in their establishment. The section for today's lesson is commonly called "The Prologue."

I. The Pre-existent Word (vv. 1-4).

The eternal Son is called the Word of God because he is the expression of God to man. He is the one who utters to men the Father's will. God has in these days spoken to us by his Son (Heb. 1:1, 2). Observe:

1. The son is a person separate and distinct from the Father (v. 1). There is at the same time an inseparable union existing between them.

2. The Son is eternal (v. 2). He was with God in the beginning. He did not begin to exist when the heavens and the earth were created, neither did be become the Son at his baptism, for he was before all things (Col. 1:17).

3. The Son is divine (v. 1). "The Word was God." He is a being equal with God and one in essence with him.

4. The Word of God is the omnipotent Creator (v. 3). By him were all things made, the world and all things therein. This refutes the gross error which postulates the eternity of matter.

5. The Word is the source of all life (v. 4).

6. The Word of God is the light of men (v. 4). Man's power to reason has come from Jesus Christ. The very faculties which the skeptic uses in his attempt to destroy Christ's work in the world have been derived from Christ. The conscience has its source in him.

II. The World's Attitude Toward the Word of God (vv. 5-13).

1. Men are insensible to the presence of the true light (vv. 5-10). So dense is the ignorance of mankind that the presence of the very Lord of Glory is unrecognized. Being thus unrecognized, God, in his grace, sent John the Baptist as a witness that all men might believe (vv. 6, 7). Man's ignorance can only be accounted for by the malicious blinding of his mind by the Devil (II Cor. 4:4).

2. The desperate wickedness of man's heart (v. 11). The Word was rejected by the chosen nation. They would not receive the one whom God had anointed to be their King. With the self-revealing light, the earnest testimony of John the Baptist, and the glorious privilege of becoming the sons of God, the rejection of Christ most certainly reveals the awful perversity of the human heart in its natural state. "To be carnally minded is death" (Rom. 8:6).

3. Some received Christ and thus became sons of God (vv. 12, 13). In this section we are shown how men become children of God. It is not by blood relation with the covenant people, "of blood" (grace is not inherited); not by the efforts of our natural hearts, "the will of the flesh"; nor by the acts and deeds of others—"the will of man; but of God."

III. The Eternal Word Becams Incarnate, "Made Flesh" (vv. 14-18).

In these words we are taught that the eternal Word became the incarnate Son. The eternal Son of God became man, born of a woman. The eternal Son did not become a Jew, but "flesh." He designated himself "the Son of Man." He became really human. The eternal personality did not cease or become modified in any way when he entered upon human relation. The human and divine natures were united in one person. This incarnate Son of God tabernacled among us.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Ignorance is "darkness," education is "light."

God's "minorities" will overwhelm the devil's "majorities."

Sin is "international," "interdenominational," and "nonsectarian."

"When every other way of escape from temptation seems closed, try the gate of praise."

BICENTENNIAL STAMPS WENT ON SALE JANUARY 1

Twelve Washington Portraits In Series Issued to Commemorate Anniversary of First President

The new postage stamps issued to commemorate the Bicentennial observance of George Washington's birth, were placed on sale in the National Capital on January 1st, and throughout the rest of the country the following day, are in a series of twelve, from the one-half cent to the ten-cent denomination. These stamps show Washington as he was painted at different times in his life by different artists.

The one-half cent stamp is dark brown in color, bearing the likeness of Washington painted by Charles Wilson Peale, the original of which is now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The one-cent stamp, printed in green, is a reproduction of the profile bust by Houdon, made in 1785 and now among the treasures at Mount Vernon. The one and one-half cent stamp is light brown, featuring another Peale portrait of Washington known as the Virginia Colonel, now in possession of Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia.

The stamp which the public will become most familiar with, because of its use on most mail, is the two-cent bearing the likeness of George Washington already best known, the Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum portrait done at Germantown in 1796. Already this portrait has become generally known among Americans because of its use on the one dollar bill.

The color of the three-cent stamp is purple and bears a reproduction of the the Peale portrait painted at Valley Forge in 1777 showing Washington in the uniform of a general with a cocked hat. Another Peale portrait done the same year, known as the Rhinebeck portrait, will appear on the four-cent stamp in warm brown. The five-cent stamp in blue features the Washington portrait now owned by the New York Historical Society.

The six-cent stamp in orange shows the portrait painted by Trumbull in 1792. The head and bust of the Trumbull portrait done in 1780 appears on the seven-cent stamp in black, while the eight-cent of olive green is a reproduction of the crapeon drawing made from life by Charles B. J. F. Saint-Memin.

The nine-cent stamp is pink showing a reproduction of the pastel portrait painted from life by W. Williams in 1794, while the last of the series, the ten-cent stamp is orange in color and the portrait is taken from the Gilbert Stuart painting made in 1795, known as the Vaughn portrait.

An Oven Dinner
Menu

Tomato steak, vegetable gravy, boiled rice, cabbage and celery salad, peach short cake.

Tomato Steak

Three pounds round steak, 2 inches thick; 1 pint tomatoes, 2 carrots, 1 large onion, 1 white turnip, 2 cloves, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Place the meat in a large pan and sear. Pare the carrots, onion, and turnip and put thrugh a meat grinder or chop rather fine. Add the ground vegetables and tomatoes to the meat, then add the seasonings, cover and bake until done. Remove the meat from the vegetable mixture and thicken this to make a gravy. For this use 2 tablespoons of flour which have been mixed with two tablespoons of cold water to make a smooth paste. Stir this slowly into the hot vegetable mixture and let simmer gently until the gravy is thickened to the desired consistency. Serve with rice which has been cooked in the oven at the same time as the meat.

Rice

One cup rice, 2 quarts cold water, 2 teaspoons salt.

Either polished or brown rice may be used. Wash the rice and put it in a baking dish. Add the water and salt. Cover and place in the oven. At the end of the baking period remove from the oven and drain. Rice can be rinsed with either hot or cold water. The cold water will serve to seperate the grains better, making them each one distinct. If this is desired and the cold water is used the rice will have to be reheated before serving. It can be reheated for a few minutes by returning it to the oven.

Cabbage and Celery Salad

One-half head cabbage, 1 bunch of celery, ½ onion, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon paprika.

Slice fresh cabbage or chop very finely. The celery should be washed well and cut into dice or it can be chopped with the cabbage. Add the juice of the onion or chop it very finely, and add the onion pulp. Add the seasoning and enough of the mayonnaise to cover. Mix thoroughly and place on well washed lettuce leaves.

Objectives of Citizen Training In Elementary Schools

By DR. HOWARD A. DAWSON
Director Research and Surveys, Department of Education, State of Arkansas

The chief purposes of a State-supported system of public education are political, economic and individual. The purpose is political in that a government founded on democratic principles must see that its citizens possess the necessary knowledge, attitude and will to perform effectively the functions of citizenship. Considered in this way the public schools are the agencies through which the democratic State undertakes to perpetuate itself.

It is economic. Wealth is produced by the application of human labor, skill and intelligence to natural resources. Public school training increases the knowledge, skill and adjustability of those persons who have its advantages and, therefore, increases their productive capacity, raises their standard of living, and thereby increases the supply of and the demand for services and material goods.

It is individual in that it proposes to improve the physical, mental and moral well-being of the individuals who have its advantages.

The elementary school as a part of this system of public education should perform the following specific functions:

1. Bring together for educational purposes, regardless of social status and native endowment, all the children of the community, and place them under the supervision of men and women carefully trained for their work of inducting these immature members into the life of modern society.

2. To foster activities that will insure the acquisition by the pupils, of those basic skills, habits, attitudes, dispositions, ideals, and powers required to fall members of organized society. These activities consist largely of the elementary mastery of the language and number arts, and through them the reading, imaginative study, and appreciation of those human experiences which have found expression in history, geography, social science, literature, art, music and philosophy. The activities fostered should be appropriate to the mental and physical development of the children taught. This calls for the recognition, not only of age levels, but ability levels for each age. It is now practically universally accepted that the elementary school should provide for approximately six years of training.

In order to determine the cost of a satisfactory program of elementary education it is necessary to set up the tangible measures of the different aspects of the public school system which is to carry out the functions and purposes set forth above. These aspects will pertain to teachers, physical plant and equipment, the curriculum, materials and apparatus for instructional purposes, the length of the school term, type of organization, pupil-teacher ratio, size of the school, transportation, and the supervision and administration of the school system.

All persons employed in the public school systems as teachers, supervisors, or administrators should be trained specifically to fulfill the responsibilities of the positions they hold. In the light of the standards set up by most of the State Departments of Education, and in a very large majority of our city school systems, it appears that all class-room teachers in the elementary schools should have at least two years of professional training after graduating from a four-year high school; and that all principals should have three or more years' teaching experience in addition to the minimum training.

It is not difficult on grounds to defend a standard of four years of training for all elementary teachers, but from a standpoint of practical consideration it is likely that the universal standard of two years is all that can be required. There are two very good reasons for this. In the first place, the number of elementary teachers with two years' training is not now sufficient to fill all the teaching positions. In the second place, because of the relatively low ability of many sections of the country to pay taxes, coupled with the inadequate taxing system, it is highly improbable that adequate salaries to pay for the greater amounts of training will be paid.

The salaries paid teachers will be determined to a large extent by the supply and demand for persons who have the qualifications to do the work required. As to what is necessary to pay the teachers having the qualifications set forth above, we can rely somewhat on the statistics as to salaries. The average salary of Federal employes in 1928 was $1,863; the average earnings of wage earners was $1,220; and the average salary of teachers in consolidated schools was $1,000.

Dr. Nolen M. Irby, of the Arkansas State Department of Education, has shown that in Arkansas the minimum amount of money on which teachers can maintain acceptable standards of living and make a reasonable amount of professional progress is $1,200.

The average salary of principals of rural elementary schools in the United States in 1925 was $1,695. In Maryland it was $1,650 in 1929-30, and the median salary of 15 southern states in 1925 was $1,630. The average salary of elementary principals in 440 cities of a population 2,500 to 5,000 is $1,409, the medians of the minimum and maximum salaries being $1,271 and $1,592, respectively.

Summarizing all of these facts it would seem that the minimum salary of the elementary school teacher should be not less than $1,200 annually, and that salary should be placed on an annual basis, and not on a monthly basis. The salary of an elementary principal should be a minimum of $1,600 annually.

Every child should have the privilege of attending school, and each teacher the privilege of working in a school plant so designed as to facilitate their educational activities and promote their health. The plant should be designed from a functional point of view so as best to promote the physical, moral and social welfare of the pupils and teachers, and so that the program of the school can best be carried out. The school plant should represent the best in architectural design, so that it can be looked upon with pride and respect in the community. The equipment should facilitate the carrying out of the educational activities and protect and encourage the health, safety, morals and social well-being of the pupils and teachers.

Practice in the most progressive school systems demand the free textbooks and instructional materials be furnished at public expense. A study of certain well-organized county school systems indicate that the annual per pupil cost of textbooks and instructional materials averages about $2.10.

The curriculum should contain such courses of study and materials as will furnish all aims and purposes of education as set forth in previous sections of this paper. In general the curriculum should contain subject matter and materials providing for instruction and training in health, in civics, the tool subjects, worthy home membership, worthy use of leisure time, and an acquaintance with economic and vocational life in the modern world. This is set forth here in connection with the financing of the elementary school because of these aspects of the curriculum essentials. It has become quite popular in some groups to undertake to eliminate many of these essentials from the elementary curriculum. Of course, if nothing but the three Rs are to be taught considerable time might be saved and the cost of elementary schools reduced accordingly.

It appears necessary for the school people themselves to state concisely what training the children are entitled to receive in the elementary schools, and resist with every power at their command the attempt of laymen who are interested chiefly in the reduction of taxes, to curtail the advantages to which the children are entitled.

Trends as well as enlightened practices and modern studies of child development indicate that the most acceptable type of organization is the six-year elementary school. So far as the elementary school is concerned, its cost will be influenced by whether it is to be a six or an eight-grade school. So far as the total cost of the public school system on elementary and secondary levels is concerned, if the schools were manned and equipped according to enlightened standards, the cost will probably be affected by whether the elementary school is to terminate with the sixth grade or the eighth grade.

There is probably not any factor that will more greatly influence the cost of the school system than the accepted standard as to the number of pupils constituting a teaching unit. The statistics of our better city school systems, and in the States maintaining the county unit system, such as Louisiana and Maryland, as well as such experimental studies as have been conducted indicate that about 35 to 40 pupils should constitute a teaching unit. The acceptable standard seems to be about forty enrolled which will usually mean about 35 pupils in average daily attendance. Further experimentation and the further development of the teaching technique may in all probability change this ratio in the future.

GIVE YOURSELF THOROUGH GOING OVER—DR. RILEY

State Health Department Head Advises Health Inventory

Follow the custom of commercial concerns which take stock of their resources and liabilities at this time of the year, in order that they may organize their business to the best advantage, and go to your doctor for a thorough going over, is the advice of Dr. R. H. Rlley, Director of the State Department of Health, to every grown-up in the State.

"Mothers of young children have learned that the best way to keep their babies well is through regular medical supervision while the babies are well," Dr. Riley said. "Children who are reaching school age are examined in preparation for admission to school, so that they can be free from handicapping conditions. School children have become accustomed to the periodical medical inspections and accept them as a matter of course. It is the grown-ups who need to form the habit.

"Twenty years ago, one out of every five deaths was that of a baby under a year old. Now the number of infant deaths is just about half of what it was two decades ago and we are working hard to make it less than that. The heaviest toll is taken now by what are generally called the 'degenerative diseases of middle life'—heart disease, diseases of the kidneys, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage and apoplexy, and diseases of the arteries.

"These diseases, with tuberculosis, are responsible for half of the deaths that occur every year. Nearly all of them have slow beginnings. In the majority of cases, early recognition, prompt treatment with careful following of the rules of hygienic living, under the direction of the family physician would do much to prevent suffering and to prolong life and usefulness.

"At the beginning of this new year you could not do better than to dial your life station—KYH—Keep Your Health. Go to your doctor. Have your human machine carefully inspected. Let him advise you as to the adjustments you must make to keep the machine in the best possible working order. And then observe the precautions that he lays down for you."

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Hlmself

Two New Year's cards helped to swell my Christmas card total, so the return on the ones I sent out have now increased about two per ccnt. The market is going up.

1932, 1932, 1932, 1932, 1932, Monday, January 4, 1932; Tuesday, January 5, 1931—slips; 1932 will win out eventually; just give it time. Have you received a check yet dated 1931, or aren't you receiving checks just at this time?

There's absolutely nothing on my mind this week, and that's one statement with which you can readily agree, but you needn't gct nasty about it and claim that it's a weekly occurrence. Anyhow, Philip F. Bowman, of Accident, doesn't think it is empty every week, for here's a letter from him: "We are sending you a check for your paper last year and please send it another year. We sure do like the paper, especially Scoop's column."

Now there's a fellow after my own heart, who knows what he is talking about and isn't afraid to admit it.

We have with us again the almanac for 1932 which gives one information on everything from planting seeds only on certain days to getting married in the light of the moon. It contains the mental and physical tortures of Mrs. Daniel, "I was a nervous wreck," Zilch; the backache of Henry, "I couldn't sleep at nights," Runemragged; and the rheumatism of Mrs. Amzi, "I suffered agonies," McTwitch, who were really in bad shape and suffered quite a bit more than somewhat until they had taken four bottles of these contra-pain and nervitis tablets. Their shapes were never anything to brag on, according to Archibaldson, which is one thing the almanac doesn't tell you. (Their photos tell you that).

Our supply of calendars has also arrived, but they aren't as numerous as they used to be, or as varied in plctures. In fact, the pictures are rather scarce. Outslde of George Washington's picture on Frederick Thayer's, and the end of the bear hunt on Bill Browning's, there isn't any more.

A man in Virginia the other day fainted when he paid his taxes. The boss editor might faint if some folks came to the office and paid their bills.

Did you know (I'll bet you did)—

That I had difficulty in getting 15 two-cent stamps at the postoffice last Thursday evening, because the new Washington stamps were going on sale the following day and they were trying to come out even on their old ones.

That Bill Browning had his own number drawn at the dance Thursday night which won the turkey. It would not have been so bad if he hadn't been holding the box from which the girl drew the number.

That in a restaurant in Davis is this sign: "If you have nothing to do, don't do it here."

That time is a good healer but a poor beauty doctor.

That a man fainted when it came time to say, "I will," in a marriage ceremony.

That every time I get a telephone call a B. and O. freight train comes along and I can't hear the party talking.

That a band of gypsies was here last week, the first I ever saw in Oakland in the winter time.

That the Oakland Pharmacy clock is being repalred, because the Amalgamates protested that they must know the time of day, even if they aren't going anywhere.

That somebody lost hls hat at the dance last Thursday and sent the people in charge of the bazaar a bill for five dollars.

That a man from Baltimore asked Turk Shartzer the other day where Second street was, and he didn't know after living and working on that street since he was a kld.

That my prize apples whlch have graccd the desk of the boss editor slnce fair time, are getting wrinkles as big as those on Archibaldson's forefront.

That Willie Davis has rctnrned to Oakland from Chicago.

That I never saw so much to eat at one meal as was put before me and several others at Floyd Stahl's home on Monday night.

That for fifteen minutes a day you can learn to sway your audience and be a leader of men (if you don't believe in evolution).

That when Noah sailed the waters blue he had his troubles the same as you. For forty days he drove the Ark before he found a place to park.

That woman's eternal hunt is for something that doesn't look too much like what everybody is wearing and yet doesn't look too much like what nobody is wearing.

That my ambition is to have a nose for news so long that I get things in advance.

That Christmas is over. (You would not suspect it from the number of Christmas trees that are still standing).

That Archibaldson has played more with the choo-choo train than his son has.

That a party was given at an Oakland matron's home where everybody dressed as kids.

That even bootleggers have been hit by the depression.

That habit won't stand up against a desire. To prove: You have noted that we have a habit of using a lot of space to say nothing, and your desire to use violence impells us to drop the matter right here. Therefore desire wins.

Next week we will hear from the celebrated Hind triplets, Herbie, Bigby and Wayby.

The closing days of the hunting season brought many sportsmen to this neighborhood for their final rabbit chase, but the lack of tracking snow was to the advantage of the rabbits.

After The Cat Was Let Out

It's time to go to bed. Father opens the door and lets pussy out with a goodnight meow—locks the door and then—winds the clock. At least, it used to be like that.

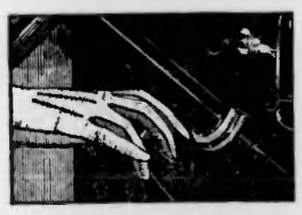
Now the average American father is concerned only with letting out the cat before going to bed—unless, of course, there happens to be a cold chicken leg in the electric refrigerator.

Your power company tends to the clock—so reliable and even is the flow of electricity from the large interconnected system of generating stations that accurate time is kept day and night, month after month in thousands of homes—and the fine art of clock winding is rapidly passing into oblivion.

MONONGAHELA SYSTEM

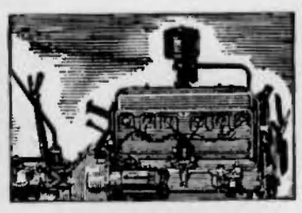
What's New in the New Chevrolet Six

When you read what's new in the new Chevrolet Six, you, too, will agree it's the Great American Value for 1932. Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling combined for the first time in a low-priced car! Engine and chassis improvements that raise performance to new heights of power, speed and smoothness! The finest Fisher bodies Chevrolet has ever introduced. And the same qualities of reliability and economy that have won the approval of millions of Chevrolet owners. All these you will find in the new Chevrolet Six at one of the lowest prices in the market! That's why the new Chevrolet Six is called the Great American Value for 1932!



Syncro-Mesh Transmission

Syncro-Mesh permits you to shift gears with marvelous quickness, quietness and ease. It even enables you to shift rapidly from high back into second, any time you want to use the braking force of the engine.

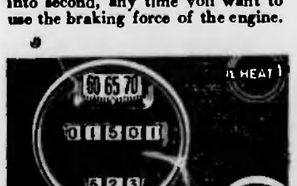


A Smoother, Improved Six-Cylinder Engine

Chevrolet now has down-draft carburetion, new cylinder head, manifolding, counter-balanced crankshaft and rubber mounting, increasing power 20 per cent to 60 horsepower.

Simplified Free Wheeling

To take advantage of Chevrolet's Free Wheeling, simply press a button on the dash. Until you pull it out again, you "Free Wheel." You coast when your foot is off the accelerator. You shift with magical ease.



65 to 70 Miles an Hour with Faster Acceleration

Vital new features in Chevrolet's six-cylinder engine enable it to develop 65 to 70 miles an hour. Stop-watch tests show an acceleration from 0 to 35 miles in 6.7 seconds.

Stabilized Front-End Mounting

Chevrolet's exclusive method of mounting front fenders, lamps, double tie-bar and radiator securely to the frame stabilizes the front-end and insures steadiness when traveling over rough roads.

Smart New Fisher Bodies

Chevrolet's new Fisher bodies are the smartest ever to appear in the low-price field. Furthermore, Fisher craftsmen have added new elements of strength, quietness and solidity to the wood-and-steel construction.

Good News for 1932, Which Is Leap Year

Good news for 1932!

First, there is a February 29, making the year a day longer than usual. Sweethearts of shy swains take note—1932 is a Leap Year, so pop the question yourself.

Second, the new year contains but one hoodoo day, Friday, May 13. The chances of disaster will thus be reduced by half, compared with 1931 and its two "tough-luck" days.

Third, those who receive their pay on Saturday will welcome the 5 months with five pay days in them.

Fourth, the Saturday half-holiday on February 20 will be followed by Sunday and Washington's birthday on Monday.

The year started out in a big way with New Year's Day falling on Friday, assuring many of the holiday on Saturday and then Sunday in which to rest.

Husbands may find comfort in the fact that Easter will come early, on March 25, and the possibility was foreseen that wives would find the weather unsuitable for Easter finery.

Another prolonged week-end holiday will occur in May, extending thru Decoration Day. In July Independence Day will fall on Monday. Armistice Day will come on Fridaay.

Not until December will the first really bad break come. Christmas will fall on a Sunday!

herd improvements rather than to dairy expansion. Seven purebred Jersey bulls were loaned through the U. S. Government farm at Beltsville and are stationed in the care of Garrett county farmers.

A tuberculin test of cattle has shown that less than one-half of one percent of the number are affected, making it possible for Garrett county to become a modified accredited area.

In the potato projects 26 farmers applied for seed certification and 15 passed the requirements. A boys' commercial club was formed and a sprayer purchased in cooperation with vocational department of the Oakland High School. The yield in the spray ring was 283 bushels per acre, compared to 222 busbels for certified seed growers not in the spray ring. In three cases where boys' potatoes were planted beside those of his father a comparison of yields showed an increase of 75, 125 and 32 bushels, respectively, over the father's yield. The highest yield was 440 bushels per acre, achieved by Boyd Hardesty, of Hutton. A potato show was held with 80 exhibitors.

During 1931 fifteen applicants received labels and 2748 gallons of maple syrup were marketed under the trade name "Crest 'o The Alleghanies." Plans are now under way by the Maryland State Forestry Department to conduct an extensive advertising campaign for Garrett county maple products.

A purebred ram show and sale was held, 20 purebred rams being sold and demonstrations were given and instruction for the treating of sheep for stomach worms was distributed to 95 farmers.

Four farmers planted windbreaks through extension assistance and one farmer planted 1,500 evergreens for Christmas trees of the future. There are now three young sugar groves in the county.

Assistance in agricultural engineering was given on four farms. One installed a drainage system, two a sewage disposal, two put in water systems. One dairy barn was remodeled, two hog houses, two poultry houses, one silo, one garage and four bull pens were built according to recommendations furnished.

In concluding his report Mr. Carter states that the outlook for Garrett county is promising in its marketing possibilities, and for its buckwheat, maple syrup, potato and dairy industries especially. He plans to enlarge his work considerably for 1932.

The Republican is Garrett County's first established newspaper.

DIED.

ANDREW PIFER

Andrew Pifer, aged 86, died at his home in Morgantown, West Va., on Friday morning, January 1. He was the eldest brother of Mr. John Pifer, of Oakland. He is also survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters. Funeral services were held at Stemple Ridge, near Aurora, W. Va., on Sunday afternoon at one o'clock.

JAMES YOUNKIN

James Younkin, 44 years old, formerly of Grantsville, died Saturday night at the Woodmen of the World Hospital, San Antonio, Tex. He was a son of Cyrus and Ellen Younkin and is survived by his wife and seven children, who reside in Akron, O., and by four brothers and two sisters. The remains will be sent to Grantsville for interment.

MISS ELLA BEVANS

Miss Ella Bevans, 83 years old, daughter of the late Walter and Martha Bevans, died Saturday evening at her apartments in the Victoria Hotel, Grantsville. She was born on the Ridgeley farm, about three miles from Grantsville and was a descendant of Jacob Ridgeley, pioneer settler of Garrett county. Miss Bevans was the surviving member of a family of five children. Funeral services were held at 9:00 o'clock Tuesday morning at St. Peter's Catholic church, Grantsville, the services being conducted by Rev. Fr. Cuthbert. Interment was made in the Ridgeley family cemetery.

ALLEN FORMAN

Allen Forman was born at Brandonville, Preston county, W. Va., on May 30, 1845, and died at Morgantown Saturday, January 2, 1932, aged 86 years, 7 months, and 3 days. He was the first of five children born to Richard and Nancy Fike Forman.

He was married to Caroline Forquar at Brandonville on May 30, 1872, and to this union six children were born, Alleta B., widow of the late John C. Mayer; Charles H., Arthur D., Mary M., Nancy and Harry, the first four of whom survive him, Nancy having died in 1918, and Harry in 1907. He is also survived by his brother, Lewis J. Forman, Petersburg, W. Va., former State Senator; and five grandchildren, Eleanor, Erma, Nancy and Fred Forman, and Lewis Jones, of Oakland.

He was a members of the M. E. church, first at Brandonville, and later at Amboy. He moved to Amboy in 1873 and was engaged in farming and the timber business. He served for 18 years as a member of the Preston county court, and was a school trustee for a long period of time.

An Interesting Fact

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN MARYLAND.

This is the third of a series of articles on the Roman Catholic Church in the early days of Maryland as a Colony. The fourth and last article on the subject will appear in a later issue.

When William and Mary were proclaimed successors to the throne of England in 1668, Maryland, alone of the Colonies, failed to issue a proclamation and declare its allegiance to the new rulers. This was not a deliberate or intentional act of lese majesty. But, coupled with the persistency of Lord Baltimore's enemies at home seems to have the irony of fate.

A messenger was dispatched with an order to the Privincial Council to proclaim the new sovereigns, but the messenger died en route. Thus an opportunity was created and promptly seized upon by the dissatisfied elements in the Colony, who preceeded to create additional trouble for the proprietary. This finally resulted in the overthrow of the proprietary government.

Propaganda of an incidious character was broadcast. A conspiracy was hatched against the Roman Catholics by the circulation of false reports to the effect that they had joined the Indians in an unholy alliance to harass and massacre the English. These rumore were soon run to earth and a number of the more promient Protestants declared that the alarm caused thereby was "but a sleeveless fear and imagination, fomented by an artifice of some evil-minded persons who are studious and ready to take all occasions of raising disturbances for their own private and malicious interest."

The leader of "these ill-minded persons" was one John Goode, of whom it was said, "He had been a Roman Catholic and then a Protestant; once a clergyman, and now a blatant and blasphemous atheist." These false rumors were laid to rest in 1689.

Then about 1697 there was a renewed (or perhaps continued) agitation against the Roman Catholics. The radical Protestants, then in control, proceeded to restrict, not only public religious exercises of the priests, but also the civil privileges of Catholic laymen, and to limit the immigration of Irish Catholics. Roman Catholic lawyers were, for a time, prohibited from practicing in Maryland courts.

By an act of 1704, Roman Catholics were forbidden to instruct children, other than their own, and an attempt was made to induce Catholic parents to place their children under Protestant teachers.

NIGHT COUGHING QUICKLY STOPPED

In a few minutes after taking Thoxine, a doctor's famous prescription, your cough stops. It acts on a new principle—relieves throat irritation and goes direct to the internal cause not reached by ordinary cough remedies.

Most coughs are caused by an irritated throat. Thoxine stops these at once. Safe for the whole family—guaranteed no dope. Money back if not satisfied. 35c. Gonder's Drug Store and all other good drug stores. —Advertisement 47, 1.

Automobile Responsibility Law Now In Effect in Maryland.

Owners and operators of automobiles in the State of Maryland stand a chance of losing their operator's card under provisions of the Maryland motor financial responsibility act, which became effective on January 1.

Under the terms of this law, a driver who has had part in an accident and against whom a court judgment for damages stands, will have but 30 day in which to pay the damages thus awarded against him. Failing to pay the damages the driver must either secure insurance, depending in amount upon the damages or be ruled off the road and his license to drive revoked.

Drunken drivers, hit-and-run drivers and drivers responsible for a fatality will have their licenses suspended until they are bonded or insured and have satisfied the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles that the return of their operator's card is warranted.

85 Per Cent of Auto Taxes In County Have Been Paid

Taxes for 1932 on approximately 2,500 of the 3,000 automobiles in Garrett county have been paid, according the County Treasurer Jesse J. Ashby. This means that 80 to 85 percent of the total number in the county are eligible to use the roads.

As a result of a final rush for 1932 license plates, the number issued by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles shows an increase of about 5,000 over that for the corresponding period of 1931. Approximately 230,000 tags have been issued.

There are about 335,000 automobile owners registered in Maryland, but only about two-thirds of that number register in the distribution period.

A large number of those who fail to register before the first of the year live in rural districts and make a practice of putting up their machines in the winter months when driving conditions are bad, it was explained.

On Monday, December 28, 17,080 tags were distributed, the greatest number ever issued in one day by Mr. Baughman's office.

BAYARD EAGLES DEFEAT OAKLAND INDEPENDENTS

Win 21-12 From Local Team At Bayard Yesterday Evening

The Bayard Eagles defeated the Oakland Independent basketball quint on the Bayard floor last night, 21 to 12. In the first half the Oakland team was unable to become accustomed to the low ceiling of the court and could not penetrate the defense of the Bayard five, and trailed 12 to 3 at half time.

In the second half, however, they held the Eagles on even terms, both sides getting nine points. Blackburn, with five field goals, was the high man for Bayard, while McComas made nine of Oakland's twelve points.

Tonight the Oakland team meets the Frostburg State Normal five at Frostburg, and will play the Bayard Eagles a return game in Oakland next Friday evening in the High School auditorium.

The line-up and summary:

Oakland—12		Bayard—21
Sollars	F	Clarke
Elias	F	Blackburn
McComas	C	Funk
Nally	G	Frost
Hanst	G	N. Renn

Substitutions — Oakland, Glotfelty, Stanton, Graves; Bayard, Nine, L. Renn and Neil.

Field Goals—Oakland, McComas 4, Graves 1. Bayard, Blackburn 5, Funk 1, L. Renn 1, N. Renn 2. Foul goals—Oakland, Hanst 1-4, McComas 1-3, Stanton 0-2. Bayard, Blackburn 2-6, Frost 1-1, Funk 0-1. Referee J. Casteel.

Aurora Youth Killed in Coasting Accident Sunday.

Richard Stemple, 9 years old, son of Jesse L. Stemple, merchant at Aurora, West Va., 12 miles South of Oakland, on Route 50, was killed Sunday afternoon when crushed by an overturning automobile. This is said to have been the first coasting accident of the winter in West Virginia.

R. G. Harper, 44, agent for a Martinsburg fruit broker, driver of the car, was absolved from all blame by authrities who made an investigation of the accident.

It was stated by eye-witnesses to the tragedy that the boy sought to coast on the ice-covered Northwestern Turnpike near Aurora when Mr. Harper approached him in his automobile. In his effort to miss striking the boy, who evidently had lost control of his sled, Mr. Harper drove off the road, but the car skidded after the front wheels were off the pavement and overturning, caught the youth beneath it and causing his instant death.

Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Carmel at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with interment in the church cemetery. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stemple, one brother Clifton, and two sisters, Josephine and Louise, all at home.

Pythian Sisters Install Officers For 1932

The following officers were installed at the regular meeting of the Pythian Sisters on Monday evening: Mrs. Helen Criss, guard; Mrs. Inez Kildow, protector; Miss Jane Mason, mistress of R. C.; Mrs. Minnie Sisk, mistress of finance; Miss Theresa Welling, manager; Mrs. Mabel Teats, excellent junior; Mrs. Edna Whorton, excellent senior; Mrs. Mae Lee Mann, most excellent chief; Mary Hinebaugh, trustee; Miss Elizabeth Leary, representative; Mrs. Clara B. Stuck, alternate; Mrs. Grace Riley, press correspondent; Mrs. Grace Riley, pianist.

To Receive Awards in F. F. A. Contests

Thirty-six members of the F. F. A., representing the thirteen hundred boys enrolled for Vocational Agriculture in 48 Maryland High Schools, will be awarded medals in the State F. F. A. Project contest at the State Farm Bureau meeting, to be held today at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, in Baltimore. Five are from Garrett county.

Oliver Fike, Friendsville, will receive a bronze medal for third place in the sheep project contest.

Wilburn Beuhl, Accident, will be awarded a bronze medal as third place winner in the baby beef project contest.

Willard Hauser, Grant Hardesty and Boyd Hardesty, all of Oakland, will receive medals as winners in the potato project contest.

MARRIED

Hone—Platter—Miss Freda Platter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Platter, of Addison, Pa., and Mr. Harry Hone, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hone, of Selbysport, Md., were married in Oakland, on December 25. Mrs. Hone is a teacher in the primary grade school at Somerfield, Pa., and Mr. Hone is employed on the farm of his father. After a brief wedding trip to points in Virginia they returned to Selbysport, where they will reside in the home of the groom's parents until spring.

Operated Upon for Appendicitis

George O. Wahl, one of the operators at the power house of the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Corporation at Sines, was taken to Cumberland on Friday morning by C. E. MacMurray, where he was operated upon for appendicitis the following morning. The operation was successful and the patient is recovering nicely.

MT. LAKE PARK

Death of Jack McGuffin

When Jack McGuffin died, Loch Lynn lost a good citizen. He and Martha, his wife, were the only colored people living in this immediate community. For the past forty years, before becoming physically incapacitated, Jack worked for many of the summer and all-year residents of the two towns, and he always did his work well. He took much pride in being counted a good worker. He was a member of the Baptist church, kindly, gentle, unasuming and a devoted husband. His widow, Martha, and one brother, Wade, of Wheeling, survive.

He was born in Eastern Virginia, August 15, 1867, and died December 30, 1931. The funeral was held from his late home, Rev. Bailey officiating. Interment was made at Pleasant Valley, January 1, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Warning to Peddlers

Mayor Hardesty, of Loch Lynn, desires through this column to warn all persons that Section 4 of Chapter 5 of the ordinances of the town will be rigidly enforced. This section provides that no person shall hawk or peddle goods, wares or merchandise (unless made or produced by themselves) without first having applied for and taken out a license. Information has been received that itinerant peddlers are more or less active in the community.

The Park Institute

The citizens of Loch Lynn and the Park have already subscribed a substantial sum towards the budget of the Mountain Lake Park Institute, which contemplates putting on a rather pretentious program here next summer. It is proposed to make this a permanent institution and will go a long ways in rehabilitating the Park and add to the assets of the county.

It is gratifying that this immediate community, in spite of the depression and unemployment, is meeting the situation with real spirit and enthusiasm.

In addition to those who have subscribed, others have promised to put their names on the dotted line.

Resolution in Memory of S. C. Mosser.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst Mr. S. C. Mosser, a consistent, faithful and devout member of the Adult Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school of Mountain Lake Park; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the members of the class do deplore his loss and testify to the worth, fealty and constancy of Brother Mosser as a member of the church, of the Adult Bible Class and as a citizen of the community.

Our sincere sympathy is hereby extended to his bereaved widow and members of his family who remain to mourn their loss.

ADULT BIBLE CLASS.
By Committee.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, JANUARY 14, 1932. NUMBER 48.

FIRE COMPANY RESPONDS TO 33 FIRES DURING 1931

Only One Fire in Corporate Limits of Oakland Gained Headway Over The Firemen

MT. LAKE, CRELLIN AIDED

Thirty-three fire alarms in Oakland, Mountain Lake Park, Crellin and vicinity were answered during the past year by the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, resulting in small losses except in calls from out-of-town where the blazes had gained too great headway before the department was notified, according to a report furnished The Republican by George Kerins, fire chief.

Practically all the fires in the corporate limits of Oakland were extinguished with small loss, the Waingold garage blaze causing the most concern on account of the high wind prevailing at the time and the inflammable contents of the building.

Many of the calls answered were on account of grass fires, several of which burned over considerable areas. Eighteen calls were answered in Oakland and the immediate community; five in Mountain Lake Park; three in Crellin, and seven at Deer Park, Rowlesburg, West Va., and other places.

Five fires were reported in the county to which the local fire company was not called.

The calls answered by the local department included the following:

Residence of Clyde Gnegy, Mountain Lake Park, January 5; entirely destroyed.

Two-apartment dwelling at Crellin, on January 8, occupied by William Thomas; damage slight.

Flue fire at home of Mrs. Sara Lawton, Oakland, January 30; no damage.

Grass fire, East Oakland, March 4.

Flue fire, home of Mrs. D. E. Offutt, March 8; no damage.

Furnace room, Frantz Hotel, March 13; no damage.

Flue fire, Hinebaugh's Recreation Hall, March 17; no damage.

Residence of Grover Browning, near King's Hill, destroyed; March 25.

Four calls on April 13 included a grass fire, Columbia Hill, Mt. Lake Park; store house of P. K. Adams, Crellin; woods fire at Deer Park in afternoon and a recall in the evening.

Brush fire near home of Paul Mitchell on Route 37 north of Oakland; April 14.

Grass fire near residence of W. R. Offutt, April 16.

Grass fire, Oak and Third streets, April 17.

Woods fire, King's Run, Route 37, April 18, serious.

Woods fire, Mt. Lake at Crystal Spring, on April 19, and a recall on April 20. On April 20, also were woods fires near Crellin and Oakland.

Barn on Mrs. Allen's farm, Route 37, north of Oakland, on June 14, as result of lightning; slight damage.

Home of Fred. Reis, Deer Park, flue fire, on June 28; no damage.

Standard Oil tanks at Rowlesburg, W. Va., on August 1, when valuable assistance was given.

Truman West property on Railroad street, October 15; interior partlally destroyed.

Hall dwelling, corner Alder and Fourth streets, Oakland, October 23, damage slight.

False alarm from Frantz Hotel, October 27.

Forest fire near Merrill farm, north of Oakland, November 4.

Waingold garage destroyed November 13.

Summer residence of Mrs. Harry Brann, Loch Lynn, November 21, entirely destroyed.

Flue fire, home of Joseph Wolfe, Oak street, December 7; flue fire at home of C. Wright, Deer Park, same day at noon; no damage in either case.

NuWay Laundry, Oakland, December 15, no damage.

Five Other Fires

Five other fires were reported to The Republican and included Essex sedan of David Hardesty, consumed by fire after being stolen on March 28.

Residence of Thomas Davis, Kitzmiller, destroyed on July 12.

Residence of Mrs. Mary Pysell, near Deer Park, destroyed on July 21.

Residence of John O'Brien farm, on Deer Park-Sand Flat road, destroyed on October 14.

Large horse barn of H. J. Spelcher, Accident, destroyed on October 30.

The Relief Committee needs more donations. Help them if you can.

Maple Sugar Producers Have Final Meeting Tonight

The last of a series of meetings for Garrett county maple sugar and maple syrup producers will be held at Grantsville tonight.

At the meetings at Bittinger and Ryan's Glade on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, a large number attended and much interest was shown, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

Discussion was favorable for continuing the grading and inspection of the syrup and in establishing standard grades. Plans were also made to place smaller containers of syrup on the market.

Care of maple groves was discussed by Richard Kilbourne, extension forester.

MORE PERSONS ARE ASKED TO HELP IN RELIEF WORK

Staple Goods Much In Demand; 20 Families Aided Last Week

The relief committee of the Oakland districts has aided twenty families during the past week, according to a report made by Rev. D. C. Trimble. Ten of these had not previously been aided. The families represented 64 persons in all.

Food and clothing are distributed in exchange for labor wherever possible. All aid is given only after an investigation.

"It is through the help and cooperation of the people of this district that the relief committee is able to carry on," Rev. Trimble stated. "Contributions in the past have been generous, and it is earnestly hoped that more persons will assist in this way. Staple goods, like flour, sugar and beans are much in demand and there is a great need for children's underwear."

Contributions received during the past week follow: Miss Fulk's class, Lutheran Sunday school, fruit and food; Mrs. Leathers, clothing; Monday Night bridge club, money.

The offices of the committee are open each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon between 2:30 and 4:30, and are in the basement of the Naylor building, Wilson and Liberty streets. At other times contributions will be received at Naylor's store.

OAKLAND A. A. TO MEET BAYARD IN RETURN GAME

Independents Will Attempt to Avenge Recent Defeat Friday

Oakland Independent basketball team will attempt to avenge its recent defeat when the players meet the Bayard Eagles at the Oakland High School auditorium on Friday evening at 8:15. Bayard defeated Oakland last week 21-12 at Bayard, and the locals will be anxious for a victory.

Win Over Frostburg Normal

Oakland defeated Art Slocum's Frostburg Normal team last Thursday evening at Frostburg, 25 to 18, in a hard-fought contest. Mezick was high point man for Frostburg with two field goals and two fouls, while McComas scored 15 of Oakland's 25 points to lead the entire list of scorers. Except for one short period when Frostburg nosed ahead 13 to 12, Oakland remained in the lead. A return game will be played in Oakland in the near future.

Oakland—25		Frostburg—18
Pollock	F	Thomas
Glotfelty	F	Mezick
McComas	C	Forrest
Nally	G	Footen
Hanst	G	Couchman

Substitutions—Oakland, Elias, Sollars, Graves, Stanton. Frostburg, Lace and Jenkins.

Field goals—Oakland, Glotfelty 1, Stanton 1, McComas 7, Hanst 2. Frostburg, Thomas 1, Mezick 2, Jenkins 1, Footen 1, Couchman 1.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 0-1, Stanton 1-2, McComas 1-6, Hanst 1-3. Frostburg, Mezick 2-4, Forrest 0-1, Jenkins 1-2, Footen 1-2, Couchman 2-4.

To Hold Examination for Postmaster in Oakland

To fill a vacancy in the position of postmaster in Oakland, the United States Civil Service Commission has announced, at the request of the Postmaster-General, and in accordance with an order of the President, an open competitive examination. The salary is $2,500.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the secretary of the local board of Civil Service examiners at the postoffice in Oakland or from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

The position becomes vacant February 29, when the present term of Dr. Webster Ravenscroft expires.

IT WAS A COLD DAY HERE JUST TWENTY YEARS AGO

Mercury Dropped to Forty Below, Weather Records Show

Twenty years ago, to be exact, Saturday, January 13, 1912, it was a cold day in Oakland, the government thermometer at Webers registered 40 degrees below zero. The Republican, in its issue of January 18, 1912, carried the following story:

"When Oakland awoke last Saturday morning her citizens were made keenly aware that it was not a summer day by a whole lot, but the surprise did not come until the thermometers had been read which showed the mercury standing at 40 degrees below zero—emphatically the coldest day ever experienced by our 'oldest citizens.' This record was made at 7:15 at Webers'.

"Much suffering was experienced by railroad and other men who were compelled to be out of doors. Trains on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad ran from two to ten hours late and in some cases freight trains here in the mountain section were brought to a standstill owing to the fact that the locomotives froze to the rails."

It was 18 degrees below zero at Cumberland and 30 at Frostburg on the same day. The intense cold followed a terrific blizzard which centered in Chicago and the middle west. It was declared the worst in many years.

Yesterday, January 13, 1932, at the same time of day that it registered 40 below twenty years ago, the thermometer at Webers' read 63 degrees above zero, a difference of 103 degrees.

$14,000,000 IS SPENT ON MARYLAND ROADS IN 1931

Expenditures Cover 3,500 Miles of Extension and Improvement

The extension and improvement of the approximately 3,500 miles of State roads in Maryland called for the expenditure of over $14,000,000 during 1931, H. D. Williar, Jr., chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, has stated.

Some of the $14,000,000 was spent for new construction of roads, some for the improvement of roads already laid, and a part was used for the bridge program, which includes the work done on the elimination of grade crossings.

New roads laid down include 132 miles of concrete, 62 miles in gravel, 54 miles in macadam and 3 miles in sheet asphalt. In addition about 192 miles of macadam roads and 159 miles of gravel roads were surfaced treated, while over 73 miles of highway were widened by the addition of concrete shoulders in addition to the resurfacing.

More than twenty miles of shade trees have been planted along various roads in cooperation with the Maryland Department of Forestry and the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland.

The work of 1931 completed, Mr. Williar estimates that the commission will have available approximately $12,400,000 for the improvements in 1932.

Garrett County Committee for Washington Bicentennial Is Named

Walter W. Dawson has been appointed chairman of the Garrett county committee for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, 1732 to 1932, and twenty-nine others have been named as members of the committee, as follows:

Mayor Grover C. Stemple, W. McCulloh Brown, C. McHenry Howard, Joseph E. Harned, Rev. David C. Trimble, Fred. A. Thayer, Edward Offutt, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Miss Lottie Loar, Miss Frances Hamill, Dr. Henry W. McComas, William O. Davis, Benjamin H. Sincell, George A. Fraley, George D. Browning, Franklin E. Rathbun, Delbert Davis and Miss Thekla Fundenberg, all of Oakland; Charles W. Ream, Crellin; Henry M. Spelcher, Accident; William A. Smith, Hoyes; Frederick Fox, Friendsville; Nathan R. Selby, Selbysport; Arthur G. Cullers, Gormania; Mayor Thrasher and Patrick J. Garrett, Deer Park; Mayor MacClellan Clayton and Mrs. W. D. Grimes, Mountain Lake Park; C. E. Ellithorp, Bittinger.

The above committee was selected and named by J. Alexis Shriver, of Bel Air, State chairman of the Bicentennial committee. Other members will probably be named to represent the Grantsville section of the county.

OFFICIAL REPORT MADE ON CATTLE T. B. TEST

Garrett County Is Given Accredited Rating by Department

That Garrett county was an accredited one in its dairy cattle industry, was announced this morning by John H. Carter, county agent.

This announcement was made following the receipt of the first official report on the cattle tubercular test which was conducted in the county the past summer. The report was sent to Mr. Carter by Dr. E. B. Symonds, chief inspector, at the request of James B. George, Director of Livestock Sanitary Service for the University of Maryland, and shows the following figures:

Number of herds tested	2,201
Number of cattle tested	14,621
Number of reactors found	33

On a retest of infected herds there were 24 involved. The number of cattle tested in these herds was 209, and only one reactor was found.

This is the first and only official report, and stories published in other papers prior to this date are incorrect and unofficial, it was stated by Mr. Carter.

The fact that the county was accredited, beginning January 1, 1932, means that the dairymen of the county, by applying to the department, will be able to receive a certificate of health for their herds, which will be valid until the next test of cattle, according to Mr. Carter.

CHESTNUT GROVE LEADS DECEMBER ATTENDANCE

Has Percentage of 99.7—Kitzmiller Heads High Schools

Chestnut Grove, with 99.7 percent, led all one-teacher schools in the county in attendance for December of 1931, according to a bulletin issued by John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer attached to the office of the Board of Education in Oakland.

Loch Lynn led the two-teacher schools with 97 percent; Shallmar topped the graded schools with 97.3; while Kitzmiller headed the high schools with 94.9.

One-teacher schools above 97.5 percent included Chestnut Grove, Peerless, Bethel, Dorsey, Gorman, Bear Creek, Bernard, Mt. Zion, Broadford, Mason, Lageer, Winding Ridge and Oak Hill.

Three two-teacher schools were above 95 percent, Loch Lynn, Strawberry Hill and Swanton. Four graded schools were above 95, Shallmar, Crellin, Kitzmiller and Kempton, while Kitzmiller was the only high school above the county standard of 94 percent.

Oakland High Quint Wins Over Friendsville Boys' Team

The Oakland High School boys' basketball team defeated Friendsville High at the Oakland school auditorium last night, 14 to 9 in a fast game which was featured by close guarding. Joe Rice led the scoring for Oakland. Other players included Ray, Bittner, Paul Dawson and Peddicord, with Richard Wolf substituting.

The Oakland High girls lost to the Friendsville lassies 27 to 17. The margin of victory was gained in the last three minutes of play, which up to that time had been closely contested.

To Hold Examination for Appointment to Service Academies of U. S.

Charles J. Newman, local secretary of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, will hold an examination on Saturday, January 16, for candidates for appointment for the United States Military and United State Naval Academies so that the representatives in Congress may be able to make their recommendations intelligently.

Red Cross Roll Call Goes Over Four Hundred Mark.

The Red Cross annual Roll Call membership went over the four hundred mark when five new names were turned in to the county chairman. This makes a total of $402 raised, and Kitzmiller section has not yet reported, according to the chairman. The total is already $13.00 more than was raised during the drive last year.

The new names are Miss Ruth Spelcher, Mrs. H. J. Black, W. J. Glenn, Friendsville; Miss Minnie Shaffer and Rev. W. E. Waybright, Red House.

National membership in the American Red Cross in 1932 promises to exceed that of last year.

To Address Ministerial Association

Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Oakland, will be the chief speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Mountain Top Ministerial Association to be held in the Masonic club rooms, First National Bank, on Monday morning.

Rev. Dawson will speak on "Crime, its Causes and Cures." The speaker was for two years chaplain of the West Virginia penitentiary, Moundsville, and had ample opportunity to study crime conditions.

TABLELAND SECRETARY IS GATHERING DATA OF AREA

Association Hopes To Receive Aid in Advertising Program

Following the meeting of the committee from Oakland with Dr. Reitel and the council for Greater Pennsylvania, held in Pittsburgh recently, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, secretary of the Tableland Association, spent Friday in Confluence and Somerset with Mr. J. W. Watson, president of the Tableland Association, gathering data to support the appeal of the association for a preliminary survey of the tableland area with the hope that it may be made Project No. 2 of the Greater Pennsylvania Council program.

On Saturday a summary of agriculture statistics, highways, points of tourist interest, hotel centers, recreational opportunities, fishing streams, hunting fields and much additional data was sent in to the Harrisburg office.

"It is indeed hard to estimate what it will mean to this great plateau area if the advertising and support of such a strong organization can be obtained," Rev. Middaugh said.

The Allegheny Tableland Association is concentrating every effort toward the development of the natural resources of this area and to bring the attention of metropolitan Pittsburgh to the opportunities which this area has to offer them.

"Every public spirited citizen should support the Allegheny Tableland Association by membership and personal influence," Rev. Middaugh concluded.

RETURNS FOR CHRISTMAS SEALS MUST BE MADE NOW

$177.88 Has Been Turned In To Date, Chairman Says

Every man, woman or organization in Garrett county who received Christmas seals last month must return either the seals or the money for the same, it was emphasized here today by Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, chairman for the tuberculosis seal sale.

"It is impossible for the committee to make up a report to national headquarters until this is done," she said.

The amount returned to the chairman thus far as a result of the sale is $177.88, which is practically the same as last year.

There are 27 active cases of tuberculosis in the county, with 108 contacts, and there are also 85 arrested cases. "All have been examined and have had medical care through the sale of these seals," Mrs. Sincell concluded.

Fire Department Called

The local fire department was called on Friday morning when a flue fire occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford in the Park. When the fire trucks reached East Oakland they were turned back, a telephone message having brought the information that the fire had been extinguished without having done any material damage to the property.

January Days, 1932

At noon yesterday Harry L. Stemple found a blooming dandelion in the lawn at his home on Second street.

Yesterday afternoon the government thermometer at Webers' registered 68, the highest reading for January since 1914. In January of that year the mercury read 75, while in January of 1906 it reached 72.

Yesterday on the east side of a residence just north of town a thermometer read 86 in the sun.

Yesterday morning along the Pacific Coast in Southern California it was 40 degrees above zero.

Meetings are Being Planned by Mountain Lake Park Institute

Meetings for maple sugar and maple syrup producers and for potato growers are being planned by the Mountain Lake Park Institute in developing this area, it has been announced.

The two State Extension services have fully accepted the cooperative agreement and the outline of the program for spring and summer is being prepared by the director.

A maple sugar producers' banquet will be held the last week in January, which will be in the nature of a get-together, where the producers from various counties in Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia will come to know each other and talk over their problems.

In February a similar banquet of the potato growers will be held.

"The growing of potatoes in the Tableland is becoming one of its chief interests," Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director, stated. "It seems important that the leading growers develop a friendship with each other and come together in fraternal meetings where they may exchange ideas for mutual help."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(©, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for January 17

JESUS AND NICODEMUS

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells How Much God Loves Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Answer to a Ruler's Question.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Beginnings of the Christian Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The New Birth.

I. The History of Nicodemus (vv. 1, 2, cf. 7:45-52; 19:38-42).

The lesson today has its peculiar significance in the light of Nicodemus' station in life. He was a learned rabbi, a doctor of the law, and presumably a man of good character. His coming by night indicates his timidity. Like Joseph of Arimathea, he was afraid to espouse openly the cause of the new teacher of Galilee. Though timid, as an honest man, he investigated and obtained first-hand information. Because of this information, he uttered the brave words in the Sanhedrin against judging a man before hearing him (John, 7:45-52) and rendered loving service at the Lord's tomb (John 19:38-42).

II. Jesus' Discourse to Nicodemus on the New Birth (vv. 3-17).

1. The necessity of the new birth (vv. 3-7). If one is ever to see or enter the kingdom of God, he must be born again. There can be no personal choice in the matter. Regeneration is the first demand the gospel of Christ makes upon man. The reasons for this are:

a. The kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, therefore there must be a spiritual birth in order to enter it (v. 3). As we enter the physical kingdom by a natural birth, so we enter the kingdom of God by a supernatural birth.

b. The nature which is ours through the natural birth is radically and essentially bad (v. 6, cf. Gal. 5:19-21). That which is born of the flesh is flesh. In the Galatian text Paul gives a catalogue of the works of the flesh. The flesh cannot be improved (Jer. 13:23). In order to enter into the kingdom of heaven there must be a nature fitted for heaven. There is nothing that can be substituted for the new birth. Men today are trying to substitute morality and education for the new birth. Nicodemus possessed these, yet Christ declared that he needed more.

2. The mystery of the new birth (vv. 8-13). Though the new birth is mysterious, its results are definite. This mystery is illustrated by the wind. We cannot discern from whence it cometh or wither it goeth, but we know by its effects that it blows. The fruit of the life demonstrates its nature, whether it is heavenly or carnal. We need not to be told that we have had a physical birth for our bodies with their various faculties in exercise prove it. Even so, the presence within us of a nature which has no affinity for the things of the world, a strong affection for God and a disposition to yield prompt obedience to his commands proves our birth from above. Just as the tree is known by its fruit, so tastes, desires, and ambitions prove the quality of our nature.

3. The ground upon which the new birth rests (vv. 14, 15). Christ's atoning death on the cross makes regeneration possible. He took the place of sinners. His infinite merit was placed to their account. He suffered in the sinner's stead. Just as the Israelites had only to look upon the brazen serpent in the wilderness, so the sinner needs only to look upon Christ uplifted on the cross (Num. 21:4-9; John 12:32; II Cor. 5:21; I Pet. 2:24). Our salvation cost on the part of God the giving up of his only begotten Son, and on the part of Christ the suffering and shame of the cross.

4. For whom the new birth was provided (vv. 16, 17). "Whosoever believeth in him." These verses give in a condensed form the whole plan of salvation. Observe:

a. Its source—"God so loved."

b. Its ground—the death of Christ—"He gave."

c. Its recipients—"Whosoever."

d. Its condition—"Believeth in him."

e. Its results—"Should not perish—have everlasting life."

III. Man's Attitude Toward Christ (vv. 18-21).

1. Some believe and are saved. Those who believe are now free from condemnation.

2. Some will not believe and are therefore resting under the condemnation of God. The awful sin which causes men to be eternally lost is unbelief in Christ. The cause of their unbelief in him is their love of sin.

Work and Worry

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy: you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Overcome Difficulties

"The soul that the Holy Spirit is guiding will be taught to expect difficulties, and to patiently plod on and overcome them."

She Finds Romance With a Capital "R"

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

CARRIE JONES sat in a golden oak rocker in her dull little bedroom and stared at the sum total of her savings neatly set down in her bank book. The account was neither appalling for its size, nor yet was it meager. It ran into three figures.

"That," said Carrie to herself, with considerable bitterness, "represents the years of my youth. I've scrimped and saved—for what? To lay aside something for my old age in which I've no interest. It's right now, this very minute, that I could appreciate spending it while I have some energy left in my old bones!"

Carrie was not so old as her words implied. In fact, she wasn't much beyond thirty which, with every generation, becomes less of a dreaded landmark, but she could foresee the approach of middle age and she had never had a fling. Fifteen years of typewriting letters dealing with the coal business don't offer much inspiration, or opportunity for "flings."

"I have a great mind," went on Carrie thoughtfully, "to resign my position and go on a spree. As long as my money holds out. Then I'll get another job and there'll still be time to save for decrepitude. Now I wonder just where is the most romantic spot in the world, for that is where I am going!"

By chance, her eyes rested on the little shelf of canned goods which she kept on hand to supplement her dairy lunch meals, and a very gay label caught her attention. "Hawaiian Sliced Pineapples."

If the Tidewater Anthracite and Bituminous Coal company felt any pangs at losing Carrie they successfully concealed them, paid her salary to date, and sent up to the business college for a successor. Carrie, when their doors closed behind her, forgot them as thoroughly as they did her.

Two weeks later she stood in the bow of the Matsonia watching the rising headlands of Diamond Head, and of all those who hung over the rail as the boat docked none was more prepared to be thrilled than Carrie Jones, and no one was more cruelly disappointed.

Why, Honolulu was exactly like any city of the states, with huge buildings, bustling thoroughfares, taxis and limousines.

After allowing herself to be taxied to what she judged a reasonably priced hotel, she found herself in a room equipped with furniture from Grand Rapids, a large painting of "Niagara in Winter," and two windows which looked down upon a replica of any large city's "Broadway" and across at a building displaying numerous doctors' and dentists' signs. She unpacked her crushable clothes, went down to a meal in which the only unfamiliar food was Algaroba pears, and listened to an orchestra playing the latest song-hits with never a ukelele among them.

But it is only fair to say that as the days passed Carrie found some of the things she had hoped for. True, what she had pictured as golden beaches did in some cases turn out to be sands as black, if cleaner than the anthracite of her old office samples, and the thunder of the surf soon grew to be merely a monotonous thudding that lulled her to sleep. Daily, however, she marveled at the wealth of foliage. Yet she never quite got over the feeling that she had not found romance with a capital R.

She determined finally on a trip on the little inter-island steamer, cherishing faint and daring hopes of a possible shipwreck with a gallant rescue or even temporary marooning on a not too deserted island. Without mishap, however, she landed at Hilo with a little group of tourist school teachers and with them planned an automobile trip to Kilauea.

It was as she stood at the end of the road and watched the encroaching lava that she heard some one at her side, and turning, looked up into a pair of pleasant eyes belonging to a sandy-haired young man she had casually noticed on the steamer.

"I don't suppose," he said with a smile, "that even on the brink of a fiery pit one can break the conventions, but we have really met before. I am William Hamre of the Hamre Screw company and you took charge of an order of coal for our plant. Of course, you don't remember."

It was pleasant to meet some one from home, and Carrie responded cordially.

A week later as they were being shown the workings of a sugar cane factory, William managed an aside to Carrie. "I'm coming to call on you this evening to ask you to marry me. Wait. Don't answer now. At eight o'clock."

After he had gone that night bearing Carrie's promise to marry him, Carrie laughed whimsically.

She married William the day that they sailed for home and as they stood at the steamer's side watching the preparations for departure she heard a voice behind her and recognized it as that of one of the school teachers, talking with some new acquaintance.

"My dear, the most romantic thing. Came way out here and met a man she had known at home! Think of it! They fell in love on the brink of Kilauea!"

William felt a hand slip into his.

"There's always romance in love, I guess," said Carrie.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Today (Tuesday) is the 2,426,720th day since the commencement of the Julian Period, January 12, on the world calendar, the year 5693 for the Hebrews, the year 2685 since the founding of Rome, 1351 for the Mohammedans, 2592 for Japanese, twenty years ago it was January 13, at 40 degrees below zero, but according to the weather calendar which measures my spring wanderlust, it must be July the 15th. And while you're thinking of something to be thankful for, be grateful it isn't 40 below today, or Harland Jones' thermometer might burst again, or Doc Broadwater might get his face frozen from an all-night trip to visit some patient, or some of you might have to spend an evening at home.

Get Some Credit, Anyway

Among my many fan mail letters this morning was the following from G. Howie Stoops, of Squatter's Corner, District No. 3:

Dear Scoop:—I read your column regularly by borrowing my neihbor's paper, like a lot of others are doing, and have become ashamed of myself. I intend to subscribe, as all good citizens of the county should do. A lot of people may criticise your column but I'll give you credit for not bringing up the old petrified wisecracks. There are still some people who tell jokes and make wisecracks on subjects such as these, and slow torture is too good for them: Noah, Jonah, Florida, St. Peter, Scotchman, saxophones, prohibition, pedestrians, mothers-in-law, back-seat drivers, husbands getting home at 2:00 a. m., absent-minded college professors, buttons in the church collection, men looking on the floor for collar-buttons, ladies not wishing to tell their ages and plumbers forgetting their tools. I'm glad you are steering clear of these.

Thanks, Howie. Bend over again sometime.

Sometime when you are in an especially good humor I want you to come to Archibaldson's house and take a shower bath. If you are still in a good humor when you finish, nothing can throw you from the pearly gates of optimism.

Pardon the personal experience of bathing, but you should know that I lather myself well at stated periods. And what is more annoying than to be well lathered and just in the act of stepping under the shower to once more become revealed in birthday clothes when the spiggot goes burgle, burgle, slup, ar-r-r-up, and you know that either Mrs. Archibaldson is drawing water for the dishes or Archie himself is filling up the furnace boiler. The most you can get out of the spiggot in times like these is pfut, pfut, drop—pfut, pfut, pfut, drop—with a whole lot more pfut pfuts than drops. To rap on the pipes would be very tactless as nothing delights Archibaldson more than seeing me surrounded by suds, foaming at the mouth, waiting for the fountain of youth to spring again from the sprayer.

Another delightful feeling is to be under the shower with the proper mixture of cold and hot, and to have the hot spiggot opened wide downstairs. But I'm getting bids now from Plumber Stemple on the cost of installing a sprinkling can(large size) with an automatic tipping arrangement. Then when Archie or Mrs. Archie get smart, I can still remove the suds—regardless.

They say there is some contention among the Owls and their wives. A lot of them don't seem to want to dress as Amos and Andy's.

BITTINGER

We smile when we have oodles of boodle to spend
And need not cut down our rations,
But, oh, how we howl and sputter and scowl
When prosperity takes her vacation.

We have moved well into the new year with splendid winter weather, but no snow of any consequence has yet fallen.

Messrs. Simon and Frank Brenneman motored to Oakland on business Monday and again Tuesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bowser spent Tuesday in Oakland on matters of business.

State's Attorney W. W. Dawson and Sheriff Walter Haenftling, of Oakland, were pleasant callers in this village one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shawley attended the funeral of a relatives in Meyersdale last Sunday.

The young men's Sunday school class, "Comrades," of the local Lutheran church, spent last Saturday afternoon cutting and storing a winter's supply of kindling wood in the basement of the church.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bittinger Mutual Telephone Co. was held in this village last Saturday afternoon. All the officers of the company were reelected for the coming year.

Bruce Folk, of Casselman, near Jennings, spent part of last Saturday putting the telephone switchboard here in order.

Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville, was called to Bittinger last Saturday to attend Mrs. John Beitzel, who is ill at her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Bittinger returned to their home at Akron, O., last Saturday, after having spent some weeks with relatives here.

Messrs. George Fitzwater, William Fitzwater, Mr. Bowers and Mr. Grove, all of near Swanton, were pleasant business visitors on this side of the mountain last Thursday afternoon.

Messrs. C. E. Ellithorp and Asa J. Orendorf motored to Grantsville on busines last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Simon Resh is reported as being seriously ill at her home near here and her speedy recovery is hoped for by a large circle of friends.

Herbert Buckle has now a fully equipped chopping mill in this village and is prepared to chop grain for the neighbors.

TRACING WASHINGTON'S TRIPS IN MARYLAND

Committee Chairman Describes Hunt For Footprints of First President

By J. ALEXIS SHRIVER,
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

Virginia was George Washington's native State and his lifelong home, but Maryland was his nearest neighbor. Consequently, in the current nation-wide search for forgotten or neglected bits of Washington history—one phase of the preparation for the forthcoming Bicentennial celebration—Maryland is a souce only less fruitful than the Old Dominion itself. The important events which associate the first President with this State have been noted adequately in history, but his numerous casual contacts with people and places in Maryland have been recorded only in haphazard fashion. In particular, information concerning Washington's many trips into and through the State, his business and political missions and his social calls, never has been assembled into a single historical record.

The latter was the first task to be undertaken by the Maryland Commission for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington. In collaboration with the National Bicentennial Commission, which is sponsoring a map showing all of Washington's journeys—from Crown Point, on Lake Champlain, in the North, to Savannah in the South, and from Maine, in the East, to Gallipolis, Ohio, in the West—the State organization determined to prepare a map showing his numerous trips through Maryland, identifying, wherever possible, his actual stopping places along the way. This work, and the preparation of plans for celebrations in the several counties of the State, was turned over to the writer, as chairman; Dr. Arthur B. Bibbins, Mrs. Edward Shoemaker, J. Spence Howard and Ernest J. Clark.

The assignment to discover and then to follow trails, most of which were more than a century and a half old and many of which were obscured or disturbed by conflicting legends, was not an easy one. The cooperation of the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities will be used to preserve these historic spots. State and county archives were explored minutely and private collections of Washingtoniana were placed at the disposal of the committee, but, oddly enough, the most valuable assistance came directly from Washington himself—through his diaries.

It seemed almost incredible that such a mass of material relating to trifling daily incidents should have been preserved for us, but Washington not only kept diaries from early youth to the time of his death, but also he recorded meticulously every item of expense, not disregarding winnings and losses at cards and the races, and even to the tips given to servants when he left the house in which he had been a guest. These items he kept in little pocket memorandum books which later were transferred to three large ledgers, A, B and C.

They have been more useful to the committee than George Washington ever could have dreamed. For example, how could the committee determine at which house he stopped in Upper Marlboro? His diary simply stated: "Supped & Lodged in Marlboro." The tavern site was pointed out by some of the residents as the probable place at which he stopped; others said he had stayed at a house in Marlboro which is still standing. It reads: "By servants at Marlboro and exp. at widow Ramsey's 1 lb.13s." Widow Ramsey's tavern was located half way between Marlboro and Baltimore (probably the old Rising Sun tavern in Anne Arundel county, so lovingly rescued by the Daughters of the American Revolution), and Washington plainly differentiated between "servants" at the home of a friend in Marlboro and "exp." at the Widow Ramsey's tavern.

These Washington diaries, his pocket memorandum books and ledgers were left, at the time of his death, to his nephew, Judge Bushrod Washington, who inherited Mount Vernon. Unfortunately for us, Bushrod Washington felt that it would be nice to present to various friends and relatives of Washington one or more volumes of his diaries, his pocket memorandum books or even his account books. This unfortunate dispersion continued and single leaves of diaries were torn out and given to various individuals as souvenirs. Thus, apparently, they were scattered to the four winds of the earth, but astonishing as it may seem, a great number of them have been gathered together again by the Library of Congress. Some are owned by libraries in different parts of the United States and others are in the hands of individuals.

Those that are known have been put into four printed volumes under the auspices of the Lady Regents of Mount Vernon and edited by Dr. Fitzpatrick, of the Library of Congress. Of those not published and in private hands a man in New Jersey owns five pocket memorandum books, Ledger C and a vast amount of original Washington material which he has gathered together and which it is hoped will be left by him to the Library of Congress. The Maryland Commission has had the privilege of copying from these documents details of the expenses of Washington's trips through Maryland which have not been made public previously. Another diary has been located but not inspected, because the owner is at the present time in Switzerland. A leaf of one of the diaries has been found in West Virginia in private hands.

Thus, step by step, Washington's trips through Maryland have been traced by the Maryland Commission. Having exhausted this means of identification, Washington's letters, during the periods for which his diaries are missing, have been consulted. These were first published by the Rev. Jared Sparks, who lived at one time in Havre de Grace, and later they were reedited and enlarged into fourteen volumes by Worthington Chauncey Ford. In these the Maryland Commission has discovered heretofore unrecorded trips.

For example, in 1792, Washington made three trips from Philadelphia to Mount Vernon, in one case to remain not over five or six days and in another case to attend the funeral of a nephew who had died there. He wrote to LaFayette, to Thomas Jefferson, to Gov. Thomas Sim Lee and others, telling of his movements and suggesting which route he would take because he had received reports that the roads were bad between certain points. The committee has been fortunate enough to discover hitherto unknown letters in private hands, one to Thomas Johnson, which was found between the leaves of an old geography, telling of a trip he proposed to make from Mount Vernon to Philadelphia and offering Governor Johnson the superintendency of the new District of Columbia.

This clue has led to Frederick county, where Governor Johnson lived, and further letters have been discovered showing that he went through Frederick by what he called the "upper road," and there he probably saw Mr. Richard Potts and Governor Thomas Sim Lee, who lived at Needwood, and suggested to them that they become identified with the laying out of the new District of Columbia.

So far 127 separate trips through Maryland have been authenticated. The roads over which he traveled in Maryland approximate 500 miles and the number of miles actually traveled over these roads will run into many thousands, although the exact figure cannot be definitely determined at the present moment. The number of stops made by Washington averaged approximately six to the trip, so that the total probably will be approximately 750.

It must be remembered that the royal grant to Lord Baltimore carried the line of Maryland to the low-water mark of the Potomac river, and, therefore, the waters of Maryland, lapped the shores of Mount Vernon. Every time Washington went out on his wharf or stepped into his boat he was technically on Maryland soil, but, of course, such technicalities have not been considered by the committee. The fact that he was a next-door neighbor though, enabled him to have friends across the river in Maryland who were easier of access than were his Virginia neighbors, who were separated from him by miles of impassable mud roads.

There is no house in America that Washington visited more often than that of William Digges, at Warburton Manor, in Prince George's county, just across from Mount Vernon. It is said that a system of signaling between Mount Vernon and Warburton Manor was arranged by which visits back and forth were announced. The old Digges house, unfortunately, no longer exists, for on the site has been built Fort Washington, most properly named, as it was the one spot next to Mount Vernon most frequently visited. Fort Washington itself was planned by Major L'Enfant, and is most picturesque and attractive.

The committee has had difficulty in locating all of the houses visited by Washington in the State of Maryland. Legends and claims are plentiful and in many cases are founded on fact, the proof of which has been forthcoming from old newspapers, private letters and parts of diaries. In some cases, however, the actual determination of a house at which he ate breakfast or dined still hangs in the air. He did stop at Queen Anne, a village of five or six houses in Prince George's county, at the Patuxent river. Two of these old houses have all the earmarks of having been built before 1770, and one of them still contains the old barroom. (It is said that it continued as a bar until the Volstead Act closed its doors.) Because Anne Arundel county was dry and Prince George's was wet, the short trip across the Patuxent river enabled the thirsty residents of Anne Arundel to quench their thirsts without great effort.

In trying to determine at which of these two old houses the Father of His Country stopped, the present occupants were interviewed as to any legend which might exist. At the last and oldest house nearest to the river, and, therefore probably a ferry house, a colored boy could give no information. His grandma was out. The second house was visited; an old colored woman and her granddaughter lived there, and, although they knew nothing of Washington, they showed the old barroom and hoped it might be the one George had visited. A cloud of dust along the road was left in the wake of the old "Grandma" from the first house, who protested that "Marse George" must have stopped at her house, and then without taking breath she inquired, "Don't I get some sort of a prize?"

The records of the various counties were most helpful in determining just where the homes and taverns stood in Washington's time, though many have long since disappeared. Van Horne's Tavern is a case in point. Gabriel Peterson Van Horne was a resident of Harford county and took part, during the early part of the Revolution, in securing signatures to that very important paper, "The Association of Freemen." He interviewed the residents of "Eden Hundred" in Harford county, and those who refused to sign were termed "non-associators" (Tories), and were fined, according to their wealth, by the County Committee of Safety. Van Horne was authorized to disarm such "non-associators." He carried the important "expresses" (letters and messages) from Colonel Hollingsworth at Elkton, through Cecil, Harford and Baltimore counties to the Committee of Correspondence and Safety in Baltimore city. Van Horne owned a tavern at Havre de Grace and operated a line of stage coaches. The Harford county records show that when he sold his tavern he called himself "Gabriel Paterson van Horne, of Prince George's county, Md." So the search shifted to the Prince George's records at Upper Marlboro.

Here we found Van Horne bought from William Willet "117 acres of land and two horses with a stage wagon." This tract he laid out in lots around his tavern, and called it Vansville. This was "Van Horne's Tavern" at which Washington stopped many times on his trips back and forth between Mount Vernon and Philadelphia, in 1795 and afterward.

The Library of Congress, the Peabody Library, the Maryland Historical Society, the Maryland Geological Survey and many other friends have provided old maps which show the locations and names of taverns and roads which were used before 1800, and these, with th eother data compiled, have been the basis for the map which the committee will publish to show the roads traversed and places visited by Washington in the course of his frequent trips through the State. Photographs have been taken of all the houses in Maryland definitely known to have been visited by the Father of His Country, and the sites of those that have been demolished will be marked with suitable roadside markers. In this way the committee hopes to make known not only to travelers through our State, but to our own people, spots which have been hallowed by the footsteps of Washington.

The county celebrations are being planned by county committees which have been named or will be announced shortly. The Maryland Commission will inform each county of the dates on which George Washington visited that particular county or section, and will help or advise the local committee in arranging a suitable celebration. The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commoission in Washington will also advise and aid all such celebrations, which will include many planned by committees representing churches, societies and schools. The celebrations will extend from February 22 to November 24, Thanksgiving Day.

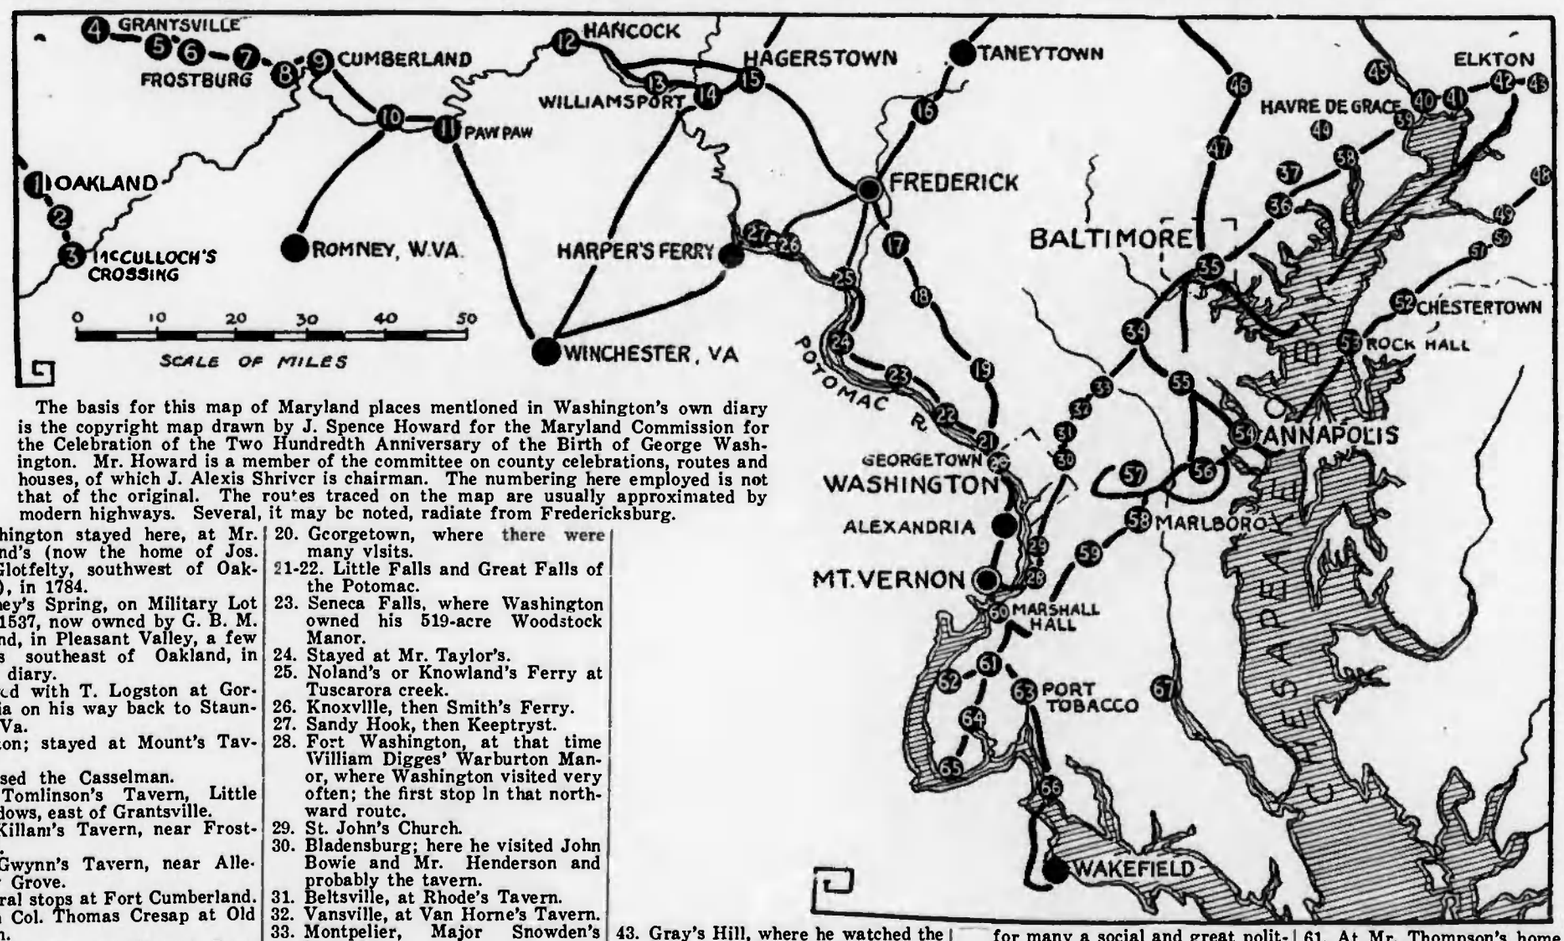
Yet perhaps more important than celebrations, maps or even markers, is the circumstance that they are the fruit of a newly aroused interest in the recognition and preservation of Maryland antiquities. Virginia's societies have been at work for years, and most effectively. The Maryland Commission's most beneficent work will be the awakening of Maryland to its possessions and the creation of machinery for making historic spots, and, through the medium of the newly formed Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities, preserving them for the inspiration of future generations.



The basis for this map of Maryland places mentioned in Washington's own diary is the copyright map drawn by J. Spence Howard for the Maryland Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington. Mr. Howard is a member of the committee on county celebrations, routes and houses, of which J. Alexis Shriver is chairman. The numbering here employed is not that of the original. The routes traced on the map are usually approximated by modern highways. Several, it may be noted, radiate from Fredericksburg.

1. Washington stayed here, at Mr. Friend's (now the home of Jos. T. Glotfelty, southwest of Oakland), in 1784.
2. Archey's Spring, on Military Lot No. 1537, now owned by G. B. M. Friend, in Pleasant Valley, a few miles southeast of Oakland, in 1784 diary.
3. Stayed with T. Logston at Gormania on his way back to Staunton, Va.
4. Oakton; stayed at Mount's Tavern.
5. Crossed the Casselman.
6. At Tomlinson's Tavern, Little Meadows, east of Grantsville.
7. At Killam's Tavern, near Frostburg.
8. At Gwynn's Tavern, near Allegany Grove.
9. Several stops at Fort Cumberland.
10. With Col. Thomas Cresap at Old Town.
11. The Potomac crossing at Paw-Paw.
12. Hancock; here he visited three homes—Flint's, Polk's and Barwick's.
13. Fort Frederick, a defense against Indians.
14. Williamsport, on Conococheague creek, one of numerous suggestions for the national capital.
15. Hagerstown, in that day called Elizabeth town.
16. New Mldway; stayed at Cookerly's Tavern.
17. At Peter's Tavern, near Urbana.
18. Clarksburg; here was Dowden's ordinary, where Braddock tarried.
19. Rockville (Williamsburgh in that day).
20. Georgetown, where there were many visits.
21-22. Little Falls and Great Falls of the Potomac.
23. Seneca Falls, where Washington owned his 519-acre Woodstock Manor.
24. Stayed at Mr. Taylor's.
25. Noland's or Knowland's Ferry at Tuscarora creek.
26. Knoxville, then Smith's Ferry.
27. Sandy Hook, then Keeptryst.
28. Fort Washington, at that time William Digges' Warburton Manor, where Washington visited very often; the first stop in that northward route.
29. St. John's Church.
30. Bladensburg; here he visited John Bowie and Mr. Henderson and probably the tavern.
31. Beltsville, at Rhode's Tavern.
32. Vansville, at Van Horne's Tavern.
33. Montpelier, Major Snowden's home.
34. Spurrier's Tavern, at Waterloo.
35. Many visiting places in Baltimore, including Dr. McHenry, Mount Clare and Fountain Inn.
36. Bird River. Here was the Red Lion Tavern kept successively by Cheneyne, Liggett, Skerritt and Webster.
37. Long Calm Ford over the Gunpowder.
38. Harford Town, or Bush, once the county seat.
39. Havre de Grace, "the lower ferry."
40. Perryville and the Tavern of John Rodgers, who also ran the ferry. A frequent stop.
41-42. Charlestown and Elkton (in his diary "Head of Elk").
43. Gray's Hill, where he watched the British landing before Brandywine.
44. Here Royland Rogers ran a tavern.
45. Stevenson's place, near Port Deposit, "the lower ferry."
46. Sutton's Black Horse Tavern.
47. Slade's Tavern, which stood on My Lady's Manor.
48. Warwick, first Maryland pause on the way back from Newcastle.
49-53. Fredericktown, Georgetown, Galena, Chestertown, Rock Hall.
54. Annapolis. Very rich in Washington associations. There were frequent pauses at Whitehall, north of the Severn, and many in the old Colonial capital for the schooling of his stepson, for the races, and for many a social and great political event.
55. The Widow Ramsey's Tavern.
56. Davidsonville, Samuel Galloway's Tulip Hill on West river, and vanished Londontown at the South River Ferry.
57. Queen Anne on the Patuxent; Northampton, where he stayed with Mr. Sprigg; St. Barnabas' Church and Mount Lubentia, where the Rev. Jonathan Boucher entertained him in 1772.
58. Upper Marlboro and nearby Ignatius Digges' Melwood.
59. Benedict Calvert's Mount Airy, visited with Jackie Custis.
60. Piscataway and Marshall Hall (then "Posey's Ferry").
61. At Mr. Thompson's home in Mason's Springs, first stop in many another northward journey.
62. Governor Smallwood's home.
63. Port Tobacco. Nearby still stands Dr. Gustavus Brown's Rose Hill. Here and at Dr. James Craik's nearby La Grange Washington often visited.
64. Nanjemoy Church, or "Old Durham" Church.
65. Widow Martin's Landing at Maryland Point on the way to Fredericksburg.
66. At Captain Daidler's, where Hoe's Ferry landed.
67. Benedict on Patuxent.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1932

LOOKING FORWARD

Nineteen-thirty-two may be a crucial year in the history of the United States.

For more than two years we have endured one of the most severe and prolonged general depressions of all time—in company with the other great nations of the world. There is no magic remedy for curing economic ills—how soon our problems will be solved, largely, is up to us, as individuals, and as members of a complicated society.

Nineteen-thirty-two is a "Presidential year." Ordinarily, such an election and the political questions it raises, would loom large on the horizon. But local political issues—so far as they attach themselves to men and parties—have become, in the public mind, a small thing when contrasted with economic and social issues. People who are wondering how to find jobs are not interested in partisan platforms nor in political bickerings.

The greatest danger of a depression is that we may lose our heads—that a sort of mob hysteria may take the place of reason. We may try to overcome economic law with panaceas. Already many such efforts are being proposed—the new Congress, before it has completed its session, will be swamped with sugesstions for relieving the unemployed with gigantic bond issues; for helping the farmer with governmental subsidies and attempts at price-fixation; for helping the small business at the expense of the large one; for helping the poor and those of moderate means by overtaxing the wealthy.

While such proposals may be made in good faith, most of them are based on misconceptions.

Prosperity will return as a result of stimulated employment, stimulated buying, stimulated trade, commerce and building. We cannot produce that by frightening the capital we need. We cannot do it through governmental meddling, which inevitably forces retrenchment and inaction on the businesses it touches—and, by example, on the entire business structure.

We cannot create prosperity by heaping tax burdens on businesses and individuals already struggling under a tremendous tax bill. Robbing Peter to pay Paul is not sound economics. All taxes must eventually be paid by the public—business must pass all costs onto those who buy its products or services. For the nation to go further into debt, to appropriate additional millions and billions for temporary and unsound relief schemes is the height of folly.

Our basic industries have shown a commendable spirit in seeking to solve their problems, which, in reality, are the workers' problems and the consumers' problems. Electricity, insurance, oil, gas, railroads, farm organizations—all have shown progressive tendencies. They realize the duty that is upon them to prevent so far as possible, the up-and-down swing of the business chart in the future—the booms that are followed by drops, the inflation that precedes deflation. They are working to stabilize employment, to find a means of assuring the good worker his livelihood at all times, to protect the future of workers when they get beyond their point of usefulness. Business can do this better than government. What the dole has done to England, it would do to a greater degreee to the United States, for we spend money on a more lavish scale for all things. It could plunge us into debt to the point of bankruptcy and crowd business to the edge of ruin with taxes. The dole shatters self-respect—and, in England, it has apparently helped to aggravate unemployment by discouraging industrial expansion.

There are problems, of course, that no nation by itself can hope to solve, problems of international significance. These, too, the public must take an interest in, if we are to have officials capable of representing us in the work of world rehabilitation. Disarmament, the stabilization of our money system, the encouragement of international trade, a sound tariff policy for all nations—these may seem abstract things, but they have a direct and important effect on the prosperity of every country, every business, every wage-earner and investor.

To repeat, 1932 will be an outstanding year in our history. It will be a year of great problems. All of our national character, aggressiveness and iniative will be needed to solve them. Courage and faith must displace gloom and fear if the mists of 1930 and 1931 are to rise in 1932.

PROFITABLY UTILIZING LEISURE TIME

A few years ago, certain publishers of educational books waged an intensive advertising campaign to tell the public what great things an individual could do by devoting fifteen minutes a day to this, that, or the other thing. The advertisements were intended to sell books, but the thought they expressed was worthy of repetition for unselfish purposes.

When Richard H. Waldo, president of McClure Newspaper Syndicate, told a Spokane audience recently that many world problems could be solved in leisure time, he had no books to sell. He had no selfish thought behind that statement. It is a fact that nearly all of the great accomplishments of the past were conceived in leisure moments; and it would be merely a repetition of history if some person enjoying an hour of leisure would conceive a thought which would lead to the solution of our present day problems.

It is possible to acquire an education in fifteen minutes a day. Three hundred and sixty-five such periods would be ninety-one hours and fifteen minutes. In ten years one would have devoted to study 912 hours and 30 minutes—more time than a college graduate has spent in class rooms. And this study, because of the short periods in which intense concentration would be maintained, would be far more productive than the average college course.

It was brief periods of study, oft repeated, that produced minds which we hold in reverence today. It was leisure that turned to creative effort that produced some of the great gems of music which have lived through the centuries. It was the dreams of leisure moments, turned into productive action, that built most of our great industries.

Leisure—the minutes when fancy is free and the body idle—is the fundamental thing behind every progressive movement the world has ever known.

But there is another side to the thought. A man can become a thief, a drunkard, a dissipated rascal in his leisure moments. The moments which might be devoted to lofty dreams are much more often—much more easily—devoted to degenerating activities or to just plain idleness. But though the majority of our people abuse their leisure, it does not necessarily follow that leisure is bad.

A few leisure moments devoted each day to constructive thinking soon show their effect in increased mental capacity of the thinker. It is just as easy to advance as to retrograde. And the average person needs only a brief period of guidance to make constructive application of leisure a pleasure.—S. A. Wickware, Editor Times, Priest River, Idaho.

WHEN CHEAP ROADS ARE GOOD ROADS

Roads of the oil and gravel type have made their appearance in many states the last year or two. One of the newest of developments—a non-skid road consisting of graduated gravel, or crushed rock, which is mixed with bitumen directly on the road bed—is becoming the most popular of all inexpensive surfaces.

Actual experiences over the country have demonstrated the remarkable cheapness of such roads. In Kentucky costs ranged from $2,500 to $3,500 a mile for 18-foot widths. In West Virginia, where mountainous territory necessitates heavy grades and winding alignments, costs were still only $4,000 to $5,000 per mile.

Of equal interest is lowness of maintenance costs. In Idaho a report places such annual cost at $294 per mile, with traffic ranging from 100 to 1200 vehicles a day. In North Dakota, on $3,500 per mile surfaces it was $300 per mile, whereas on a high-type surface costing $25,000 per mile, it was $430. The New Mexico Highway Department estimates maintenance cost of untreated gravel roads at $1,236 per mile, with 400 to 500 vehicles a day, and for bituminous road-mix surfaces, $478.

Good roads are a sound community investment. The new oil surfaces have shown us how to get good roads for comparatively little money.

A WASHINGTON YEAR

The year 1932, now so close at hand, as a time unit of historical and patriotic significance, will be entirely dominated for Americans by the observance of the George Washington Bicentennial. For eight years plans have been under consideration for the celebration of this notable anniversary by the George Washington Bicentennial Commission in Washington, with the objective "that future generations of American citizens may live according to the example and precepts of his exalted life and character and thus perpetuate the American Republic."

Every aspect of the life and career of the Father of His Country will be treated and observed in some fitting manner during the course of the year. The Federal commission alone has been responsible for plans for the restoration of the patriot's home at Wakefield, Va.; for the construction of a great memorial highway from Mount Vernon to the national capital; for the creation of a Washington memorial parkway along the Potomac; for the publication of a Washington Atlas showing the routes of the first President's travels and the location of his homes, and for the issuing of more than twenty-five volumes treating the life of the immortal George. Thousands of other observances of the occasion by civic groups are being planned.

The urgent request of the Bicentennial Commission that every citizen in the land participate in this program will, of course, be heeded. The transcendent importance of George Washington to America is recognized today even more clearly than when he himself was alive, and the year 1932 should be in every way an outstanding memorial observance of the greatest figure in our national history.—Washington Post.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

The subjoined article was not written in the closing days of 1931, as may be surmised by its readers, but appeared more than half a century ago when the country was passing through troublous times as are now upon the people.

The article appeared in the issue dated October 10, 1857, of Harper's Weekly, at that time a nationaliy known and widely read publication:

"It is a gloomy moment in history, not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow-citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment and without prospect of it.

"In France the political caldroun seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs, as usual, like a cloud, dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection and with its disturbed relations in China.

"It is a solemn moment and no man can feel an indifference (which, happily, no man pretends to feel) in the issue of events.

"Of our own troubles no one can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful povert to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tneded to destroy the normal forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity.

"Good Friends—Let our conduct prove that the all comes to men who have large hearts, however narrowed their homes may be; who have open hands, however empty their purses. In time of peril we have nothing but manhood, strong in its faith in God, to rely upon; and whoever shows himself truly a God-fearing man now, by helping however he can, will be as blessed and beloved as a great light in darkness."

History does not repeat itself but pessimists have not learned much new during these last seventy-four years.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A large number of Oakland residents, including men, woman and children of all ages, were victims of the grippe, which was raging in all sections of the country in epidemic form at the time. No fatalities were recorded, however.

Miss Florence Shipley, of Martinsburg, and Godfrey Felty, prominent grocer of Oakland, were married by Rev. Cookerly, at Martinsburg. Fred. Felty, brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss Belle Martin, of Martinsburg, was bridesmaid. They were to make their home in Oakland.

Mrs. Waltz, widow of the late William Waltz, died at her home on Third street in Oakland, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. She was a native of Ryan's Glade, where she resided until moving to Oakland. Her husband served as justice of the peace in Allegany county before Garrett county was formed. From the organization of Garrett county until his death in 1888, Mr. Waltz was bailiff to the grand jury.

Charles Koch, 17, son of Christian Koch, of the Swallow Falls section of Garrett county, was struck and instantly killed by a freight train at Hutton.

The death of Mrs. Rebecca Peters Tower, mother of E. Z. and Charles Tower, Mrs. G. A. Fraley and Mrs. Edward I. West, of Oakland, was recorded.

James Aronhalt, an admirer and ardent supporter of The Republican, paid his respects to the office during the week.

W. A. Sturgiss, pharmaceutical student at a Washington (D. C.) school, came home to spend the holidays.

Fraternal and insurance orders of the community elected officers for the succeeding year.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Additional equipment was installed in the Garrett County Court House, including a hardwood counter surmounted by brass fretwork and glass in the office of the County Treasurer.

Miss Sue Littman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Littman, became the bride of Mr. Harry Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Porter. The ceremony took place at the bride's home.

Oakland's newest playhouse, The Maryland Theatre, was formally opened when the play, "The Girl from the U. S. A." was presented to a packed house.

George Hipsley was cut on the hand and face by an Italian at the Park who was endeavoring to get away after stealing a suitcase from a traveling man. The Italian was arrested and at a hearing before Justice Teats he was sentenced to serve two years in the Maryland House of Correction.

An Interesting Fact

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN MARYLAND.

This is the fourth and last of a series of articles on the Roman Catholic Church in the early days of Maryland as a Colony.

On the death of Charles, third Lord Baltimore, in 1715, the succession passed to Benedict Leonard, who had renounced the Catholic religion in the year 1713. He died in April, 1715, a few weeks after his succession to the title. He, in turn, was succeeded by his son Charles, who became the fifth Lord Baltimore. Under him the Protestant regime was continued.

An opportunity arose to again secure severe legislation against the Catholics. In this persecution the Quakers joined, to some extent, at least.

At the 1715 meeting of the Assembly was passed stringent requirements as to the oaths of allegience. The next year (1716) saw the passage of an act which declared "that all professed Papists whatsoever be, and they are hereby declared incapable of giving their vote in any election of a delegate or delegates within this Province * * * unless they first qualify themselves for so doing by taking the several oaths of allegience to the king, or abhorency against the supremacy of the Pope, and abjuration of the claims of the Pretender," to which, of course, no self-respecting Catholic could subscribe.

After Governor Hart, who seemed to take supreme satisfaction in enforcing the letter of the law against the Catholics, was replaced by Charles Calvert, restrictive legislation against the Roman Catholics was allowed to lapse, or at least was not regularly enforced.

In order to provide funds for the defense of the frontier, a supply bill of 40,000 pounds was agreed upon in 1756 (a part of which was for the building and garisoning of Fort Frederick, near the present town of Hancock). To aid in raising this sum, besides taking some of Lord Baltimore's sources of revenue, the Assembly laid a double tax on Roman Catholics, and we believe, for the first time in the history of any State, laid a tax on bachelors.

We have attempted only to present the highlights on the early history of Roman Catholocism in Maryland. Out of all the religious disagreements and controversies in this State, and the ever-present attempt to separate Church and State, a long prevailing custom was embodied in the Constitution of 1776, namely that no ecclesiastic may sit in the Assembly of Maryland, where it still remains. (Sec. 7, Art. III). Furthermore, under Article 38 of the Declaration of Rights, it is provided that no gift of land or chattels, to take effect after the death of the donor, can be effective without the prior or subsequent consent of the Assembly.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sanner, of Cumberland, were here a day or two this week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Peddicord and other relatives and friends.

Traffic On National Road Light

Since the beginning of the new year traffic over the National Road through Grantsville has been noticeably light. With the exception of heavily laden vans carrying all sorts of merchandise bound for points both east and west, the decrease in the use of the road by tourists has fallen off very appreciably, not that the highway has lost its lure for the tourist, but the tourists are few as compared with a year and two years ago.

CHAPEL AT HOPEMONT IS FORMALLY OPENS SUNDAY

Is Result of Work of Rev. Torrey, Former Rector Here

St. Luke's Chapel, a place of prayer for all people, was formally opened Sunday night at Hopemont Sanitarium, ten miles west of Oakland. This new place of worship was made possible through the interest and cooperation of the superintendent, Dr. Geo. F. Evans, who takes a keen interest in the welfare of his patients. Space was provided in the basement of Darst Hospital, and has a seating capacity of 125 persons. The entire furnishings for the chapel were donated by the Episcopal Diocese of West Virginia, through the Rt. Rev. R. E. L. Strider, D.D., who is Bishop Coadjutor, the Bishop being Rt. Rev. W. L. Gravatt, D.D., of Charleston. The furnishings, which include pews, organ, altar and complete chancel furnishings were moved from Davis, formerly St. Barnabas, where the Bishop was once rector.

It is the intention and purpose of the donors to make this chapel available at suitable times for all the clergy, both Catholic and Protestant.

The Rev. Father O'Reilly, Catholic chaplain at the institution, said his first Mass there at 8:00 o'clock Sunday morning, the services being attended by more than fifty patients and nurses of the faith.

In the evening at 7:15 the chapel was filled by patients to witness the formal opening by the Rt. Rev. R. E. L. Strider, D.D., who made a special trip for the occasion. The service was in charge of the Episcopal chaplain, the Rev. A. J. Torrey, who has been working there since 1924. The Bishop made the address and formally presented the chapel to the institution.

Father O'Reilly made a brief address in which he expressed his appreciation in having a suitable place in which to worship. Other clergy could not attend on account of having services of their own.

After closing remarks by Rev. Torrey, the Bishop brought the service to a close with prayers and benediction.

Rev. Mr. Torrey, who has been visiting chaplain since 1924, holds services twice a month for the patients and remains at the institution for several days at a time, making an average of two hundred bedside visits a month.

The development of the chapel project is largely a result of his ministrations there.

Rev. Torrey was formerly rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church in Oakland and organized the Boy Scout troop in this city in 1924.

Services have been held at Hopemont at various times by Rev. C. A. Shilke and Rev. Walter B. Brock, of Oakland.

B. and O. to Again Award Scholarships in 4-H Club Work

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, through Mr. Milholland, assistant to President Willard Stated it will award again this year two one-hundred dollar scholarships in Maryland to the farm boy and girl resident in counties traversed by the railroad, who most effieiently complete their projects in 4-H agricultural club work during 1932.

A club member may compete for this scholarship by entering any type of club work recognized and supervised by the University of Maryland Extension Service, such as calf clubs, pig clubs, poultry clubs, corn clubs, potato clubs, sewing clubs, canning clubs, etc. The winners of the scholarships may use them at any recognized college or university in the country.

The Baltimore and Ohio has awarded 131 scholarships to date and over 100 winners of which are now enrolled as students or have already graduated from colleges.

Merle Garletts, of Selbysport, is the only Garrett county farm boy to win the award, although twelve have been won in the State of Maryland.

The Republican Again Indulges in Imperial Ice Cream Treat

The indulgence of The Republican staff was again asked in sampling the first special of the 1932 season of the Imperial Ice Cream Company, black walnut ice cream, when the emissary of the company, Robert Brafford, handed over two quarts of their special on Monday afternoon.

Besides being the favorite ice cream of three-fifths of the staff and the entire number of visitors who happened to be in the office at the time, the Imperial believes that this is one of the finest ice creams it manufactures.

Indulgence in ice cream is the favorite sport of the staff, and the treat on Monday, the fourth of an indefinite series of treats, was declared the best ever.

Oakland High School News

The boys' and the girls' basketball teams lost their opening games of the season to the Bayard High School last Thursday evening. The boys were defeated 29 to 19, while the girls lost 51 to 24.

The teams will go to Kitzmiller on Friday for games with Kitzmiller High School, while the Oakland Independents will meet the Bayard Eagles on the local floor.

Karl Ray will again be included in the lineup of O. H. S. basketeers.

In inter-class basketball games the team from Miss Schnebly's home room defeated the boys from Miss Thomas' home room; the sophomore girls from Mr. Jenkins home room defeated the senior girls from Miss Rice's home room. Those from Miss Koehenderfer's home room defeated those from Miss Triekett's home room on Wednesday, 13 to 0.

It has been definitely decided that the staff of The Acorn will join the National Quill and Scroll.

On Tuesday, January 19, the basketball teams will go to Bayard to play the return games with the high school teams there.

MT. LAKE PARK

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Ethel Clelland, 38, wife of John T. Clelland, at her home in Fairmont. Mrs. Clelland is survived by her husband and two children, Kenneth and Jane; by her mother, Mrs. Banjamin Friend; two brothers, C. A. Friend, of Fairmont, and C. Friend, of White Rock, near Fairmont, and by five sisters, Mrs. W. O. Cleveland, Mrs. J. E. Jamison, Mrs. W. L. Vandergrift, Mrs. Roy Cunningham and Mrs. John Taylor, all of Fairmont. Mrs. Clelland was a niece of Mrs. U. G. Ford, of Loch Lynn.

Special meetings are still in progress at the U. B. church in Loch Lynn and are being largely attended. Tuesday evening about twenty members of the Crellin choir furnished the music for the meeting.

On Wednesday evening Oak Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., installed its officers for the ensuing year as follows: N. G., O. W. Bittinger; V. G., Hugh Echard; recording secretary, D. M. Lower; financial secretary, R. E. Bittinger; treasurer, H. C. Leighton; marshall, Joe Turney. District Deputy C. P. Martin was the installing officer. At the close of the meeting J. W. Glotfelty, retiring Noble Grand, was presented with a Past Master's jewel, after which about twenty of the lodge members enjoyed an oyster supper.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Fouch have returned from Grafton where they were called by the illness and death of a sister of Mrs. Fouch.

J. C Chilson and William Parker were business visitors at the Park this week.

Mr. Harry Meadows and Mrs. Wiley Welling, Jr., had as their guest for the past few weeks, their mother.

The Republican is Garrett County's longest established newspaper.

Simple Desserts

In grandmother's day the word "dessert" was rarely if ever used. She simply gave her company some apple dumplings or a good old-fashioned apple pie as the "topping off" of the meal. Housewives now are confining their efforts to different forms of desserts, getting away, to a larger degree, from pies and other rich pastries and learning new schemes for the making of attractive, yet wholesome desserts, from eggs, milk, sugar, gelatine, fresh, canned or dried fruit, as well as cakes, cookies and frozen desserts.

No practical housewife will train her family to expect dessert at dinner every day. If dessert is planned for each day it should be considered as food and a part of the meal, not as a surprise. Desserts are food, and therefore, should be simple or rich in relation to the rest of the menu. The following recipes suggest types of desserts:

How To Use Canned Fruit

Instead of opening the can and serving the fruit directly into dishes for the table, try these possibilities:

Jellied Peaches.

One package gelatine, one can peaches, 1 cup cold water, 2 cups hot liquid. Soak gelatine in 1 cup cold water until dissolved. Drain juice from peaches—enough for two cups. (If not enough, add hot water). Heat the juice and cool; then add dissolved gelatine and mix all together in a bowl. Pour whole peaches or halves on top of this and let stand until fairly firm, but not solid. Serve with cream.

Peach Custard

Peaches, apricots, sliced bananas or any canned or thoroughly ripe fruit may be added to plain custard recipe. Canned fruits may be added just before the custard is removed from the fire. If their juices are used, allowance must be made in the custard recipe.

Baked Apple With Marmalade

As a change from baked apple, try this:

Tart apples (one apiece)—Orange Marmalade—Marshmallows.

Peel and core the apples, place in a baking dish. Fill the cavities in the apples with orange or pineapple marmalade. Bake in a hot oven until soft, basting frequently with a little syrup that has ben placed in the dish. Remove from oven, place marshmallows around the top of each apple, return to the oven for a few minutes to melt the marshmallows and delicately brown. Just sugar and cinnamon in the cavity is pleasing; also jelly or jam.

Sponge Cake Surprise

Use your favorite sponge cake recipe. Cut in squares and serve with whipped cream on top. Nuts and ground fruit may be whipped with the cream. Strawberry jam is a pleasing addition.

For yellow sponge cake use: Four egg yolks, ¾ cup sugar, 1 tbs. lemon juice, 7-8 cup flour, 4 egg whites, ½ tsp. salt. Beat yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add sugar very gradually, beating each time. Add lemon juice and flour which has been sifted at least three times. Beat whites with salt and fold them in at the last. Bake in slow oven 40 minutes. Jellly roll may be made from this same recipe.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors who kindly assisted us at the time of the death of our beloved mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Schlossnagle; also for the use of cars at the funeral.

HER CHILDREN.

SORE THROAT IS DANGEROUS

A sore throat often leads to serious illness. Stop it at once. Take Thoxine, a prescription made exclusively for throat ailments; not a gargle. The first swallow relieves the soreness in a few minutes; and goes direct to the internal cause, preventing further trouble.

Most coughs are caused by an irritated throat. Thoxine stops these at once. Safe for the whole family—guaranteed no dope. Money back if not satisfied. 35c. Gonder's Drug Store and all other good drug stores. —Advertisement 48, 2.

Everybody—Everything "Yessed" Him

By H. A. SEWARD

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

IT WAS a warm day. T. R. Booth sat behind his great oak desk. The office air was heavy and moist—the kind that makes half-retired executives droop their heads down to the chests of their stuffed bodies. Looking out of the broad window of his office, Booth could see that the sun was bright and the sky clear.

There came over him slowly a feeling of hatred for his office, for its furnishings, for everything. He gradually became seized with a mad desire to jump up and upset everything in the place—to tear, upturn, smash all. Then he realized the utter futility of the thought. The senior member of Booth & Son could not make a raving fool of himself.

What a life! Success. How he thirsted for it; how he had worked for it. Now that he had it, he didn't even know what it meant. Power, influence, money, luxury—people called him a success. Irony. Bitter paradox. Nothing to do now that he was on top. President of the company, chairman of the board of directors, chairman of the boards of four other corporations.

Bah! There were no more real people. It was getting to be a subservient world of "yes men." Yessed morning and night. Even his wife did it, and God knows that was a calamity. Couldn't even he disagreed with in his own home. His daughter married a man from his own college, so that he was even deprived of football arguments.

Things were coming to a pretty pass. He bet himself that even if he—Well, he might try it anyway, just for the fun of it. Smiling grimly to himself he pushed the buzzer. The d—d thing seemed to say "Y-e-e-s." Watkins appeared in the doorway. Watkins—the obsequious secretary. "Yes, Mr. Booth."

"Watkins, you consider me a good weather prophet?"

"Very good, sir."

"Well, I predict that rain will fall within an hour at the latest. Am I right?"

Watkins glanced meekly out the window to behold a cloudless, obviously clear sky. Then, turning his blinking gaze to his executive's face, he calmly replied: "Quite right, sir."

Booth leaped to his feet and pounded the desk. His face bulged, grew purple, and the veins in his neck swelled almost to their bursting point as he blurted, "D—n you, Watkins, any fool can see with half an eye that there's not a sign of rain today."

"Yes, sir." Watkins shrugged his shoulders and glided softly from the room.

In the outer office a group of young men were gathered around the water-cooler. Earnest, intelligent looking young men they were, giving advice to one of their members—a personable-looking chap. Now he was addressed by a noisy fellow, the "let-me-tell-you" kind.

"Listen here, Larry, I've been working for this guy for two years, and believe me, I know him. He's like the rest of the big guns. You've gotta salve him up, you've gotta use the old oil on him plenty."

"I know, but it doesn't always pay to be a hypocrite. I don't want to be anyone's footstool, anyhow. I don't believe in being a 'yes man'."

"Oh, yeah? Well, you'd be a lot farther ahead in this little old world if you did. The trouble with you is that you're too independent. Now if you want this promotion, boy, you've got to do as I'm telling you. When you go in to see the old bird, 'yes' him to death. If he tells you the moon is made of green cheese, say he's perfectly right. It doesn't cost you anything to feed his vanity, and you get along better when you make him feel as though he knows it all."

"You have a right to your opinion, and I to mine."

Larry struck out for the private office of old "Ty" Booth. As the youth entered, Booth was fingering a card on his desk. Booth read the card over, at the same time thinking of the man whose record was scribbled on it. "Lawrence Pickett. Steady chap. Reputation for being a good worker, clever, but independent. Old "Ty" wondered.

Booth looked up at his visitor. Then he said lightly, as if speaking of irrelevent things. "I pride myself on being somewhat of a weather prophet. Right now I predict rain within an hour. How does that sound?"

The young man looked out at the clear sky. He felt, uncomfortably, that a whole lot depended upon his answer. He started to reply, hesitated, then smiled and said:

"I think that your prediction is very good, sir. I think that it will rain very shortly."

Booth frowned and said, "Mmmm. Oh, Pickett, about that position I asked you to come in about. I can't give it to you now. I may later.

• • • • • • • •

Booth appeared tired—weary. He sat alone, his head bent forward. The ashes in his pipe had long since grown cold. The temperature of his office had gone down. Shadows were lengthening. It must be getting late! He jerked his head up and turned toward the window. Suddenly, he looked startled. What! Could it be possible? Even the weather. He smiled very slowly, very ironically.

It was raining.

Have You Met The Lady Who Never Reads The Ads?

She doesn't exist. Go into her kitchen. The shelves are filled with familiar brands of soup and soap and foods of all sorts. Her electric iron and ice box have been regularly advertised goods. So have her rugs and towels and table silver.

SOMEBODY must have been reading "The ads"--asking for known quality--buying the goods--giving them leadership.

The Republican which today goes into over 500 more homes than any other newspaper published in Garrett county, is an advertising medium that reaches nearly every buyer and consumer in the County.

Advertisements placed in this publication with regularity are bound to return to the advertiser many times the amount he is asked to pay for this service.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—— BY STATE HEALTH DOCTOR

Dr. R. H. Riley Asks a Number of Questions on Health

Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the Maryland State Department of Health asks: Did you know that—

Over 65,000 cases of communicable diseases were reported in Maryland in 1931—26,000 to the State Department of Health from the counties, and 39,000 to the Baltimore City Department of Health; that—

This was a marked increase over the number reported in 1930, and that the increase was largely due to outbreaks of measles and influenza during the first half of 1931; that—

Certain diseases are called communicable because they spread from person to person, or are contracted in handling or eating contaminated food; from contaminated water; through the bites of insects, or from animals; that—

There are over 2,400 physicians practicing in Maryland—800 in the counties and 1,600 in Baltimore City; that the former report cases of communicable disease they attend or that are brought to their attention, to the county health officer, or directly to the State Department of Health; that the physicians in Baltimore City make similar reports to the Baltimore Department of Health; that—

The reason physicians are required to make these reports is in order that the health departments may know what diseases are occurring and where, so that measures for their control may be gotten under way, promptly; that—

The reportable diseases include fevers, such as typhoid, typhus, undulant or Malta fever; the so-called children's diseases—measles, mumps, whooping cough; infantile paralysis; tuberculosis; all forms of pneumonia; diarrhea and dysentery; the venereal diseases; that altogether there are between fifty and sixty of these "notifiable" diseases; that—

The director of the Department of Health in each State reports the number and kind of communicable diseases that occur in his State to the Surgeon-General of the U. S. Public Health Service in Washington; that—

Just as the Weather Bureau sends out warnings of weather conditions and of threatened storms, so the U. S. Public Health Service sends to all city and State health officers, each week, for their information and guidance, in communicable disease control, a report of communicable disease prevalence throughout the country; that—

International bureaus for the exchange of information in regard to the occurrence of communicable diseases, have been established at strategic points and form a network linking together the entire civilized world; that—

Washington is the headquarters for the Pen American Sanitary Bureau which acts as a clearing house for the Western hemisphere; the International office of Public Hygiene, which is in touch with the health activities of forty nations, is in Paris; the headquarters of the Health Section of the League of Nations are at Geneva, in Switzerland, with the Far Eastern branch away off at Singapore, from which news is broadcast every day of quarantinable diseases that occur in the Orient; and finally, did you realize that—

This tremendously important service to humanity really hinges upon the cooperation of practicing physicians and the promptness with which they report the occurrence of communicable sickness to the Departments of Health?

"The Maryland State Department of Health," Dr. Riley said, "has the ready cooperation of the physicians in this State in all activities for the control of communicable diseases, and it has great appreciation of the services they render."

Pallbearers were Messrs. Charles F. White W. H. Smouse, Webster Ravenscroft, Harry West, E. G. Naylor, and George D. Browning.

MRS. CLARA BROADWATER

Written in memory of Clara, wife of Chauncey R. Broadwater, who departed this life at 6:30 o'clock p. m., on Wednesday, December 23, 1931, aged 39 years, 5 months and one day.

She was a faithful wife and devoted mother of six children—four sons and two daughters. Diligent in the keeping of the home, active in all the social interests of the community, constant and loyal in the discharge of her Christian duties, she exemplified that type of noble womanly character which leaves its imprint upon the generations to come

When the dark curtain rolled down, in the gloaming of a quiet winter's day, it hid from mortal vision on the mortal concept of a noble woman, but beyond that sombre veil she lives still in that kingdom of infinite and eternal harmony.

We may gather lily blossoms
To scatter on a grave;
We may weave a spotless garland
Above a tomb to wave.

But these will fade and wither—
They must crumble into dust
And the chalice fair that held them
Will be tarnished deep with rust.

So it is with all things mortal—
They will linger for a day;
When their mission here is ended
They will droop and pass away.

But there is a sacred garden
Hidden deep in memory's lane
Where no mortal thing can enter
And no cruel thing profane.

There we plant eternal roses
That will grow through all the years,
For we plant them there in silence
And we water them with tears.

And we'll keep them ever blooming,
While in loneliness we wait
Till we bear them to our loved ones
Just within the pearly gate.

J.B.E.

Bittinger, Md., January 6, 1932.

MRS VERLINDA BELL WENSEL.

Mrs. Verlinda Bell Wensel, widow of the late Moses Wensel, was born February 20, 1845, and died December 29, 1931, at the age of 86 years and ten months. She was born and spent her entire life in the old home, now owned by her son, Floyd Wensel. Her husband preceded her in death about 20 years. Mother Wensel was an invalid for almost 8 years as the result of a broken hip. Through all her suffering she was kind and considerate of her family and neighbors. She was a member of the Lutheran church, having become such in early life. She is survived by the following children and relatives: O. S. Wensel, Akron, O.; W. G. Wensel, Massillon, O.; E. L. Wensel, Keyser, W. Va.; Floyd, at home; Mrs. P. H. Simmons, Loch Lynn; Mrs. Earl Durst, Oakland; Mrs. D. E. Orendorf, Oakland. One brother, W. S. Haun, Washington, Pa.; 14 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

The funeral services were held at home by her pastor, Rev. C. A. Shilke, and interment was made in the old Lower cemetery. The pallbearers were W. R. Beckman, Wesley White, Wallace Bowser, Dice Spiker, Leroy White and Harry Durst. The flower girls were Mary Jane Porter, Edith Bittinger, Minnie Sisk, Bertie Giessman, Alma White and Anna Durst.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral were W. G. Wensel, Massillon, O.; O. S. Wensel, Akron, O.; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wensel, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wensel, Mrs. Earl Boyd, Keyser, W. Va.; Howard Decker, Mrs. Milton Peightol, Huntington, Pa.; W. S. Haun, Lee Murray and Mrs. Jennie Clutter, Washington, Pa.

IN MEMORIAM

My Mother's Dream

When I was but a little child
My mother had a dream,
And telling it o'er and o'er to us
She never tired, it seemed.

She dreamed of walking in a yard,
Among the flowers sweet,
And saw a wondrous ladder
Spring up close by her feet.

It stood upon the earth
And reached up to the sky—
Oh, how she would love to climb it;
She had a mind to try.

She stepped upon the rungs
And up and up she climbed
Until she reached a field
All glorious and sublime.

While gazing 'round in rapture
She beheld a gate ajar
And wished she might enter
And live above the stars.

When lo! A glorious vision—
The Savior on her smiled;
She asked if she might enter:
"Not yet; not yet, my child.

"But you must go back to the earth,
There finish the work I've given;
Take up your cross and follow me;
Then you shall live in heaven."

When she awoke 'twas but a dream,
But a promise to her had been given
'Twas like an anchor to her soul,
Her faith, her hope in heaven.

But yesterday we stood beside
Our dying mother's bed
And how we wished we could have heard
What to her the Savior said.

She closed her eyes and went to sleep:
Her work on earth was done;
The beautiful gate swung open wide
And Jesus bid her come.

Dedicated to the memory of Mrs. V. B. Wensel by her daughter, MRS. P. H. SIMMONS.

TRENTON, A BRILLIANT ACHIEVEMENT

When George Washington marched his 2400 cold, hungry and tired "ragged Continentals" through the ice and snow of Christmas night, 1776, crossed the Delaware River with them in a collection of small boats and on barges, then in a whirlwind attack that would not be denied killed or captured the entire British garrison at Trenton, he headed an expliot which alone would have been sufficient to establish him as a military leader of the first rank.

The 155th anniversary, we are informed by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, of the battle of Trenton, coming on the eve of the nation-wide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of Gen. Washington's birth, turns the thoughts of all Americans, toward that event, which some have called the turning point of the Revolution.

The hopes and spirits of Washington's soldiers had been considerably crushed during the autumn and early winter of 1776. The Continental troops had enlisted for only a short time, and the period of service for most of them would expire with the end of the year. Under the unpromising conditions then prevailing Gen. Washington knew that few of the men would be willing to reenlist. That meant the loss of his experienced and most valuable troops.

What made the situation even worse was the fact that the enthusiasm of the entire country was waning, and with the ebb the possibility of obtaining new recruits was correspondingly lessened.

Even General Howe, in his comfortable winter quarters in New York City believed that the Americans were incapable of further opposition and settled down to enjoy himself as much as possible while the Revolution was frozen and starved out by the winter.

General Washington saw the need of a decisive stroke which would restore the confidence of the troops and the entire country. He knew that England could never beat patriots who were determined to be free, so he went about the task of winning a victory which would renew the determination with which the war was first undertaken.

The best chance lay at Trenton which was garrisoned by Hesslan mercenaries under the command of Colonel Rahl. Having no idea that the foe across the Delaware River would want to fight during the festive Christmas season, the Germans forgot the war and celebrated. Rahl so completely underestimated the mettle of his adversary that he refused even to erect fortifications of any sort. On the other hand, Washington took the correct measure of Rahl when he decided to attack Trenton. He caught the Hessians unawares in the midst of their revelries. The American victory was a certainty and it took only a few minutes of actual fighting to convince the enemy of this fact.

The heroism of Washington's men has been memorialized in countless tributes, and every American is familiar with the details of that march in the December blizzard and the dangerous crossing of the ice-filled Delaware. Any eulogy must fall short of its intent for nothing can be added to the record made that Christmas night by Washington and his ragged army.

President Hoover, at this time probably more than ever, requires the united support of those who have intrusted to him the arduous task of piloting the ship of state through the rough waters of political and economic disturbances. The same thing applies to the responsible heads of many other nations: Premier MacDonald in Great Britain, Chancellor Bruening in Germany, and so on through a considerable list. This does not mean that every individual is expected to be a political sympathizer of the executive in office, but it does mean at least that he should hesitate to credit irresponsible and merely derogatory criticism of a leadrs who is evidently sincere.

OAKLAND AND TERRA ALTA QUINTS TO MEET TONIGHT

Local Team Will Attempt To Even Series With National Guard Team from W. Va. City

GAME IS CALLED AT 8:15

In an attempt to even the series with Terra Alta National Guards, the Oakland Independent basketball team will meet the West Virginia city five at the Oakland High School auditorium this evening at 8:15. Terra Alta gained a 31-30 decision over the Oakland quint at Terra Alta on Tuesday night, and if Oakland wins a third game may be played. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

Oakland needs this win to give them a 500 percent rating, having lost four games out of seven starts during the season. During the past week Oakland defeated Bayard 30-29 at Oakland and was defeated by Lonaconing 52 to 30, and Terra Alta 31-30, away from home.

In the game Tuesday night Oakland led the first quarter, but was nosed out of the lead at half time 13 to 10. A rally late in the game fell short by one point. Pollock and Hanst both scored 11 points to lead the Oakland quint, while King was high point man for Terra Alta with 10 points.

Oakland Defeats Bayard

Oakland defcated Bayard Eagles 30 to 29 at the Oakland High auditorium on Friday evening to gain revenge for a 21-12 trimming at Bayard a week previous. The score was tied several times during the game and was 6-6 at the quarter; 18-18 at the half, but Oakland crept three points in the lead to hold that margin until just before the whistle blew when Clark, forward for Bayard, shot a field goal.

Field goals were made for Oakland by Pollock 7, McComas 3, Nally 1, Hanst 2; for Bayard, by Clark 3, by Blackburn 3, Funk 5, N. Renn 2. Foul goals: Oakland, Pollock 3-8, McComas 2-2. Bayard, Nine 1-1, Funk 1-4, Frost 1-2. Referee, Aiken.

Beaten at Lonaconing

The Goodwill Five of Lonaconing went on a scoring spree in the closing minutes of the game at Lonaconing the first of the week and defeated the Independents of Oakland 52 to 30. Lonaconing led at the quarter 13 to 12; at the half 27 to 20, and at the third quarter 34 to 27, when Nally was banished from the game for four personal fouls. The locals' defense loosened and Boyd and Turnbull, Lonaconing forwards, ran wild in the final frame.

Field goals were made as follows: Stanton 1, Pollock 4, McComas 6, Nally 1, Hanst 1. For Lonaconing, Boyd 8, Turnbull 7, Darnley 4, Eichorn 4, Wilson 2. Fouls: Oakland, Nally 1-1, Hanst 3-4. Lonaconing, Turnbull 1-3, Wilson 1-2. Referee, Stakem.

A return game will be played with Lonaconing at the Oakland High auditorium on Friday evening, January 29.

Library Board Re-elects Officers For Ensuing Term

Officers of the Oakland Free Public Library were re-elected at a meeting of the Library Board held Tuesday afternoon. Those chosen for 1932 are Mrs. H. A. Loraditch, president; Mrs. F. A. Thayer, vice-president; Mrs. James Willison, secretary; J. M. Jarboe, treasurer.

Members of the board, in discussing the library, stated that more local people had been using the library than ever before, including both the young and old, and that it was urgent that more books be secured, through donations and other sources, especially children's books. Financial support, they stated, was needed at all times.

The library is open on Wednesday afternoon and evening and Saturday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. C. A. Fleegle is entertaining a number of her friends at her home this afternoon.

Estimate Places Population of Garrett Couny at 19,958

The estimated population of Garrett county, white and colored, for 1931, and for the current year, has been published by the State Department of Health, and places Garrett county at 19,958 for 1932, only 21 of whom are colored.

The estimates were prepared by the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Department. The figures are based upon the U. S. Census of 1930. Garrett county was credited with a total of 19,937 people in 1931. The two years show an increase of 21 persons.

Oakland was given a population of 1,662 for 1932 as compared with 1,627 for 1931, an increase of 35. Estimates place the total population of Maryland for 1932 at 1,671,448, an increase of 17,744 over 1931.

Oakland High Loses to Bayard On Tuesday Evening

Oakland High school lost both games of a double-header at Bayard on Tuesday evening, the girls losing 39-14, while the boys were defeated 24-17.

Those playing on the girls' team included Wooddell, Fraley, Browning, Rice, M. Lambert, and L. Lambert, with Casteel, Lucas and Smith substituting.

In the boys' game Ray was high point man for Oakland with four field goals, while Rice had two and Peddicord and Dawson one each. Peddicord also made one foul. Durst and Laxton tied for high honors for the Bayard team with four field goals each. Funk also got two and Casteel and Nine one each.

Two games will be played next week. On Tuesday Thomas High school will be met, and on Friday evening Green Street Junior High teams from Cumberland will be the opponents.

Boy Scouts Receive Charter For Eighth Consecutive Year

A charter to further conduct a troop of Boy Scouts in Oakland for the eighth consecutive year was received during the past week and will be presented to the troop at the regular meeting on Friday evening, George Hanst, scoutmaster, has announced.

The troop was formed in 1924 by Rev. A. J. Torrey, who acted as the scoutmaster for a year. He was followed by Scott W. Shirer, Rev. Paul G. Linaweaver and the present scoutmaster.

Troop committeemen named in the charter are Walter W. Dawson, chairman; Donald R. Sincell, Harland L. Jones and Franklin E. Rathbun. Geo. H. Hanst is re-commissioned scoutmaster, and Bernard Gonder, Jr., and Elvin Iman are named as assistant scoutmasters.

A definite program will be arranged for the twenty-second anniversary of the organization of scouting to be held during February .

Fire Department Asks that People Observe Rules

The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department is asking for cooperation of the public in observing the laws during a fire alarm.

The following suggestions are given:

When the fire alarm is sounded, do not crowd around or close to engine house, or drive to the fire house in your cars or follow the fire engine closer than six hundred feet. Also do not forget that ears carrying firemen have the same privileges of right-of-way as do the fire trucks.

Do not drive into or stop in the block or close to where a fire is in progress.

Do not drive across hose or crowd into or close to where firemen are working.

Give right-of-way as much as possible for your safety and the safety of others.

Let equipment get to where it is needed as soon as possible, in the safest way, thereby giving you the protection to which you are entitled.

There are State laws governing these suggestions and should be enforced, according to George Kerins, fire chief.

ALMOST $1,000 IS PLEDGED FOR MT. LAKE INSTITUTE

Support of Proposed Program Is Said to be Encouraging

Approximately $1,000 has been pledged to date toward the budget for Mountain Lake Institute for the coming year, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director, has announced. While this sum is less than half the total of the $2,600 required to finance the program, it is felt that the loyalty thus far shown is very encouraging, as less than half of the business men of Oakland have been solicited.

A number of pledge cards have not yet been returned, and until they are turned in those responsible for the new program will not be able to determine the amount of their financial support.

"If the average business man as well as the farmers and professional people realized the full meaning of this opportunity for the future," Rev. Middaugh stated, "the raising of the local budget would be an easy matter."

Letters have been received giving much encouragement for the Institute plan for the Park, and the director of the program has been making contact with executives of many organizations in an attempt to bring them to the Park next summer.

Report of Central Relief Body Shows Need of Supplies

A report of the Central Relief committee, which met last night, shows much need of food and clothing in various parts of the county, according to Mr. B. O. Aiken, secretary.

Mr. Lewis, Kempton, reported that 20 families were in need of help, and a request was sent to Miss Alice Davis of the Friends Service committee, to render any service possible. The committee decided to send a truck load of supplies to Kempton from the storage room.

A motion was carried giving local committeemen the power to serve emergency needs from local merchants, the committeemen to be reimbursed from the Central committee funds.

The benefit picture "Tol'Able David", was discussed and each committeeman was urged to advertise it in his neighborhood.

"The number of worthy families to be cared for is large," Mr. Aiken said, "and the committees throughout the county earnestly solicit the support of all good citizens in forwarding the noble efforts to relieve suffering."

Stolen Car Recovered; Garages Broken Into Saturday Night

The Ford car used by Harold Rook, as superintendent of the State roads in this county, was recovered at Gortner Sunday morning after it had been stolen from his garage near his home on Saturday night. The car's gas tank was empty when found, which probably accounts fo rit being abandoned.

On the same night the garages of Frank A. Smouse, Horace Coddington, J. J. Ashby, Jr., and Walter Hardesty were broken into. Tools were taken from the Ashby garage, while from that of Mr. Hardesty a flashlight was stolen.

At the home of Hervey Roth, on Route 37, south of town, the same evening the lock on his garage door was battered, but failed to open for the would-be thieves.

Authorities have the names of several persons suspected as being implicted in the affair and arrests may be made in a very short time.

Attendance at Sang Run School

Those who have made perfect attendance for the month of December at the Sang Run school, Miss Charlotte Potter, teacher, were: Paul DeWitt, Stanley Savage, Everett DeWitt, Junior Carr, Garold Fike, Helen DeWitt, Pauline Friend, Martha Friend, Leota Savage and Dorothy Savage.

ROTARIANS ARE TO BE FINED

In accordance with a resolution presented by Mr. Charles W. Ream and adopted at the last meeting of the Oakland Rotary Club. a fine of 10 cents will be imposed on every member and speaker at the club who uses the word "depression" or who mentions "hard times" during the meetings of the organization held weekly at the William-James Hotel.

Mayor Warns Against Minor Violations of Town Ordinances

Town authorities are on the lookout for several youths who are implicated in breaking the lens in the traffic light at the corner of Alder and Third streets last evening about 11 o'clock. The lens was broken by a rock.

In an interview this morning with Grover C. Stemple, mayor, he said, "Such violations of the law will not be tolerated, and if found out, the youths will be placed under arrest."

Mr. Stemple said he had also received numerous complaints about air rifles being used by several boys of town, and he warned them that it was against an ordinance of the town to use firearms within the town limits, and that this practice must be stopped.

COUNTY POTATO GROWERS WIN IN STATE CONTEST

Take From First To Sixth Places In Rural Russet Class

Garrett county potato producers won from first to sixth places in the State Certified Seed Potato show held in connection with the meeting of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation in Baltimore from January 5 to 7.

The Garrett county winners in the Rural Russet class were: Boyd Hardesty, Oakland, first; D. A. King, Accident, second; J. Wilburn, Hoyes, third; E. F. Garletts, Selbysport; fourth; E. F. McClintock, Accident, fifth; Randall Sebold, Hoyes, sixth. Prizes will be mailed to the winners.

This is the third year that exhibits have been sent from Garrett county, competing with exhibits from other parts of the State. The entries were open only to seed potatoes certified by the Maryland Seed Certification Board in three classes, Irish Cobblers, Rural Russets and any other variety, with six prizes offered in each class.

STATE FOREST NURSERY READY FOR EARLY ORDERS

Nursery Stock Is Said To Be In Splendid Condition

The State Forest Nursery at College Park is beginning to assign trees for spring shipment throughout Maryland. State Forester F. W. Besley says that orders for forest and roadside planting stock are coming in rapidly in anticipation of an early spring planting season.

Some sizes of forest tree planting stock have been exhausted already and the unusual interest in tree planting incident to the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration is promoting special demand for State-grown trees.

The nursery superintendent reports from College Park that nursery stock is in splendid condition and terminal buds are beginning to swell as a result of the recent spring-like weather. He says that an addition to the storage shed at the nursery and other increased facilities are being placed in readines for intense activity as soon as planting weather arrives.

Forest plantations of white, Scotch, Corsican, loblolly and red pines have proven successful in Maryland, as well as white and Norway spruce, which is used more extensively for windbreak planting and Christmas tree plantations. All of these species are being produced in quantity at the State nursery.

"There are 180,000 acres of idle, waste land in Maryland, most of which is better adapted to timber growing than for any other purpose, and which constitutes a land-use problem that can be solved only through re-forestation," State Forester Besley states. "Half of the waste area, or 90,000 acres, should be planted in the next 20 years, requiring 4,500,000 small forest trees annually. Landowners interested in forest planting will be given expert advice upon application to the State Department of Forestry."

Picture Sunday For Benefit of County Relief

"Tol'able David," the classic by Joseph Hergesheimer, is now an all-talking picture and will be shown at the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Sunday evening, January 24, beginning at 8:30 o'clock for the benefit of the Relief Committee of Garrett county. Prices will be 15 and 35 cents.

Richard Cromwell, an unknown boy, plays the title role, and he is heralded as a "find" with predictions for a brilliant future. The feminine lead is handled by Joan Peters.

MINISTERS TO COOPERATE IN PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN

Mountain Top Organization To Help Show That Dry Cause Is Supported by Majority of People

TO GIVE OUT DIME CARDS

The Mountain Top Ministers' Association, at its meeting last Monday, decided to cooperate in the nation-wide campaign that is being sponsored by the National Prohibition Board of Strategy. The slogan of the campaign is "Dry Dimes will beat Wet Dollars."

Three wet millionaires recently gave $100.000 to the leading organization fighting prohibition. "The drys will meet this challenge by a nation-wide campaign for 1,000,000 or more contributions of ten cents each, or a total of $100,000 to emphasize the popular support of prohibition," Rev. Walter B. Brock stated.

"It was shown in a Congressional inquiry," Rev. Brock continued, "that the wet millonaires financing the fight on prohibition hope to legalize liquor so that the taxes raised therefrom may result in a reduction of taxes on their stocks, bonds and other properties. It is a sinister situation when a rich class tries to buy the repeal of an Amendment to the Constitution in order to transfer the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the rich to to the shoulders of the poor."

To Distribute Cards

On Sunday, January 31, special coin holding cards will be distributed through the churches of Oakland and Garrett county, thus giving every person who is interested in the welfare of America an opportunity to make a small contribution of one dime or more to this cause. This will help to finance the work of the National Board of Strategy.

"But more important, it will demonstrate to Congress that, while the wet cause is financed and engineereed by a small elique of immensely wealthy men who are willing to sacrifice the interests of the nation for their own private profit, the dry cause is the cause of the people and is supported by the mass of men and women in every walk of life," Rev. Brock concluded.

Besides the decision to aid the prohibition campaign at the minlsters' meeting on Monday, Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church of Oakland, gave a talk on "Crime, its Causes and Cures." Rev. Dawson was for two years chaplain at the West Virginia penitentiary, Moundsville, and studied crime conditions while there. His experiences while thus engaged were included in the address he made Monday.

Forty-Five Families Are Given Relief—Donations Received

The Relief Committee of the Oakland district is grateful for the donations of food and clothing made during the past week in answer to the urgent appeal. Since the report last week 45 families, representing 83 persons, have been aided.

Offices of the committee, Liberty and Wilson streets, are open Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, 2:30 to 4:30, and those desiring to give food or clothing may leave the supplies at headquarters or at the A. D. Naylor and company store. If desired the committee will call for the goods. Checks should be made payable to Mrs. Owen Treacy, treasurer, Oakland.

Supplies of food have recently been received from George Loar, N. C. Beachy, Mr. Knox, Rock Lodge; John D. Browning, Mrs. Lewis Bowman, Mrs. John Hart, clothing and food; Mrs. Ralph Thayer, clothing; Mrs. Guy Hinebaugh, clothing; Mrs. I. M. Nine, a quilt.

I almost got a trip to Europe. My eldest brother in New York wrote something for Phillip's Milk of Magnesia Company in a word contest of some kind and was just informed that he had won a twenty-four day trip to Europe, passage for two, all expenses paid. That's how I nearly got to go. But he didn't ask me. He's taking his wife instead.

Frank Blake must be getting mooneyed. He's walking up and down the street carrying a lantern, and it's broad daylight, too. Now he's kneeling at the curb in front of the Garrett National Bank. You won't find any money there, Frank, because Turk McComas swept that clean this morning.

Bob Moomaw, from Mountain Lake Park, came in a while ago when I happened to be down in the pressroom and he left two parsnips on my desk that entirely submerged it. "Just to prove to Scoop," he said, "that they really do grow them big where I come from." One was 29 inches long and the other 28 inches, by the non-stretch rule. One thing sure, I'm not going to let them stay in the office as long as the apples did; I don't want them to shrivel, too.

They're so big they don't dig them—they have to use a plow.

In the mail this morning came the following: "Scoop:—The people living on Liberty street wouldn't object if the authorities would sweep the glass off the walk at the Waingold garage, since the property has been purchased by the city."

After the Mayor reads this he ought to send Mike Maroney's dump cart over there immediately.

Bob Moomaw just called from the Park to explain about the parsnips he left here. He said Sam Myers and Bud King had discovered them and were using them for ginseng, and he told them if he could just have a couple of the small ones to take to Scoop, that he would let them have the rest.

Performance—thrills
you've never had in any low-priced car

65 to 70 miles an hour . . 0 to 35 miles an hour in 6.7 seconds . . Silent Syncro-Mesh gearshift . . Simplified Free Wheeling . . Unsurpassed smoothness and quietness . . 60 Horsepower

CHEVROLET You must drive the new Chevrolet Six to appreciate the many new thrills of its performance.

Take it out on the street, compete with other cars in traffic—and understand what it means to accelerate from a standstill to 35 miles an hour in less than seven seconds! Hunt out some long stretch of highway and open the throttle to the limit—and experience the keen joy of a top speed without stress or strain. Travel over the roughest road you know—and learn the advantage of its new stabilized front end. Run the car throughout its full range of speed and power—and know the pleasure of Chevrolet's new smoothness and quietness.

Then, try the thrill of Free Wheeling—of gliding along on momentum in a modern quality six—of shifting gears easily, simply, and quietly. And finally, change back to conventional gear, and try shifting gears with the easy, non-clashing, quiet Synero-Mesh transmission—which is exclusive to Chevrolet in the lowest price field.

Never has the actual driving of a Chevrolet Six meant so much as it does today. Come into our showroom—without delay. Try out the Great American Value for 1932. Faster, livelier, smoother than ever—easier to handle and control—it gives performance-thrills you've never had in any low-priced car!

A NEW DEAL NECESSARY

The depressed condition of the railroads cannot be attributed to general hard times. Ever since the turn of the decade, the rails have been laboring with the problem of rising taxes, declining business and disappearing profits.

General business conditions have merely accentuated the railroad problem. So, it may be said, have they accentuated the problem of other businesses. But other businesses can usually make sufficient profits in good years to tide them over the bad. The railroads are in a different position. They are preventer, by law, from making surplus profits in good times to balance the scale.

An encouraging sign is the increasing public interest in seeing measures adopted which will correct unfair handicaps which now hamper railroad operation in competition with other methods of transportation and save our greatest employing, purchasing and taxpaying industry from ruin.

THE HUNGER MARCHERS

The outstanding fact about the two so-called "hunger marches" which have been precipitated upon Washington the past few weeks that the country should not fail to note is that both of them had their genesis in politics and not in unemployment.

The first expedition was frankly avowed to be communistic in its inspiration, conduct and purpose, designed to create sentiment against the Government of the United States. The second was inspired by political antagonism to President Hoover, led by men conspicuous in political circles for their opposition to him, and deliberately planned to arouse public sentiment against him.

That the purpose behind both of these expeditions was political rather than economic, any child must know. The marchers brought no information to Washington which was not already common property there as it is over the country generally. The petitions for relief which they presented to Congress and to the President could have been handled just as effectively through the mails. There was absolutely no point to be made by taking the several thousand men to the National Capital--except a political point.

The manner in which the marches were made in itself contradicts the pretended purpose behind them. Both armies went in automobiles and auto trucks. Both had brass bands with them. In the case of the last army a very considerable part of its membership did not join in the parade to the Capitol which was supposed to be the chief function in which they should engage, but scattered about the city taking in the sights like any tourists. One of the men who collapsed, not from hunger but from nervous excitement, and was taken to a hospital, was found wearing a diamond ring of considerable value and having $1,000 in currency about his person. Of course this exceptional case does not prove that all of the marchers were supplied with funds. It is obvious, however, that a cavalcade of 2,200 motor vehicles with hired drivers could not be brought together for a journey of 1,000 miles by men who were wholly indigent. There was not only organization behind the enterprise, but a very considerable amount of money, which certainly would have been better expended relieving the families of those who needed relief than in sending some thousands of men on an utterly fruitless journey.

Things have come to a sorry pass when men are willing to resort to "playing politics with human misery" in an effort to discredit the President of the United States in order to win a party victory.

HOOVER WILL RUN AGAIN

Announcement by Postmaster-General Brown that President Hoover is a candidate for renomination, while interesting, is not strictly news. The fact that he intends to enter the campaign has been accepted universally. The fact, too, that the Republican National Convention will endorse him by an overwhelming majority has been generally conceded. No one—except an obscure individual of Maryland—has entered the lists against him. No one can enter the lists with any prospect of success.

Mr. Hoover is a candidate because he cannot possibly desert his party during these troublous times. The Republican party is with him because his policies are its policies. He has assumed a leadership such as no one else could achieve. His measures for the restoration of confidence and of economic prosperity have so appealed to the business, industrial, agricultural and banking interests of the country that they must of necessity be considered favorably by even his political enemies. Thus we see the Democrats in House and Senate joining with the Republicans to push forward his program.

There is cooperation, because there is no other course to pursue. Plans that have been issued from the White House are of such a non-partisan nature, promise so much for the general good, that they are not antagonized by other measures. Whether Mr. Hoover, could he have the choice, would prefer to return to private life is not a matter of moment. Conditions are such that he is forced to become a candidate and continue to lead his party.

GOOD HEALTH A PERSONAL MATTER

Despite all that has been done by science to increase life expectancy, little has been done to help man to help himself. On the contrary, the individual grows more careless of his own and in many cases of the life and health of others.

The big health factor yet to be discovered by the average persons is that health and long life are to a large extent a performance problem on the part of the individual. Of course the great scourges which laid low humanity, have been practically wiped out, thanks to modern scientific research.

Health administrators, however, are helpless to prevent the increasing number of deaths that occur as a result of high-speed living, excessive use of stimulants, lack of sufficient rest, inadequate or improper food, and absence of proper exercise. In short, we are burning ourselves out presumably "to keep up with the Joneses" in every way. We live faster and more carelessly.

Long, healthy and vigorous life, in the last analysis, demands personal, intelligent and daily attention. Nature's laws, though strict, are simple. More attention to the basic rules of health are urgently required if we would do as well for ourselves as science has done for us.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Mrs. L. B. Hoff suffered an injury when a span of horses she was driving, hitched to a sleigh, made a plunge and broke loose from the sleigh. The driver was pulled over the dashboard and as she fell one of the horses kicked her in the face.

What was then unknown as monoxide gas, escaping from a gasoline stove, caused the death of John Whalley, electrician in charge of the Oakland Electric Light Company's plant. Mrs. Whalley was also overcome by the gas but was revived and recovered. The couple had just been married and were rooming at the residence of Mrs. Samuel Lawton on the Deer Park road.

Considerable ice had been harvested from the William Broderick lake in the east portion of Oakland.

A crowd of young men from Oakland went to the B. B. Green farm and chopped a great quantity of wood for use in his stoves. Mr. Green and his entire family were ill and confined to their beds with attacks of the grip.

The death of Nathan Casteel, son of Nathaniel and Jane Casteel, and the father of Truman W. Casteel, was recorded.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Holmes Browning, blacksmith helper, was painfully injured when a piece of steel punctured his hand.

A tannery at Gormania was partially destroyed by fire.

With the thermometer standing at twenty degrees below zero the dwelling of the late G. Semmes Hamill on Seventh street, was completely consumed by fire.

The marriage of Miss Pearl Lawton and Samuel B. Aronhalt, which occurred in Cumberland on New Year's Day, was announced.

A reception and musical occurred at the residence of the Misses Loar on Second street.

Short Course for Florists

The first Florists' Short Course will be held January 26 and 27 at the University of Maryland under the auspices of the Department of Horticulture, it is announced by A. S. Thruston, professor of floriculture and landscape gardening. A registration fee of two dollars will be charged each person attending the course, which will be used to defray traveling expenses of speakers.

A unique feature of the course will be the method of presenting the various subjects for discussion, which will be by laboratory method rather than by lecture. It is believed that this will give more practical results.

Some of the more outstanding problems which will be discussed are: Diseases, insects, soil, miscellaneous cool house crops, the American bulb industry, production costs, rose culture, and the possible value of electricity in propagating beds.

The florists will be addressed by members of the staff of the University of Maryland, the U. S. Department of Agriculture and various commercial organizations.

END OF BEAR HUNT DEPICTED ON CALENDAR

The end of the bear hunt of January 9, 1931, is depicted in picture form on the calendars of Wm. R. Browning, gasoline distributor and big game hunter of Oakland, which have been given out to a number of his friends and customers during the past several weeks.

The climax to the hunt came after a three' weeks search in the Sang Run section of Garrett county, and more than fifteen hunters took part in the round-up.

The bruin, which weighed 420 pounds, had been in the Sang Run section for four or five years and had destroyed a number of sheep and was successful in eluding those who went on his trail.

Alva DeWitt, who was responsible for the death of the animal, is shown on the right fender of the car above. Those in the hunting party included Mr. DeWitt, Stewart Savage, Wm. R. Browning, Cecil Ramsey, Nathan C. Browning, Ralph Hoye, Samuel J. Thomas, Bryce Thomas, Leonard Carr, Charles Carr, Fred. Hoye, Roy Friend, Parker DeWitt, Jeffrey Hoye, Edward Hoye, Harris Casteel and Richard Sines.

The head and skin of the bear were preserved and are now a prized possession of Mr. Wm. R. Browning.

Your grocery or department store could not possibly maintain a delivery truck for every customer. They must make delivery in turn between certain hours daily except Sundays and holidays.

Your power company must deliver instantly to everyone any hour of the day or night Sundays and holidays included. When you snap the switch you want electricity at once—no waiting for it.

To serve communities and homes over a vast area of thousands of square miles means that your power company must build and maintain a great network of transmission and distribution lines. To do this requires constant attention on the part of expert engineers and service men.

Mrs. James Towler, who recently underwent a minor operation at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, returned to her home in Oakland on Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Gode and two children, of Accident, where Rev. Gode is pastor of Zion Lutheran church, spent Friday afternoon in Oakland.

Mrs. Frank Arnold, of near Sunnyside, who has been ill for several weeks, was taken to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, on Monday, for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl F. Kahl and little son spent the week-end in Wheeling, where they were guests of Rev. and Mrs. D. C Pickens, returning to Oakland Sunday evening.

The Mothers' Circle will meet at the residence of Mrs. F. D. Bittle, Oak street, on Thursday, January 21. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Sallie Burch, of Mountain Lake Park.

Mr. Stewart A. Paugh, of near Swanton, was here Friday with his little granddaughter, who has been ill for some time but who is now improved in health following a slight surgical operation.

The Oakland Civic Club will meet on Tuesday afternoon, January 26, at the home of Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor, at three o'clock. The members will discuss plans for the participation of the club in the celebration of the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of George Washington during 1932. A large attendance is urged.

Attorney E. R. Jones, representing Stuart F. Hamill and G. A. Fraley, executors of the last will and testament of the late Gilmor S. Hamill, went to Annapolis Tuesday night and on Wednesday morning appeared before the Court of Appeals in the contested will case instituted in the local court there by one of the legatees under Mr. Hamill's will.

State and county officers are on the lookout for three young men of the community who are suspected of being implicated in the theft of several raw furs from the automobile of Wm. DeBerry when the vehicle was parked in an alley skirting The Republican building Saturday night. While the evidence against the suspects is not conclusive, arrests are expected in a few days.

Oakland residents, men and women, are invited to motor to Crellin this evening and there patronize a chicken supper to be served by the women of that town for the benefit of the Crellin Boys' Band. The affair will take place in the city hall, which is specially equipped for these social functions with a well equipped kitchen, comfortable chairs and tables. Music by the band will be a feature.

Mrs. Charles A. Fleegle returned to her home in Oakland Sunday evening from Harrisonburg, Va., to which place, accompanied by Mrs. W. W. Groves, of near the Park, she motored last Wednesday in response to a message announcing the death of Mrs. Edna Weekly, wife of Rev. J. W. Weekly, who is known in this section as a preacher in the U. B. church. Mrs. Fleegle and Mrs. Groves were accompanied to Oakland by Mrs. Bessie Robbins, of Lenior, N. C., who will remain here for a visit.

Inventory of Forest Fire Fighting Equipment is Taken By State

The annual inventory of forest fire fighting tools owned by the State of Maryland has just been completed and indicates a total of 2,433 pieces of special hand equipment distributed throughout the counties of the State with a replacement value of $5,083.15.

Assistant Forester Walter J. Quick, Jr., who directed the taking of the inventory, says that most forest wardens are equipped with two special fire rakes with teeth made of mowing machine blades, a back-firing torch and a portable hand pump of 5-gallon capacity.

The inventory shows the tools to be well distributed throughout the State with concentration in the counties having the most severe forest fire problems. Allegany county leads with 359 pieces of hand equipment valued at $639.75. Prince George's county follows with 214 pieces vauled at $444.90, while Garrett county is third with 210 tools valued at $632.75.

J. Faber Hanst, consulting engineer, New York City, has just been notified that he has been awarded a 24-day trip to Europe, with all expenses paid, as the result of a contest conducted by the Phillip's Milk of Magnesia Company. The trip includes passage for two. Mr. Hanst is brother of George H. Hanst and Mrs. Donald R. Sincell, of Oakland.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Mark's Brotherhood was held on Tuesday evening with G. J. Altstetter, the newly elected president of the organization, in charge. A round table discussion on the Brotherhood topic for the month was held with Prof. E. S. Smith directing. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served. It was decided to hold the annual turkey dinner on Thursday, February 11.

Mrs. Mabel Monroe, a daughter of the late Rev. S. E. Jones, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland from 1880 to 1882, visited friends here last Sunday. Mrs. Monroe was born here in the old parsonage, now used as a parish house, and has always had a strong desire to visit Oakland, particularly as her mother, who recently died at Morgantown, had spoken with great pleasure of the days spent in this place. Mrs. Monroe is the wife of a colonel in the United States Army and resides in Portland, Oregon, and is also a niece of Bishop Anderson of the Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Jones will be remembered as a brilliant, scholarly preacher and a well loved pastor of the local church.

STOP THAT COUGH QUICK!

Men, women and children everywhere are amazed at the quick results from the first swallow of Thoxine—a doctor's famous prescription. Acts like magic, on a new principle. Stops the cough at once and goes direct to the internal cause, preventing further trouble.

Taken before retiring Thoxine absolutely prevents night coughing. It gives the same speedy relief for sore throat, too. Safe for the whole family—guaranteed no dope. Money back if not satisfied. 35c. Gonder's Drug Store and all other good drug stores. Advertisement 1, 21; 3, 3.

Lesson for January 24

JESUS AND THE SAMARITAN WOMAN

LESSON TEXT—John 4:1-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Helps a Stranger.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Befriends a Foreigner.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Talking with a Samaritan Woman.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Jesus Deals with Sinners.

I. Jesus at Jacob's Well (vv. 1-6).

The growing popularity of Jesus aroused the envious opposition of the Pharisees which obliged him to leave Judea and go into Samaria. There was another way to reach Galilee, on the eastern side of the Jordan, the one used by many Jews to avoid contact with the despised Samaritans. He "must needs go through Samaria" in order to find this poor sinful woman and the needy citizens of Sychar. The great necessity which was upon him was to seek and to save that which was lost (Luke 19:10).

II. Jesus' Testimony to the Samaritan Woman (vv. 7-26).

1. A favor asked (vv. 7-9). Jesus tactfully made a request which appealed to the woman's sympathy. Not only did the thirst of the weary traveler appeal to her, but the fact that he, being a Jew, asked a favor of her, showed his sympathy for her. In introducing the conversation, he referred to that which was uppermost in her mind; namely, water. This was the divine Teacher's point of contact. He soon passed from earthly water to the water of everlasting life which was in himself.

2. Jesus' tender dealing with this woman (vv. 10-15). He first appealed to her curiosity by declaring, "If thou knewest the gift of God" (v. 10). He knew the deep unrest of the soul of this sinful woman as she went on her way. He knew that if she really knew him, she would believe in him and be saved from her sins. Therefore, he first sought to get her attention. This appeal to her curiosity was followed by a promise which directed her attention to her deepest needs. There is a consciousness of deep need in every soul. In her efforts to satisfy her nature, this poor woman respected neither the law of God nor the rights of men. The deepest need of the soul can only be satisfied by Jesus Christ. The woman's reply, "Sir, give me this water that I thirst not," is the inarticulate cry of every human heart.

3. The woman convicted of her sins (vv. 15-19). Jesus succeeded in arousing her interest, but she did not really understand him. Before she could understand what the water of life is, she must be convicted of her sins. He skillfully gave the command which brought her face to face with the facts of her life that she was unwilling to confess. She did not argue with him, but became a humble inquirer. The soul must be convicted of its sin before there can be conversion.

4. The problem of worship submitted to Christ (vv. 20-24). This she did as soon as she perceived him to be a prophet. This indicates that he was succeeding in bringing her mind to spiritual things. Jesus, knowing the inner life of this woman, told her of the glad time, even then present, when true worshipers could hold intercourse with God anywhere. He showed her that the place of worship is unimportant, that the all-important thing is to have the true conception of God as brought through the Jews. He exposed the folly of a religion of form only, and showed that acceptable worship depends upon the condition of the heart.

5. The woman of Samaria witnessing for Christ (vv. 27-39). When the disciples perceived that Jesus talked with the woman, they marveled, yet they hesitated to ask him for an explanation. The woman left her water pot and went into the city and said, "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" As soon as she was converted she became an enthusiastic missionary.

III. Jesus Testifying to the Citizens of Sychar (vv. 40, 41).

The woman's testimony brought the request from the Samaritans that Jesus tarry with them. He abode with them two days. Though they heard the woman's testimony, their belief was due to Christ's own word (v. 41).

IV. The Samaritans Witnessing for Christ (v. 42).

They declared, "We know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world." They confessed to the woman that their belief was not then due to her testimony, but to having heard him.

Two Bible Keys

Unless a man believe the Bible to be the word of God, containing the truth and nothing but the truth, he cannot understand it in its parts. Unless he believe that Jesus Christ not only has come, but also will yet come again, he cannot understand the Bible as a whole.—Panin.

The Christian's Business

"As the business of the soldier is to fight, so the business of the Christian is to be like Christ."

STEIDING

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Mason have begun housekeeping at Swanton.

John, Paul and Oliver Bowers, Herbert Steiding, Miss Edith Glotfelty and Miss Ethel Glotfelty were calling at the home of Wilmer Fitzwater on Thursday evening.

Lewis Glotfelty was a visitor at the home of James Knox, Accident, recently.

Miss Ruth Fitzwater spent the past week with her grandmother at Deer Park.

Herman Steiding and son Herbert made a business trip to Blaine one day this week. Mr. Steiding visited his brother at Midland over the week-end.

Miss Ethel Glotfelty returned to Baltimore on Sunday after having visited her relatives over the holiday season.

Calvin and Hughie Glotfelty were visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Steiding, on Sunday.

Get Up Nights?

Make This 25c Test

Use this easy bladder physic to drive out impurities and excess acids which cause irritation that results in leg pains, backache, burning and getting up nights. BU-KETS, the bladder physic, containing buchu, juniper oil, etc., works on the bladder pleasantly and effectively as castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box (5 grain size) from your druggist. After four days, if not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. You are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Locally at Joseph E. Harned's, Druggist.—Advertisement 1, 21, 2, 18.

Have You Met The Lady Who Never Reads The Ads?

She doesn't exist. Go into her kitchen. The shelves are filled with familiar brands of soup and soap and foods of all sorts. Her electric iron and ice box have been regularly advertised goods. So have her rugs and towels and table silver.

SOMEBODY must have been reading "The ads"--asking for known quality--buying the goods--giving them leadership.

The Republican which today goes into over 500 more homes than any other newspaper published in Garrett county, is an advertising medium that reaches nearly every buyer and consumer in the County.

Advertisements placed in this publication with regularity are bound to return to the advertiser many times the amount he is asked to pay for this service.

MT. LAKE PARK

There is balm in Gilead! Ordinarily there is just a little bit of envy on the part of those who are compelled to spend the winter in the mountains when others more fortunate are trekking to the usually sunny climes of Florida or California. But it is different this year.

While Los Angeles has experienced for the first time in fifty years, a fall of several inches of snow, there has not been enough in this section to make a good-sized snowball.

Which reminds us that the Council of the Park had a letter recently from Mayor Clayton enclosing a check for a substantial amount to be used for the worthy poor of the community, in which he said also that he would be glad to get back to the sunshine of Garrett county. Well, the feeling is mutual—we will be glad to see him and his good wife.

The depression which, according to the papers, seems to be moro or less severe over the entire world, is not being felt in this immediate community as in most other places. There is still some improvement activity.

The Leighton planing mill in the Weeks and Weeks building in Loch Lynn, is still running on good time.

Mrs. E. L. Winchell is having an addition built to her cottage on Cozy Row which will add much to her now charming residence.

"Shorty" McClelland is improving the residence recently bought by him on the same street, and Mr. M. L. Calhoun is erecting a residence on an extension of Arbutus Drive, near the State road.

Charlie Martin and Joe Callis are busy cutting timber a short distance from Loch Lynn, at the foot of the Little Mountain.

While these activities are not large still they help out in this period of unemployment.

Many people are taking advantage of this unusual weather to rake and burn the leaves remaining on their properties. Fires may be seen in different sections of the Park. Those who have not yet done their spring cleaning might take the hint.

The delphinium, the bee balm and other plants are breaking through the surface of the earth. An occasional dandelion is found in a sheltered spot, and the buds of some of the shrubs have a late April appearance. Even Nature seems determined to show us mortals how insignificant we are.

Lloyd Cook, who runs the barber shop in Loch Lynn is doing his bit. A large sign in his front window announces that free hair cuts will be given to all who apply today (Wednesday), and is he busy? Those who have had to wear their hair done up in curl papers, lacking the necessary two bits, can now appear as city slickers.

And we are just honing to go fishing.

And that just reminds us that we have just finished reading a book, entitled, "Let's Go Fishing", by Dr. Charles Reitel, Mr. J. E. Harned having loaned us his presentation copy. It is one of the most interesting and delightful books it has been our pleasure to read. Even if you don't like to fish, you will like the book.

The special meetings at the U. B. church continue. Rev. Williams, U. B. pastor at Terra Alta, will preach two evenings this week.

Rev. Blakeley, M. E. minister, is quite ill. Rev. Middaugh and Dr. A. Moore are supplying the pulpit while the regular pastor is incapacitated.

Mr. Richard Ream butchered a hog last week weighing 690 pounds dressed. This is a record for this year, we believe.

Philo T. Lipscomb, Charles Baker and Ben Shaffer, Jr., motored on Wednesday to attend the Harrisburg (Pa.) State fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. C. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis B. Fleming, of Fairmont, spent the day here Wednesday, having motored from their homes.

Mr. Frank E. Baker was a visitor here this week.

What is as rare as a June day in January on the mountains

Democratic League Formed

At the Victoria Hotel, Wednesday evening, twenty-two members of the Democratic party of Grantsville met and formed a league, Bernard Evander, of Baltimore, being the organizer. The league has as its officers Dr. N. R. Davis, president; Harvey Gortner, first vice-president; V. L. Bloeher, second vice-president; A. C. Stanton, secretary, and W. D. Getty, treasurer. A board of governors was also elected.

Hunting Club Dinner

The members of tho Meyersdale Hunting Club entertained their wives and friends at their annual turkey dinner at the National Hotel in Grantsville on Wednesday evening at seven o'clock.

Following the dinner, cards and dancing was enjoyed by all present. Music was furnished by an orchestra secured for the purpose.

Woodmen Officers Installed

Grantsville Camp, No. 41, Woodmen of the World, held its installation of officers at the regular meeting of the camp on Wednesday night, January 13, as follows: Council commander, L. G. Bittinger; adjutant lieutenant, J. L. Huff; physician, Dr. N. R. Davis; auditor, J. C. Miller; banker, Wm. Winterberg; financial secretary, Dr. T. O. Broadwater; escort, W. M. Schaefer; sentry, Charles Stanton.

Telephone Company Elects Officers

The Springs Mutual Telephone Co. held its annual election of officers on Saturday afternoon, January 16, when the following were re-elected for the ensuing year: President, C. E. Bittner; vice-president, D. I. King; manager, J. J. Maust; secretary and treasurer, H. S. Yoder; auditors, G. W. Diefenbach and Floyd J. Miller.

Relief Committee Contributors

The Grantsville Relief Committee has received cash contributions as follows: Grantsville Fire Department, $18.50; C. U. Edwards, $5.00; Simon Myers, 50c.; Miss Kate Bannatyne, $5.00; Grantsville Choral and Dramatic Club, $1.85; Mrs. A. C. Stanton, $1.00; Mrs. E. C. Michael, $1.

All cash donations and food and clothing donations will be very much appreciated by the committee having the relief work in hand.

A representative of the committee will be at the school building every Tuesday and Friday between two and four o'clock to distribute needed supplies to those who apply and are found to be worthy of help. Nothing will be given except at the hours above specified.

P.-T. A. Meeting

A very interesting meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was held in the high school building Monday night. Dr. George A. Clarke, county health officer, gave a splendid talk on his work in the county and among the schools. A short health play and a number of songs were rendered by the children in the primary grades of the school.

Missionary Society Meeting

Mrs. W. E. Stanton entertained the members of the Reformed Church Missionary Society at her home, Little Crossings, Friday night. There were fourteen members and two visitors in attendance. A very interesting talk was made by Rev. M. A. Keefer.

A reorganization of the society was also accomplished at this meeting by the election of the following officers: President, Mrs. Fred. Livengood; vice-president, Miss Ruth Keller; secretary, Mrs. Byron Bender; treasurer, Mrs. J. U. Stanton. A delicious lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

Home Hygeine Class

Mrs. Cole, county health nurse, has organized a home hygiene class which met at the home of Miss Christina Winterberg on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Cole has stated that anyone interested in home hygiene work and desiring to join the class will be welcome. The class will meet every two weeks until the course of instruction is completed. The next meeting will be Wednesday, January 22.

Activities of Girl Scouts

Mrs. Harley Spoerlein, captain of the Girl Scouts organization here, is giving a first aid course every Monday evening for the benefit of second class Scouts. The tenderfoot Scouts are studying their tests under the supervision of Miss Lena Custer. To test their ability of the wood-craft signs they went on a hike and left signs for the second class Scouts to follow and they also showed great skill in touring the trail.

The troop has re-registered at the National headquarters. New tenderfoot Sehouts who have registered are Rita Blocher, Florence Davis and Rosella Hanft.

On Saturday, January 30, the members of the troop will hold a bake sale at the home of Mrs. Ella Keller.

ONE KILLED BY AGED MAN IN ATTEMPTED STICK-UP

Gorman Lewis,of Pierce,Shot in Attempt to Rob Aged Resident of Leadmine, W. Va.

BROTHERS IN PACT TO ROB

Gorman Lewis is dead, and his brother, Lincoln Lewis, is in the Tucker county jail at Parsons, W. Va., as the result of an alleged attempt to hold up and rob John Alexander Evans, an 85-year-old citizen of Leadmine, a small hamlet about 18 miles south of Oakland, on Saturday night.

The two Lewis brothers, formerly living at Crellin, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lewis, but more recently living on a farm near Elliottsville, Pa., according to a confession given to the State Police by the surviving brother, left their home about 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and went direct to the Evans home at Leadmine, arriving there about 7:00 p. m. It is understood that the report was current that Mr. Evans had lost confidence in the banks and kept considerable money about his person and the brothers, according to the story told by Lincoln Lewis, said they needed one hundred dollars and thought they would take this amount from the old man.

According to the alleged confession the two brothers went to the house and knocked at the door of the home and when Mr. Evans opened it the one brother, a powerful man weighing 200 pounds, grappled with him, and the other brother stepped inside and blew out the kerosene light, leaving the room in utter darkness. During the struggle which ensued after Evans had been attacked, he was forced into a corner where, unknown to the would-be robbers, a loaded shot-gun was standing, and Mr. Evans seized the firearm, pushed it against the side of his assailant and pulled the trigger, killing him almost instantly.

The other man, Lincoln Lewis, hearing the shot, threw his flashlight on the scene, and seeing his brother dead or dying, jerked the gun from the hands of Mr. Lewis, threw it to the floor, and leaving his car in front of the door, walked to the home of another brother, Dewey Lewis, at the mining town of Pierce, about ten miles distant.

Mr. Evans, as soon as possible after the struggle, went to the outside of the house and fired a revolver several times to attract the attention of his neighbors and to summon assistance. A number of neighbors responded, the authorities were notified and Sheriff Cooper, State's Attorney Bolton and State Police Ancell went to the scene of the tragedy. The two brothers were recognized by Mr. Evans, in spite of their masks made of bandana handkerchiefs which they had slipped over their faces while yet on the porch of the home. After getting the details, the officers went to the Dewey Lewis home at Pierce and demanded Lincoln Lewis' surrender. He immediately gave himself up and was taken to the Parsons jail for the action of the next grand jury.

It is not thought that the Lewis brothers anticipated a tragic ending to their escapade and seemed to think it would be a very simple matter to overpower their intended victim, Mr. Evans, take what money they needed and make their getaway.

The surviving brother seemed completely upset at the turn matters took and is reported to have made a clear confession of the entire affair.

A son of Mr. Evans was killed during the World War and his insurance was paid to his father. In some way the report was spread through the countryside that he always kept a large sum of money at his home.

Pamphlets For Distribution Received by County Agent

Approximately 2,500 farmers' bulletins, covering practically all subjects, pertaining to agriculture in Garrett county, have been received by John H. Carter, county agent, and will be distributed to anyone interested. The bulletins were sent to this county through Hon. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, U. S. Senator from Maryland.

The 1931 yearbooks, sent out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are also expected soon, Mr. Carter said, and will be presented to anyone who wants them. Twenty-five of these books will be sent, and more can be obtained if necessary.

The Relief Committee needs more donations. Help them if you can.

THREE INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION ON NEGRO MT.

Meyersdale Man Suffering From Fracture of the Skull

Three persons were injured, one seriously, when two automobiles crashed head-on shortly before 9 o'clock Sunday morning on the west slope of Negro Mountain, west of Grantsville, on the National Highway.

William H. Hann, of Meyersdale, Pa., driver of one of the machines, was taken to the Meyersdale Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull, severe lacerations about the chin and head, a fractured knee and a split tongue. Jacob J. Oester, of Grantsville, driver of the other car, was cut about the face. Beulah Hetrick, also of Grantsville, who was in Oester's car, sustained a deep laceration on the right leg and is suffering from concussion of the brain. They were attended by Dr. N. R. Davis at Grantsville.

An investigation was made by Officer G. J. Miller, of the State police. Hann was driving westward, while Oester was traveling in the opposite direction. Both cars were badly damaged.

TWO BROUGHT BACK HERE FROM VIRGINIA FOR TRIAL

Are Charged With Attempting to Hold up Filling Station

Harold Russell and Wesley Hatfield, two of the three persons who are charged with having attempted to hold up the Fort Pendelton service station employe, Adam Pritts, on December 12, and who were taken to Virginia some time ago to stand trial there on similar charges, have been returned to the Garrett county jail. Deputies Samuel Cole and Clarence Spear brought them to Oakland on Saturday.

Ortel Hatfield, the ehird person captured on the same charge, was convicted in the Virginia courts recently, but Russell and Hatfield were acquitted. They are now being held in the Garrett county jail until the March term of court.

Lloyd McRobie, of Swanton, is in the county jail on a bad check charge preferred by J. W. Walter, of Deer Park. No hearing has been held.

E. L. Rumbles, of near Red House, is wanted by authorities on a forgery charge. Rumbles is in jail at Thomes, W. Va., on a similar charge, it has been learned. He is said to have taken the voucher of one of the county dependents and to have had it cashed under pretense that the defendant himself was ill and could not present it in person.

Dale Shahan, of Terra Alta, was fned $2 and costs this morning before Justice W. A. Gonder on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. The arrest was made by policeman B. B. Nethkin.

Masonic Lodge Installs New Officers on Tuesday Night

Delbert Davis was installed worshipful master of Oakland Lodge, No. 192, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, at the regular communication of that body held on Tuesday evening. Gerard Everstine, of Cumberland, grand lecturer of Maryland, was the installing officer.

Other officers installed included H. C. Leighton, senior warden; George Hanst, junior warden; Harland L. Jones, secretary, and Dr. W. W. Grant, treasurer.

Appointed officers who were also invested with the jewels of their respective stations, included Scott W. Shirer, senior deacon; Milburn W. Mann, junior deacon; Robert T. Hoffman, senior steward; Thomas A. Gonder, junior steward; Rev. W. B. Brock, chaplain, and Stanton T. Whipkey, tyler.

S. Townshend Naylor, retiring worshipful master, was presented with a Past Master's jewel.

Following the presentation of the jewel, which was made by Walter W. Dawson, Mr. Everstine gave a short address on a Masonic subject.

Ships Birds To Venezuela

Britten Martin, of Mountain Lake Park, who is developing a blood tested poultry flock of Park Strain Barred Plymouth Rocks, and who is gaining recognition in poultry circles of the country, last week received an order for several cockerels to be shipped to Arthur J. Nelson, of Maracaibo, Venezuela, South America.

The shipment was made to New York by rail, and from there by boat to the destination. He has also shipped birds to distant states.

TO MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR SCOUT ANNIVERSARY

Twenty-Second Birthday of Scouting To Be Celebrated by Local Troop Feb. 7 to 13

PLAN UNIQUE FEATURES

The wearing of the Scout uniform, mobilization for the purpose of doing a community good turn, an open troop meeting for parents and scouters, attendance at church in a body and a winter overnight hike, are to be emphasized in the local scout troop during the twenty-second anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, February 7 to 13.

Arrangements for the celebration of this annual event will be made and plans discussed at the regular meeting of the troop on Friday evening. The anniversary will mark the 22nd birthday of the Boy Scout movement in the United States and the 24th birthday of scouting throughout the world.

The scout uniform will be worn every day during anniversary week, and a program will be outlined for each day. On Sunday, February 7, the troop will exemplify the twelfth law, "A Scout is reverent," by attending services in a body at St. Matthew's Episcopal church where Rev. D. C. Trimble will speak. In the afternoon at 1:30 the scouts will assemble and have their picture taken.

The regular meeting night will be on Thursday, February 11, and mobilization of the scouts for a community good turn will be held on Saturday morning. Following this an overnight hike will be taken to the permanent camp at Deep Creek Lake.

Merit Badges Awarded

Five merit badges were awarded to second and first class scouts at the regular meeting of the court of honor held on Monday evening. H. L. Jones, chairman of the court, presided.

Following examination, the merit badges were awarded as follows: Bernard Gonder, Jr., photography; Gerald Iman, swimming; Carroll Casteel, firemanship; Richard Gonder, first aid; Harry Stemple, Jr., firemanship.

Becomes Tenderfoot

At the meeting of the troop last Friday Robert Browning passed his requirements and was enrolled as a Tenderfoot Scout.

GARRETT COUNTY WATERS ARE STOCKED WITH PIKE

State Plans Fisherman's Paradise for Deep Creek Lake

With a view to creating a fisherman's paradise at Deep Creek Lake, Garrett county, the State Conservation Commission during the past year stocked the waters with more than 00,000 small pike.

Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner, announced this on Tuesday, in his report in the department's annual distribution of game fish in the waters of Maryland.

Besides the supply in Deep Creek Lake an additional 110,000 fish were placed at different points throughout the State. The largest other single distribution was in Middle Creek, in Frederick county, which was allotted 12,000 crapple. The total figure does not include Conowingo Lake.

491 BIRTHS, 211 DEATHS ARE RECORDED IN COUNTY

Male Births Outnumber Those of Female by 63—Deaths of Children Reach Seventy-two

14,670 BIRTHS IN STATE

There were 491 births in the county in 1931, an increase of 13 over 1930, and 211 deaths recorded, a decrease of 2 over 1930, according to a report of Dr. George E. Clarke, county health officer.

Of the deaths 139 were adults and 72 were children and babies under 14 years of age. The death rate for the county in 1931 was 11.1. Of the births, 277 were males and 214 were females. The birth rate for 1931 was 25.8. There were 42 deaths of infants under one year, making the infant mortality rate 85.5, a decrease of 14.1 in 1930. Of these 42 deaths, 24 occurred in one month. The greatest cause of death was early infancy, which claimed 14, Dr. Clarke stated. Next in importance was dirrhea and enteritis, with 8 deaths. There were 15 stillbirths reported in the county.

For all the counties of Maryland there were 14,670 births reported. This gives a birthrate of 17.5 per thousand live births, by far the lowest on record. Physicians attended only 84.2 per cent of the total births, while midwives showed a marked increase over 1930.

Deaths of mothers during childbirth remained about the same, that is 4.6 per one thousand live births. The infant mortality rate, that is the number of babies dying before reaching 1 year of age, was slightly higher than 1930. The rate in 1931 was 86.4 per one thousand live births. Thirty-six percent of these infants died of malformations and diseases of early infancy.

There were 10,272 deaths from all causes in the counties during 1931. The death rate was 12.2 per thousand population.

Deaths from infectious diseases, cancer, diabetes, cerebral hemorrhage and diseases of the respiratory system and digestive system all showed an increase over 1930. The death rate in typhoid fever declined from 9 in 1930 to 7.5 in 1931, and in tuberculosis from 9.7 in 1930 to 9.5 in 1931.

Grantsville High Has Lowest Percentage of Failures

Average percentage of failures in studies among the students of the high schools of Garett county was 6.75, according to a report of the teachers of the six high schools to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent. The report covered the period to November 13, 1931.

Grantsville had the lowest percentage of failures with 3.88 percent, while Kempton was highest with 8.96. Accident's failures were 4.33 percent; Friendsville, 5.35; Kitzmiller, 6.86, and Oakland, 8.10.

Suffered Head Injury

Samuel Flannigan, a woodsman engaged in cutting timber at a point east of Oakland, was painfully hurt last Friday afternoon when a falling tree limb struck him on the head producing a scalp wound of considerable length. He was brought to Oakland where his injury was dressed by Dr. McComas.

MINER DECAPITATED BY B. & O. FREIGHT TRAIN

Samuel Shillingburg, Bloomington, Killed Friday Night

Samuel Milford Shillingburg, 53, miner, employed by the R. J. Ross Coal Company at Bloomington, Garrett county, was killed Friday evening about nine o'clock by a Baltimore and Ohio eastbound freight train near his home at Beryl, near Bloomington. He was decapitated. It is thought that the dead was sitting on the railroad track and was run down by the train. He had left his home about twenty minutes before the accident occurred.

Walter W. Dawson, State's Attorney; Sheriff Walter H. Haenftling and Coroner W. A. Gonder, of Oakland, made an investigation of the facts surrounding the death of the man and decided that his death was accidental and an inquiry by a jury was unnecessary.

Surviving are one son, Andrew J. Shillingburg, near Beryl, and three daughters, Mrs. John Tice, Elk Garden, W. Va.; Mrs. John Jose, near Beryl, and Mrs. Blanche Reel, of Keyser, W. Va. He also leaves four brothers, Jerry, of Piedmont, W. Va.; Oliver, Midland; Andrew, Kempton, and Oscar, of Blaine, W. Va.

OAKLAND HIGH WILL MEET CUMBERLAND TEAM FRIDAY

Green Street Junior High to Play Double Header Here

Oakland High School basketball teams will meet Green Street Junior High of Cumberland tomorrow evening in the Oakland High auditorium. The girls' contest will begin at 7:30 and the boys' game will get under way at 8:15.

Both Oakland High teams were defeated Tuesday night by Thomas, at the local auditorium. The girls' contest was in doubt until the final whistle and the score stood 23-21.

In the boys' game Thomas gained a big lead in the first half, 21 to 8, but the Oakland boys rallied in the second half and outscored their opponents, the final score being 37-27.

Both the first and second teams of the boys were victorious last Thursday night against Accident Independents and the Accident second team at Friendsville. The second team won 16 to 15, while the first team was victorious 30 to 14.

Exams at School

Examinations are being held this week at the High school and as a result activities of the student body have been limited.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES FOR PYTHIANS BEGIN FRIDAY

Will Present Program; Anniversary Night to be February 19

In opening the social activities of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, the entertainment committee, composed of Wade Hinebaugh, William Gibson and Grover C. Stemple, has prepared a program for Friday evening at Castle Hall.

The program will include numbers by the Oakland quartet, the organization being composed of Wade H. Hinebaugh, Jesse J. Ashby, Cecil Smith and William L. Gibson. String musical numbers will come from the violin and guitar of two local artists. Group singing will have its place. A prize will be given and there will be a short address by a good speaker.

It is the desire of the lodge to have some kind of entertainment or contest each week for the members who attend.

Plans are now under way to make Anniversary Night, February 19, one of the best affairs held in recent years. Besides observing the birthday of the order, the event will be marked with the presentation of Veterans' jewels to members of twenty-five years continuous membership. There will be about twenty of these jewels given out. The Grand Lodge officers of the State have been invited to attend this celebration.

Washington's birthday will also be observed on this night and a short program has been arranged in keping with the custom. There will be refreshments.

Three Added to Red Cross Roll

Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman for the Red Cross Roll Call received $3.00 this week for membership. The new members are Miss Virginia Kalbaugh, Kempton; the 4th and 5th grades in the Kempton school, and E. W. Kelso, Mountain Lake Park.

INVESTIGATION OF COUNTY DEPENDENTS BEING MADE

Ninety People On List Require Levy of $10,000 or More Each Year, Public Records Show

LAWS HAVE BEEN ABUSED

As a side issue in the work of the county-wide relief organization program, but at the same time a very important one, Miss Susan H. Dabney, a member of the Children's Aid Society of Baltimore, is now in Oakland making an investigation of the conditions surrounding the people on the county indigent list, and whether o rnot they are worthy of the help which they are now receiving each month from the County Commissioners.

Miss Dabney is an associate worker of Miss Katherine T. Kirwan, who has been the head of the relief work of the county since about a month before Christmas and who has just returned from her home to continue her work here.

Ninety Dependents on List

There are ninety people on the county dependent list and an appropriation of approximately $10,000 is made in the annual levy to cover the cost of their maintenance. Expenses incident to the dependents have gone as high as $13,000, it is stated.

Miss Dabney will make a personal investigation of each individual case, inquire into the reasons why they should be supported by the county, whether or not they are able to work, the size of the respective families and whether or not they are as represented on the record books in the Commissioners' office.

List Has Grown

The dependent list has grown so rapidly in recent years that the Commissioners felt that a thorough investigation was advisable, even though many petitions for county aid had the required five signatures of citizens and taxpayers of the community in which the applicant or applicants resided.

Taken Advantage Of

That this requirement has been taken advantage of is shown in the fact that several weeks ago a man who receives aid from the county paid his automobile tax and ordered his 1932 license plates from the voucher issued to him by the county, according to County Treasurer J. J. Ashby, Jr.

Several unworthy cases have been stricken from the books within the past several weeks for reasons developed by thorough investigation, it was learned from the Commissioners yesterday.

This investigation is being made at the suggestion of the Commissioners and in keeping with the policy of the relief workers that nobody should receive financial assistance, food or clothing, without a payment of some kind in return, providing those seeking aid were able to work.

Those on the list of dependents who are incapacitated from work, will not be affected.

SERVING OF LUNCHES IS INSTITUTED IN SCHOOLS

Under-nourished Children to Get Benefit of Substantial Food

With the ultimate aim in view of having every child in Garrett county in a healthful condition, Miss Katherine T. Kirwan, head of relief work in the county, in cooperation with the central and district relief committees and the county health department, has instituted the serving of luncheons in the schools in several mining sections of the county.

These luncheons are given especially for children who are under-nourished and under weight, and when well under way luncheons will be given also to pre-school children and mothers, Miss Kirwan stated.

Schools in Crellin, Kitzmiller, Vindex, Shallmar and two other mining towns are receiving lunches at present and they will be served at Kempton, beginning Monday. The lunches are served by the Parent-Teacher Associations of the schools, and the food is supplied through the relief committees and outside organizations which have sent money and clothing here to be distributed.

Miss Kirwan has been assisted in organizing this work by Miss Alice Davis, of the Friends Service committee, who has been stationed in the Morgantown area for the past several months.

GROUNDHOG IS UNWILLING TO PROPHESY THIS YEAR; PERSONAL INTERVIEW AT SANG RUN IS DISCLOSED

Arctomys Monax Wants To Give Up Job To Some Other Forest Denizen In Garrett County

A personal interview with Arctomys Monax, familiarly known as Groundhog, at his home in the Sang Run cave on Monday of this week, as to his chances of fooling the people again this year with his capers on February second, brought to light a number of strange circumstances.

He became irritable upon first being roused, but finally admitted he was up against a stump this year. With weather conditions in Garrett county such as they are—dandelions in front yards, onions in the garden, rose ramblers with new leaves, buds budding, temperatures of spring—he said he didn't know whether to take a chance next Tuesday and come out of his hole or not.

"My sagacity as a weather prognosticator isn't any too well fixed any more, as I have fooled them several times in the past, and if I attempt it this year I may get all crossed up," Arctomys stated.

"Furthermore, no matter if the sun does or does not shine, I can't forecast that there will be six more weeks of winter weather, because we haven't had any yet, and I can't show them that spring will soon be here, because it's been here ever since Christmas.

"I'll be willing to stay in my hole if any other forest creature wants to take over my job. I wouldn't be considered such a prophet anyhow, if it hadn't been for the Germans. In Germany it was the badger who snooped around on Candlemas Day and when emigrants came to America and found no badger they substituted me just because I stir about during a winter warm spell and then return to my den for a snooze. And now, if you are thru interviewing me I'll go back to the Mrs. If she awakens and finds me gone, it'll be just too bad."

Lesson for January 31

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDE

LESSON TEXT—John 6:1-14: 32-37; 48-51.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeds a Hungry Crowd.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Did With a Boy's Lunch.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sympathy of Jesus With Human Need.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Bread of Life.

I. Jesus' Compassion on the Multitude (vv. 1-5a, cf. Matt. 14:14).

The sight of n crowd always excited the Lord's sympathy. He knew that they were as shepherdless sheep (Mark 6:34). Besides, they were so ignorant that they had no appreciation of him. Added to this was their physical hunger. This condition aroused the Saviour's pity. How true this is of the multitude today! The crowd surrounds about us as shepherdless sheep, having no one to care for them. Yet down deep in their hearts is a hunger for God and the truth.

II. Jesus' Conference With the Disciples Touching the People's Need (vv. 5b-9),

The inquiry of Philip was not for the Lord's benefit, for he knew what he would do (v. 6). His object was:

1. To teach them their sense of obligation to the multitude. We all need to he taught the wonderful truth that God has made man his partner in the salvation of the world. We are workers together with God (II. Cor. 6:1). It is the very highest privilege as well as a most solemn obligation to cooperate with God in saving the millions who are groping in darkness.

2. To teach them their helplessness in the face of such great need and responsibility. The loaves nnd fishes which the lad had provided for his lunch were as nothing in the presence of five thousand men besides women and children. Well might Andrew exclaim: "What are these nmong so many?" It is a good thing to realize our true needs that we may he driven to Christ who is able to supply them.

3. To teach them that their sufficiency is from the Lord. Without him we can do nothing (John 15:5). Christians can no more carry on the Lord's work of themselves than the branch can hear fruit without the vine. The vine supplies the life and strength for the production of fruit. Philip's arithmetic was of no nse in the face of such need. He had to fall back upon the Lord Jesus who has all power.

III. Jesus' Method of Feeding the Five Thousand (vv. 10-13).

He paused to give thanks for the scant supply, thus teaching ns that we should always bring our abilities and gifts to him that he might hless them to his use.

1. The Lord's part was to biess and break the bread, even to create the needed supply (v. 11). The disciples could not perform this part. The same kind of hread was provided for all, rich and poor, young and old.

2. The disciples' part was to distribute that which he had hiessed and consecrated (v. 11). This is true of the Christian worker today. We are not responsihle for the supply but are responsihle for its distrihution to all those who are hungry and perishing for the hread of life.

3. The people's part was to sit down and eat (v. 10). They had no part in the provision. neither in its distrihntion, hut only to take from the hands of the disciples and eat that which the Lord had provided. This is exactly our situation. The people are responsihle for taking and eating of the hread of life; that is, faith and obedience are required of them.

4. The superahundance of God's grace (v. 13). When all had eaten to the full, much was left. This shows that the gospel is ample for the salvation of the world.

IV. The Effect of This Miracle (v. 14).

They recognized him at once as the prophet who should come. They believed him for his works' sake.

V. Jesus, the Bread of Life (vv. 32-37, 48-51).

1. Christ is to the soul what bread is to the hody.

2. How to obtain this hread. It is by coming to Christ and believing on him.

3. The hlessed issue of takiag this bread:

a. The one who eats this bread shall never hunger or thirst.

b. He shall never die. The one who eats the bread of heaven, that is, the one who receives Jesus Christ, has eternal life.

SOME THOUGHTS

He who prays, rises from prayer a better man.

Unconfessed sin in the soul is like a bullet in the body.

Wonder why some people insist on spelling Christian with a small "c"?

The more a stone is wounded by the hand of the engraver, the greater beauty is produced.

From One Who Also Bathes

My fan mail is increasing. This week came a letter from someone who also takes baths, and who is a near neighbor. It reads:

Dear Scoop:—

I am so delighted to know that I don't stand alone in my own bathtub troubles. After reading of your predicament I sent out a questionaire and find that it is a general nuisanein our section of town, and unless we abolish dish washing the only cure I can suggest is to have the tub put in the cellar near the coal bin and furnace.

This, of course, has its disadvantages, but who wouldn't put up with a lot of disadvantages in order to get a stream of water when you want it. I say let the dish washers do the snorting.

Yours for satisfaction in tubs,

Another fan letter from one of my woman admirers, giving warning to the unmarried ones:

"Ladies, this is leap year, set aside every four years as an open season for man-hunting. Stubborn males who have with great care and cunning eluded you thus far are your fair game. You have the right to pursue them with whatever tactics you may consider proper and effective.

"The male by nature is a liberty-loving creature and kicks against the matrimonial traces. He resents the bit, but the woman has to break him to the harness and compel him to draw his share of the burden. So go after him and marry him. Leap year offers not only an opportunity but an obligation.

Legalized Leap Year

In 1228 a law was enacted in Scotland, stating that:

It is statut and ordaint that during the rein of hir maist blissit Mageste, for ilk yeare knowne as lepe yeare, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeake ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum ane pundis or less, as his estait may be; except and awis gif he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ane ither woman he then shall be free.

Now here's a good chance for legislators.

Hereafter, when some people get an invitation to dinner over the telephone they are going to make sure they know who the hostess is. Last week three ladies were invited out. They called at one place and found their mistake and used the telephone for five inquiries before finding out where to go. And the hostess had to wait an hour and a half.

WASHINGTON AND LEE'S FANCY DRESS BALL TO BE BROADCAST

FOR the first time in the history of Washington and Lee University, the music for its Fancy Dress Ball will be heard throughont the country on a sponsored program. The music, which this year is to be furnished by Bernie Cummins and his Orchestra, will be brought to radio listeners from coast to coast through the sponsorship of the Lucky Strike Dance Hour on the evening of January 28th, beginning at 10:00 o'clock, E.S.T., over a nationwide NBC network. The orchestra will he introduced from New York hy Walter Winchell, famous newspaper columnist.

Washington and Lee's Fancy Dress Ball, which was started 26 years ago, in celebration of the hirth of George Washington, whose name coupled with that of Robert E. Lee has been the name of the University for the last 62 years, takes on added significance this year because it marks the celebration of the 200th Anniversary of the hirth of the country's first President.

The fame of these fancy dress balls has spread so widely since they were started 26 years ago that they are now the hest known college dances in the South.

One of the features of the broadcast on January 28th will he the playing of the University's famous "Washington and Lee Swing," without which none of its social or athletic functions would he complete. When the fact is considered that over 200 other colleges and schools throughout the country also use this famous song in their student activities, it is fairly safe to point out that its swinging refrain will be familiar to radio listeners throughout the country.

The hroadcast of the music of this unique Southern function, direct from its picturesque and historic setting in Lexington, Virginia, promises to be one of the highlights in the nationwide celebration of the George Washington bicentennial.

FRIENDSVILLE

Hello, everybody! This station having been closed by common consent for quite a long time, has been permitted to broadcast temporarily. For the present we will probably be known as station GAS, and broadcasting on a wave length of 2-0-2. But we are going to petition the board for a new name. How would E-C-O-N-O-M-Y sound to all listeners in? Oh, yes; we also want a shorter wave length, too, one under 1-9-0. Would this not sound good to all taxpayers?

Certainly we have a grouch on, after reading pages 2 and 3 of The Republican last week.

The coal mine of the McCullough Coal Corporation has run a few days this week after having been closed down for the past two weeks.

Mrs. Orval Rush, who is a patient at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, is improving rapidly and expects to be back home the latter part of this week.

A. E. Fox and son Wilbur attended a basketball game in Cumberland Saturday evening.

Dr. A. J. Mason, who has been confined to his home for several weeks resulting from a fracture of his leg when he was struck by an automobile, is now able to be outside the house a short time each day.

Many people have taken advantage of the reduced prices B. F. Schroyer is offering at his Anniversary Sale. Too bad more of the merchants do not "year themselves" occasionally.

In a nicely contested game between the LaSalle Seniors of Cumberland, and the Friendsville High School, the latter were victorious, 24 to 18.

The fire company is getting good and efficient practice by having a false fire alarm sounded about once a week. But will this continue and do more harm than good?

The Friendsville Band, which was reorganized recently, is showing rapid improvement. There are nearly forty members at this time and several others contemplating entering as soon as there are available instruments. Mr. F. G. Fox, the former director, is again directing. Mr. Meshack Casteel has the beginners under his tutelage.

A landslide occurred along the State road about a mile east of town early Sunday morning, which blocked traffic several hours. It required the work of six men all day Sunday to clear the highway.

Municipal Nominations

At a meeting of the citizens of the town, the following residents were nominated for municipal office: For Mayor, W. W. Savage, N. Speelman; for councilmen, only three of whom are to be elected: Paul Friend, M. J. Forsythe, George Hileman, L. J. Lytle, T. B. Hinebaugh and Geo: Savage. Those now serving on the council are N. Speelman, mayor; A. E. Fox, president; F. C. McCullough, Dr. W. C. Nedrow, John R. Fike, L. J. Lytle and Henry Shevel. The last mentioned three members of the body having served their terms of two years, will retire. The election will occur in the council room on February 2, 1932,

The town is still in debt several thousand dollars, and in making your choice, Mr. Voter, only the candidates who will pledge themselves to retire at least one bond each year should be selected. And this should be done by making a geneal retrenchment of funds so as not to raise the present tax rate of seventy-five cents on the one hundred dollars.

Mr. Walter Coddington, of Mountain Lake Park, is improving the property which he recently purchased from the Mrs. McKean estate with a new garage.

The fill on the road leading from the State road at Hileman's to Rush's has been broadened to accommodate two way traffic. The folks are probably getting ready for a lot of traffic up that way.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. A. J. Black on February 4.

The Sunday school class of John Williams, assisted by several truck owners, improved the driveway at the Methodist church by hauling and scattering several loads of ashes from the McCullough mine.

The mid-eyar examinations are now in progress in the high and grammar schools of the town and county.

STOP NIGHT COUGHING

Ordinary cough remedies do not reach the conditions which cause night coughing, but Thoxine, a doctor's famous prescription, does. It stops the cough within a few minutes and goes direct to the internal cause, preventing further trouble.

Taken before retiring Thoxine absolutely prevents night coughing. It gives the same speedy relief for sore throat, too. Safe for the whole family—guaranteed no dope. Money back if not satisfied. 35c. Gonder's Drug Store and all other good drug stores. —Advertisement. jan 28, mar. 8.

Lovemaking on a Painter's Ladder

By JANE OSBORN

(©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

IN CASES of serious illness Doctor Lanning did not attend members of his own family, but when Martha had hysterics that night in midsummer when Lanning accidently enconntered her in the act of eloping with Peter Letson he did not consider her condition serious enough to reqnire the services of an outside physician. Having hysterics, under the circnmstances, was entirely normal. But even normal symptoms needed treatment, so after Peter had been dismissed with a curt good night from Doctor Lanning and a look of mute and tearful entreaty from Martha, Doctor Lanning escorted his sobbing daughter to her room, gave her a drink of cold water and told her to go to bed and to stay in her room for two or three days.

The interception of Martha's elopement had been quite accidental as far as Doctor Lanning was concerned. He had been roused at midnight hy the ringing of his telephone. A conntry patient wanted him to come at once and rather drowsily, bnt with all speed, the doctor had put on his clothes and had gone downstairs and out to the garage to get his car when he heard whispers in the driveway ahead of him. Before he even realized that the two young people standing there were his danghter, Martha, and Peter Letsor, he heard a shrill shriek of alarm. He knew the voice was Martha's and Martha was standing there in hat and light coat with a little traveling bag.

The really surprising thing about it all, as Doctor Lanning thought after he had got his daughter to promise that she wcuid not make another attempt to elope during his absence, and had finally started off in his car, was that there was no sane reason why Martha snd Peter should have planned an elopement.

Doctor Lanning didn't realize then that the elopement had come as the result of Martha's desire to have what she considered a romantic marriage. And now for the first time Doctor Lanning felt a decided disapproval of Peter, and when the next morning Peter telephoned to ask permission to speak with him and Martha the doctor curtly refused. He also warned the young msn that any letters or messages he might send to his daughter would not he delivered. She was at preseat confined to her room in a state of nervous excitement.

From a distance Peter watched the Lanning house, and when he saw the doctor's car start ont on his morning round of calls he cautiously drew near. Painters were at work on the honse—looking at them Peter had a bright idea. And when Doctor Lanning retnrned sn hour or so later he might have observed that whereas three men had been working on ladders and scaffolds when he left there were now four.

About ten o'clock the next morning Doctor Lanning backed his car out of the garage and down the driveway that ran close to the house and then to the road. Martha's room was on that side just above the driveway—Doctor Lanning had gone to the garage from a back door of the house and had not noticed a painter's long ladder braced against the side of the house with hase planted in the gravel driveway. Doctor Lanning reversed his car. He hacked and then ahove the sound of his engine he heard a shout, a rattling of wood and a splash of something limp snd liquid on the top of his car. This was the pail of paint that had heen held hy the painter on the ladder which the car hit as the doctor backed from the garage. The ladder lay flat on the ground.

He looked anxiously to see if he had extinguished some poor painter when he knocked the ladder down. He looked up and there he saw a tall young man in white overalls clinging desperately to the window sill—and then he saw two fair arms stretch out the open window and, after a few seconds when it seemed as if the young man might lose his hold on the window sill entirely, his tall lank figure was drawn into the house.

Doctor Lanning hurried upstairs and into his daughter's room. He opened the door and to his amazement saw Martha standing there with the painter's arms about her—aad the painter was Peter Letson.

Doctor Lanning began to laugh. So did Peter, and finally Martha.

"I had to see Martha—to see what she wanted me to do about the elopement," stammered Peter, "and since you wouldn't let me even write, I got the painter to give me a job. I bribed him for the privilege of working on this side of the house. I have spent most of my time for two days painting the frames of Martha's windows. The paint is so thick there I dare say it will have to be scraped off—"

"And then I came aloag and knocked the ladder out from under you," laughed the doctor. "It was very inconsiderate of you to let the paint drop on the top of my car—that will have to be scraped off, too." He paused and looked whimsically at Martha and Peter. "You're not going to try another elopement, are you? No objections to a regular wedding—any time you aad Martha want it."

IN THE WORLD THAT WAS 'FLOWERLAND'

By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service.)

FROM the time Ruth Adlon was fifteen, and had "quit school," as the saying goes among the Rnth Adlons, she had been an "instructor" in a dance hall known as "Flowerland." It was one of those resorts where, for an entrance fee, you may purchase a strip of tickets; six for twenty-five cents. Each one of these entitles yon to a partner for one dance number. There were about fifteen girls and six or seven men employed in the same capacity as Ruth. They were professional partners.

Ruth Adlon's fervor for the dance was something that seemed to surpass her own vitality. She was tireless. Fragile, to what seemed a breaking point, nervous, slender, and of a wax-like pallor, her feet, even on those rare occasions when she sat on the sidelines, when a partner had not claimed her with his ticket, teetered. The rhythm of the jazz music seemed to run through her veins, and to keep her constantly excited. She was one of the best (if not the best) dancers at Flowerland.

The system there was on a commission basis. Your income consisted of a percentage on the number of tickets you collected during nn evening. Ruth earned more than any girl on the staff. She had her reguinr customers, and while among them were many who excited her rishility, her nversion or even her repulsion, in the main Ruth enjoyed her work. She could truthfully say of herself that she never tired dancing.

One of the yonths employed in a similar capacity at Flowerland was in love with Ruth. His name was Christinn Cowen. Ruth used to tease him about this name of his, it seemed so incongruous, considering the environment. And so it was. As a matter of fact, Christian was the son of a Methodist minister in a small Southern town. He had drifted eastwnrd, chiefly to escape his father's insistence that he follow in the ministerial footsteps. He too was a frail fellow, distinctly of a social class ahove that of his colleagues, yet strangely at home in the gay, relaxed, whirling world thnt was Flowerland.

It was extraordinary that such an environment could have turned out a girl as unworidly as Ruth Adlon. Her partners were just so many enstomers to her. At the close of her work-a-day, or rather her work-a-night, she forgot them as promptly as a salesman forgets the string of people to whom he had sold coffee over the counter during an afternoon. In fact, it might be said of Ruth Adlon, that she was a girl's girl. She enjoyed the gossip among them. She liked to walk home with one for a companion. It was seldom that she consented to an outside engagement with one of the partners she met in Flowerland. Not that she had any scruples about the life of the dance hall, hnt Ruth was not interested. In the midst of one of the most exciting artificial and even menacing envirnaments in the world. Ruth danced along in a way that was almost naive.

That is why her affair with Christian Cowen, when it came, was one that from the very first started in to he of more serious moment than is usually the cnse in such an environment.

They fell in love and immediately their solemn young eyes fastened upon the goal of marriage. Ruth entertained no illusions about the ambitions or the potentialities of Christinn. To her he was merely a darling hoy who needed her. And Ruth needed him. On the initial equipment of loving one another deeply, and ahont one hundred and seventy-five dollars hetween them, they were married, and continued their joint work at Flowerland until four months before Ruth was going to have her child.

In the sixteen months of their marriage, these two little dancing people, so curiously dependent upon one another in the vast amusement world in which they whirled, had feathered their tiny nest of an up-town flnt and settled down to a happiness that was drenching and all-sufficient, except for one fly in a smooth ointment.

Christian, who loved his dancing wife with all the tenacious capacity of the frail, was branded in his make-up with a broad streak of jealousy. Because she was so delectable to him, it was inconceivable that she could be anything else to the hundreds w.. were fortunate to hold her in the dance. This tormenting quality within himself he managed to keep latent until there developed in the little home certain complications of most serious portent.

When their hahy girl was four months old, a stroke of invisible lightning, as it were, smote the happy little honsehold.

Whether during the dance, or in some twisted motion of which he had not heen conscious, Christian after suffering some weeks of pain in silence, went to a physician who X-rayed his hurting spine and fonnd a fracture.

Overnight, as it were, if not only because necessary, but imperative, for Ruth to take upon her slender shoulders the entire responsibilities of the household.

For eight months, Christian Cowen lay flat on his hack in a rigid plaster cast on a hospital cot. For eight months, Rut Cowen twinkled on her toes, to meet the expenses of that driven little household, and strangely enough, thrived doing it. And so did her baby. It was impossible to employ the services of a nurse in the household, and so, to her despair at first, she was obliged to entrust the child to a nursing home for infants. Bnt the little girl, even as her mother, seemed to bloom and blossom under what might normally be considered an adverse condition, and as Ruth beheld this take place, her heart on that score at least was light within her.

It was a strenuons, nerve-racking life, darting like a frenzied messenger of sweetness, between the dance hall, the nursing home and the hospital where Christian lay strapped to his cot.

His recovery was tedious, slow and torturons. And yet, Ruth who hovered so lovingly over him, did not know the most tortuous aspect of it.

Lying there day after day, week after week, month after month, the pressure of the secret jealousy came to be almost unbearable to Christian. Evenlags, when the ward lights were low and the patients abont him had dropped off to their troubled sleep, he was forced to lie there, visioning Ruth in the arms of others. It was impossible to imagine that the men who held her did not thrill to her nearness as he did. It was impossible to fight down the frenzy, knowing that even as he lay there, she was desirable to others. It made of him, as the months wore on, a fretful, nervous, irascible patient, sharp with his nurses, critical, even cruel, in his remarks to Ruth.

There came a time, however, when Christian, on crutches, was able to leave the hospital; was even able, of on evening, to hobble down, when assisted by Rnth, and sit on the sidelines in the dance hall and watch the scene.

It was his idea that this might ease the secret torture.

On the contrary, it only seemed to inflame it. The sight of her, tireless, enthusiastic, playful, even with the burden of her responsibilities full npon her, actually seeming to delight in the act of the dance, was even more than he could bear.

Poor Christian, in his sense of defeat and in his love for this girl; and in his fear and torment for her, he was all warped inside, and of that Ruth knew nothing. She only snw her maimed, nervous husband through the eyes of her desire to serve him and to ameliorate, if possible, the dreariness of the semi-invalidism that seemed to stretch wearily ahead.

By now, the hurting jealousy of Christian's began to take on a certain menace. He plainly detected that in Rnth's dancing there was a joy-of-life.

There was one Spanish fellow in particular, who nsed to spend his entire strip of tickets in dances with Ruth, toward whom she seemed to lift a face as dewy as a flower. Sitting on the sidelines with his crntches beside him, slow smoldering hates began to burn in the maimed husband of Ruth.

The two things that Christian loved best in life, that small, dancing mother and the small child she had begot, were in peril. And somehow, to the feverish brain of the troubled young husband, the Spanish fellow who came to the dance hall once or twice a week began to he the symbol of that peril.

One evening, there occurred in that dance hall what seemed a miracle, although medically, and in the colder annals of science, it is known as "trauma."

In the midst of what was the routine performance of Ruth dancing around the floor in the arms of the young Spaniard, Christian, unable to hear any longer what seemed to him the amorous clasp of these two, jerked himself to his feet, and forgetful of his spine, rushed without his crutches out to the center of the floor, hurling them apart.

In the confusion and the unpleasant notoriety of the moment, one outstanding fact was revealed to Ruth. Christian was standiag erect and strong on his two feet. Christian was ahle to walk off that dance floor without the aid of crntches.

That was the beginning; the beginning of a great many things in their little household. Also it revealed to Ruth the pitifnl, tortured mental life that had been her hushand's throughout the months. More than thnt, it revealed to her the power of his mind over the matter of his body.

Christian, who walks as normally as anyone now, has a paying position with a commercial house; Ruth is now able to carry on a life she loves even over and above the life of dancing.

She is mistress of a little home and of the day-by-day destiny of two growing children.

Scissors Old Implements

It was formerly believed that scissors were invented in Venice in the Sixteenth century, hut records show that implements similar to our modern scissors were in use very much earlier than this period. In the remains of Pompeii shears were fouad made of iron and steel, as well as bronze. Scissors nlso were in nse in various oriental countries from a very early period. It is stated that those manufactured in Europe were copied from the Persian. The oriental scissors were very much ornamented nnd frequently in the form of a bird, the blade forming the beak.

MORE DEATHS CAUSED BY HEART DISEASE IN 1931

4,151 Recorded In Maryland—Kidney Diseases are Second

Half of the deaths in the counties of Maryland, last year, occurred in the two most widely separated groups—the youngest and the oldest. A report prepared by Dr. John Collinson, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health, shows that 21,503 deaths were reported during the year, 10,272 in the counties and 11,503 in Baltimore City. There were 29,087 births, of which 14,670 occurred in the counties.

Of the 10,272 deaths in the counties, 1,267 were among babies under a year old, and 4,016 among adults of 65 years or older. Of the deaths among babies, 559 were less than a month old. One-fourth of the total deaths at all ages in the counties occurred among persons from 45 to 64 years old; 1,282 among persons from 25 to 44, and 357 from one year to four years old. The smallest number in any age group was 272, the number in the group from 5 to 14 years old.

Of the total deaths in the State, diseases of the heart had leading place, with 4,151 deaths of which 1,931 occurred in the counties. Diseases of the kidneys with 2,302 deaths, of which 1,171 occurred in the counties, had second place. Pneumonia came next with 2,089 deaths, of which 735 occurred in the counties; cancer had fourth place with 1,845 deaths, 758 in the counties; cerebral hemorrhage with 1,798 deaths—925 in the counties—was fifth, and tuberculosis with 1,583 deaths—799 in the counties—had sixth place. There were 482 deaths from automobile accidents in comparison with 445 in 1930. Of the 482, 258 occurred in the counties.

Over one-fourth of the deaths of babies in the counties—341 out of 1,267—were due to digestive diseases. Pneumonia, bronchitis and other respiratory diseases, with 220 deaths, had second place among the babies.

There were 66,551 cases of communicable diseases reported during the year in comparison with 32,321 in 1930, with 26,330 of the 1931 total occurring in the counties, the increase being laregly due to measles and influenza. Of th eformer, 20,663 cases were reported in the State, 5,591 occurring in the counties. There were 9,326 cases of influenza, of which 4,629 were reported from the counties.

August, with 2,093 cases of sickness reported, had 849 occurring in the counties, was the most favorable month so far as sickness was concerned. January, with 9,544 cases of sickness, reported from all parts of the State, had the least favorable record.

BOULDER CITY, NEVADA, OUR SECOND FEDERAL CITY

Where Is Being Constructed Comfortable Homes for Workers Engaged In Building the Hoover Dam on the Colorado

NOT A TREE IN SIGHT NOW

(By Captain Charles E. Hoye)

From the pen of Captain Charles E. Hoye, native Garrett countian, a soldier and later an educator in the Philippines for a number of years, now a resident of the west, has contributed the following article descriptive of Boulder City, Nevade, site of the Hoover Dam, now in course of construction on the Colorado River:

Conctruction of Boulder City on the Nevada desert, six miles from the Hoover Dam site, is rapidly nearing completion. It is our second Federal City, designed to provide comfortable homes for from four thousand to five thousand men, women and children, as well as the business of a huge construction project—the Hoover Dam on the Colorado.

Washington is our first National City. The Constitution of 1787, having specifically authorized Congress to acquire from the States and to administer a district in which to locate the capital of our country, Congress directed President Washington to select a site on the Potomac, and in 1790 he chose the site of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia ceding to the central government ten miles square of territory for the purpose. On the "Potomac of the Southwest" in 1930, the Department of the Interior set aside a reservation, also ten miles square, for a new town named Boulder City. Circumstances surrounding the two municipal projects differ exceedingly. In the case of Washington, the Government purchnsed land from private owners for streets, parks, the Federal buildings—paying about $67 per acre; some of this land was divided into city lots and sold, the original idea of the founders being thav the proceeds from the sale of lots would provide a fund to pay for sites and construction of the Federal buildings: in brief, n real estate deal of considerable magnitude, which was only partially successful. The Boulder City reservation was already public land, and no lots are sold, though the Government leases lots for business and residence purposes.

Major L'Enfant, French engineer, drew the Washington City plan, which has proven ample for the growth of the Capital and all the changes of transportation of one hundred forty years. Boulder City also has its plan, modest but definite. An administration building, hospital, Union Pacific railroad station, residences of officials, crown the slope, while a recreation center, mess hall, theatre (under construction), a limited number of business houses, ten dormitories and neat workmen's residences cluster around a central plaza. Avenues named alphabetically and streets bearing the names of the far western States, are graded and paving has begun. Water is to be pumped from the Colorado; gas and water mains and sewers are under construction. Most of the population is already here; some of the people living in tents on the reservation, others in Las Vegas, "The Gateway City" to Hoover Dam. Roads, streets and most of the public buildings are being built by the Government, many of them of permanent construction, while dormitories and laborers' cottages are of wood framing with composition roofing and walls, all of rather temporary duration, but well suited to the desert climate. They are built and owned by the Six Companies, Inc., which has the $48,890,995 Hoover Dnm contract. Cottages of two rooms with bath, unfurnished, are rented by the construction company to employes for $19 per month. Single men in the dormitories pay $1.60 per day for room and board. Minimum wages are $4.00 per day of eight hours. Within eight years the Six Companies expect to pay cost of construction and upkeep from rent collected.

An outstanding feature of the city is the company mess hall, which can feed fifteen hundred men, serving eight meals daily to the laborers as they come and go on the work shifts. Food is set on the table, family style, except lunches, which the men carry to their work. Men who have been unemployed for months and on short rations, frequently overeat at first. The kitchen is a modern culinary wonder and the food served is excellent: meats, all vegetables in season, pie and pudding, milk, tea and coffee. Visitors cheerfully pay sixty-five cents per meal.

The site of Washington was covered by a forest and a few pioneer farms, but in Boulder City there is not a tree or even one in sight on the surrounding desert and mountains; however, with irrigation the city will soon bloom—an oasis of cotton-woods and other fast-growing trees—while the Joshua tree and many varieties of cactus of the neighborhood will be planted to add an unique charm.

There are now about 2900 men employed by the Six Companies, Inc., most of them working in four tunnels through the walls of Black Canyon. These tunnels, each fifty feet clear in diameter, concrete lining, will carry the muddy Colorado through the canyon walls around the dam site. It was estimated that two years would be required to divert the river from its ancient channel, but the work is ahead of schedule. When the river channel is dry the work of clearing away the boulders down to hard bed rock will begin, thus providing a firm foundation for the great concrete dam wall, which will be 175 feet higher than the Washington monument, 650 feet wide at the base and crowned by a highway 45 feet wide.

Work in the tunnels is now containuous—twenty-four hours per day, seven days a week, with no holidays except three days at Christmas time. Men work in three shifts of eight hours each. The labor is hard and not free from danger. Men in the tunnels are supplied and must wear "hard" helmets, somewhat like those of war times. And the wage is not high. Yet impartial investigators and visitors find no need in Boulder for the proposed Congressional investigation. The Company and local officials are efficient and doing their duty. Men employed are not complaining. While all arrangements for the housing and comfort of the employes are not complete, the shadow of discontent has passed with the terrible heat of last summer.

Those who arouse our sympathies, and who might be helped by Washington, are the men-some with families—estimated at between one thousand and fifteen hundred, who are now waiting in nearby Las Vegas for work in Boulder City.

The daily labor turnover here is only about fifteen men per day. During the last twelve months the Federal-State employment agency here has registered 12,853 applicants and has received 39,000 letters from those desiring employment. Most of those now waiting at Las Vegas are without funds. Hundreds slept in the city parks last summer, but the recent cold weather drove somc of them to sunny California. Snow now covers the surrounding mountains. Men are sleeping seated in the chairs or on the floors of gambling casinos; others are building shacks of sticks, mud and scraps from the city dump. The people of Las Vegas, through the local Red Cross, are doing their best to relieve the distressed. One meal a day is given those who apply and a small supply of old clothing is on hand for transients, but the local relief budget is only $1000 per month. We do not see how the local people can carry the whole burden. While some move on, others come from all points of the compass. Las Vegas is a point of interest and varietd cntertainment for the tourist, but a cold place for the jobless workingman!

In Boulder City good order and plenty prevail. The visitor must secure a pass at the entrance and only those who have work or business are permitted to reside on the reservation. Administration is by the Federal Reclamation Bureau. A city manager and United States marshall exact strict compliance with the laws and local regulations. All the gambling casinos, booze joints, dance halls and other institutions of doubtful character are in nenrby towns.

Yet there is a conflict of authority. In the case of the District of Columbia, Congress was specifically authorized to set up a local government, but in the absence of legislation in the 1790's, Maryland and Virginia continued to exercise authoritty for several years over their ceded territory. At Boulder, the State of Nevada did not "cede" its sovereignty over the U. S. reservation. Nevertheless, under Federal laws, the Government exercises certain special authority over all National reservations, and Government property is not subject to taxation by the States. May private property be taxed?

A test case is now pending in the Federal Court at Carson City in which the Six Companies, Inc., seeks to enjoin the State of Nevada from collecting taxes on its property in Boulder City. Another case is pending in the Federal Court in San Francisco whereby the Sate of Nevada is seeking to enforce a State law which prohibits the use of gasoline motors in tunnels, such as those now used on trucks in the Hoover Dam tunnels.

In effect, the Federal Courts are being called upon to define the limits of State and Federal authority on Boulder reservation. Nevada collects an annual poll tax of three dollars, but employes on the reservation have hesitated about paying. However, the New Mexico Company, which has the street construction contract, recently paid this tax for its employes. Right of residents to vote at State elections is also involved.

In regard to public schools in Boulder City—there are none. Four hundred children, whose parents live or work on the Boulder reservation, attend Las Vegas schools. Plans have been drawn for a modern elementary school building, which will be constructed from the Federal appropriation, but whether the State or National authorities operate the school will probably depend upon the tax collection case now before the Court.

Hoover Dam, the All-American canal and electric power plants, at total estimated cost of $165,000,000, are a long step in public ownership. Boulder City is a "planned" Federal City; its administration is "paternal." The American people have a very direct interest in the whole project; so far we can be proud of the progress made and hopeful for the future.

A TIMELY INQUIRY—

The County Commissioners of Garrett County are to be congratulated upon arranging for an investigation of the list of county dependents, through the agency of the county relief committee.

Many of the dependents are worthy of the assistance they receive each month from the county, while others, it is alleged, have obtained places on the list who had no business there.

The worthy cases will not be affected by the investigation, but those who have managed to get help from the county through misrepresentation and otherwise, will have to back down.

As a result of the action the total amount of the levy for the county dependents will in all probability be somewhat reduced, thus lessening the burden now on the taxpayers. And who is there who will object to the lightening of the tax load?

WEBSTER ON COMMUNISM

The name communism probably is less than one hundred years old, but the thing represented by the name has been in existence, even here in the United States, longer than that. Here is an extract from an address before the United States Senate by Daniel Webster more than a century ago and it reads as if it might have been written yesterday:

"There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation, and the pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations, and all the means by which small capitals become united, in order to produce important and beneficial results. They carry on a mad hostlity against all established institutions. They would choke up the fountains of industry and dry ail its streams.

"In a country of unbounded liberty, they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality, they would move heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more equally divided than anywhere else, they rend the air with the shouting of agrarian doctrines.

"In a country where the wages of labor are high beyond ail parallel, and where lands are cheap, and the means of living iow, they would teach the laborer that he is but an opprcssed slave.

"What can such men want? What do they mean? They can want nothing but to enjoy the fruits of other men's labor. They can mean nothing but disturbance and disorder, the diffusion of corrupt principles, and the destruction of the moral sentiments and moral habits of society."

HOW ABOUT ADVERTISING

"Business is falling off. We must begin to do less advertising."

"Business is falling off. We must begin to do more advertising."

Those are the philosophies of business two or three decades ago and business today. In the era before the merits of advertising were appreciated or even half-understood, the merchant and manufacturer were inclined to regard advertising as a luxury of dubious value. It was all right, they thought, when business was good, but it wasn't a necessity, after all. They would quote to their associates the old saying that any old fish could swim downstream but it required a live one to go upstream, but they did not usually apply this maxim in times of business depression.

The modern business man realizes that extraordinary conditions require extraordinary exertions. He goes out for volume and profits more energetically and on a bolder scale when his disheartened competitors find the going rough. Even when he does not get the handsome returns which came to him in other days, he usually discovers that his losses have not been nearly so serious as those of his timid rivals.

OUR LOANS TO EUROPE

The roots of our present trouble in this country are in the financial and economic involvements of the United States with Europe, for some of which the World War was an excuse and not a reason. We have been as a nation trading assets for liabilities to the profit of a very few Americans until we have been compelled to awaken from the great delusion that the resources of this country are inexhaustible, and its ability to sacrifice its own to foreign interests is illimitable. We have been chloroformed by sentimental and financial internationalists into believing that we could go on forever being the world's good thing, without finally reaching the cold gray dawn of payday. With an army of 6,000,000 unemployed, and with a deficit in national revenues of two billion dollars because American income has so dropped that it cannot begin under our present tax rates to pay the cost of government, we ought to begin to get out of this ordeal at least the benefit of a disillusioning experience.

Some facts of interest came out in the debate on the moratorium in the Senate not long ago. We loaned France $4,025,000,000 during and after the World War. Of this amount $1,655,000,000 was loaned after the war, and $400,000,000 of it was for materials we had in France at the end of the war, to the value of two billion dollars, which France sold at a large profit over the amount she agreed to pay, after forbidding this country to sell the materials on the open market. Because of this transaction we might say that France paid no part of her debt to us. But the vaule of the Franco-American settlement at the time it was made was $1,681,000,000, approximately principal and interest of our loans after the war, with France given 60 years to pay.

We loaned Belgium $417,780,000. We collected only the post-Armistice debt of $246,000,000.

We loaned Italy $2,042,000,000. Her post-Armistice debt with interest was $800,000,000. We got an agreement to pay a value of $426,000,000.

Great Britain was the only nation that came anywhere near settling her debt to the United States. We loaned England $4,600,000,000. Of this $581,000,000 was loaned after the Armistice. But $1,682,000,000 of England's debt represented "exchange and cotton purchases"; not for supplies we furnished England, but to stabilize sterling exchange, and enable England to make purchases in other countries at a maintained exchange rate. With interest our post-war advances to England amounted to $600,000,000. The value of our entire debt settlement was $3,297,000,000. England did not do so badly, and she got 60 years to pay.

We took nothing by way of territory or indemnities at the peace conference. Our associates divided up land areas equal in extent to that of the entire United States. We got absolutely nothing out of the war. We made great sacrifices evidently with the purpose of putting Europe on her feet after the cataclysm of war. We have had our reward in continuous denunciation as a Shylock because we were willing to take back any of this money our people had paid. We have faced the demand that what is owing us be made dependent on what Germany is expected to pay the allies, although the two matters have no connection except that which has been established by our participation in conferences on reparations settlements.

Borrowing has followed until we have become deeply involved in the European "mess." Now we are told that unless we wipe out the debts, tear down our economic defenses and take upon ourselves further financial burdens, Europe is going to go right on crisising, sink and take us down with her.

Thus pretense of European inability to pay is a fraud. Payments due the United States from Europe under the settlement are only two and a half per cent of the amount Europe pays this country per year on all accounts, these accounts, aggregating ten billion dollars, being offset by payments we make Europe on all accounts. The continuance of debt payments agreed upon by France would cost each Frenchman $1.25 a year. The annual burden is little greater in any case, much less in some, than this per capita burden on France. Within the last six months the United States, governmentaliy and through private bankers, has advanced new loans and postponed old obligations in Germany and England to the amount of a billion and a quarter, or five times as much as the annual payments due on debt account, and that payment of a quarter billion has been postponed through the moratorium. Still goes up the cry: "Give or we perish." We have been doing this for a dozen years, with what result to ourselves or to Europe?

It is entirely clear at this time that European banking interests have determined to make the United States pay the German indemnities, and that this movement is powerfully supported in the United States.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

An unknown man, found lying unconscious in the snow near Red House, died a few minutes after being taken into a house in that community. He had evidently been hunting as there was a gun lying by his side.

Harmison and Hill, merchants in Oakland, closed their store and moved the stock of goods to Piedmont, West Va.

Andrew Shartzer, grain merchant in Oakland was selling corn at 55 cents per bushel and corn and oats chop at $1.25 per hundred pounds.

Thaddeus C. Hinebaugh was quite ill at his home near town.

Col. A. G. Sturgiss, commander of Crook Post, G. A. R., Oakland, was in receipt of a commission from General John Palmer appointing him an aide-de-camp on his staff.

A splendid crop of ice on the lake at Mountain Lake Park was being harvested by a large number of men.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Masonic lodge officers installed were A. T. Matthews, W. M.; George W. Legge, Jr., S. W.; W. O. Davis, J. W.; Paul Naylor, secretary; Harland L. Jones, treasurer; Dr. W. W. Grant, junior deacon; Charles J. Newman, tyler.

The residence of Gilmor S. Hamill on Green street was discovered to be on fire. The blaze was extinguished by Michael Maroney with little resultant damage.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Nethkin on Bartlett street, was almost entirely consumed by fire.

Esther, six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Zehner, Grantsville, had her hands badly frozen.

The marriage of Mr. Lawrence M. Fraley, of Oakland, and Miss Edith Weisenmilier, of Cumberland, was announced.

Material for the crection by Mr. John Ault of a new residence for his own occupancy on the State road to the north of Oakiand, was received.

Miss Nora D. Friend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Friend, and John C. Skipper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Skipper, both of near Sines, were married.

Homemakers' Column

By Miss Margaret Kirby Burtis
Home Demonstration Agent

Prunes are a good fruit to serve during the winter months. Besides helping to keep the family healthy, they are inexpensive and easy to prepare. Some of these ways might be of interest to the housewife.

It is no longer necessary to soak prunes and cook them for hours. The ideal way to cook them is this: Wash prunes, cover with hot water and cook slowly for one hour. Two tablespoons of sugar may be added if you like your fruit extra sweet, but prunes are so full of natural fruit sugar that most people prefer them cooked without adding more. A few slices of lemon improves the flavor.

Sandwich Filling

Mix well 1 cup chopped raw or steamed prunes, 1 tablespoon melted butter, ½ cup cottage cheese or cream cheese, a dash of paprika. Spread on entire wheat or graham bread.

Prune Sunshine Pudding

Beat yolks of two eggs and add 1 cup cooked prune pulp, ¼ cup prune juice and 4 tablespoons sugar. Add 1 cup graham cracker crumbs, 1 teaspoon vanilla and ½ cup nut meats. Stir well. Beat egg whites and fold into mixture. Pour into buttered baking dish and bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Prune Bars

Wash and cook 1 cup prunes two or three hours, cut in small pieces. Beat yolks of three eggs and add 1 cup sugar. Beat whites until stiff and add alternately with 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ⅛ teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup chopped nuts and the prunes and bake in a shallow pan in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Remove from pan, cut in bars 1x3 inches and roll in powdered sugar or frost with chocolate frosting. Will make about 20 bars.

Drop Cookies

Add 1 cup sugar gradually to 2 beaten eggs, beating until creamy. Sift together ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt; add to egg mixture alternately with ½ cup milk. Beat until smooth; add 1 cup cooked, chopped prunes, ¼ cup prune juice, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 tablespoons melted shortening and 3 cups rolled oats. Drop on well-greased cookie pan and bake in moderate oven about 12 minutes.

Mrs. Burch Addresses Oakland Civic Club

Mrs. Sallie Burch, Mountain Lake Park, was the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Oakland Civic Club last Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor.

Mrs. Burch spoke on the disarmament question and the abolishing of war.

TERRA ALTA GUARDS WIN FROM OAKLAND 21 TO 18

Faulty Plays in First Half Pave Way for Locals' Downfall

Terra Alta Guards defeated the Oakland Independent basketball team at the Oakland High auditorium last Thursday evening, 21-18 in a slow contest. Numerous errors on the part of the Oakland players in the first half of the game paved the way for their downfall. The count was tied a few minutes before the end of the game 16 to 16, but two field goals by King of Terra Alta in quick succession gave the visitors the game. It was Oakland's first defeat on the home floor this season.

King, with five field goals and two fouls led the scoring for Terra Alta, while McComas with four field goals was high point man for Oakland.

The Oakland Independents will meet Frostburg State Normal school at Oakiand High auditorium on Monday, February 1, and the Davis Independents at Oakland on Wednesday, February 3.

The lincup and summary:

Oakland—18		Terra Alta—21
Pollock	F	Hollen
McComas	F	King
Sollars	C	Strawser
Naliy	G	Taylor
Hanst	G	Parsons

Substitutions—Oakland, Glotfelty and Stanton; Terra Alta, Shaffer and Wotring.

Field goals—Oakland, Pollock 2, McComas 4, Hanst 2; Terra Alta, King 5, Strawser 1, Taylor 1, Parsons 1, Shaffer 1.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 1-2, McComas 0-2, Nally 0-1, Hanst 1-2, Stanton 0-1; Terra Alta, Hollen 1-1, King 2-5, Strawser 0-1, Taylor 0-1, Parsons 0-3.

Sunnyside Grange To Assist Mt. Lake Park Institute

The Sunnyside Grange is the first grange of the county to make a subscription to and take up the work with the Mountain Lake Park Institute, according to Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director. Mr. Middaugh and O. T. Graser met with the grange at its last meeting and took part in the program.

The grange is asking for Miss Sara B. Huff, extension worker in music, to start community singing there and its members are anxious for demonstration schools and other activities for which the Mountain Lake Park Institute is planning.

Directors to Meet

The second regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Institute will be heid on Monday, February 1, at two o'clock, in the county agent's office, Court House, Oakland. Plans for the spring and summer work will be discussed at the session.

To Distribute Coin Cards

Specially prepared coin cards distributed by the National Prohibition Board of Strategy, will be given out in the churches of Oakland and Garrett county on Sunday, January 31. This is to demonstrate to Congress that while the wet cause is financed and engineered by a small clique of immensely wealthy men, the dry cause is the cause of the people and is supported by the masses of men and women in every walk of life, according to Rev. W. B. Brock.

At a meeting of the local ministers recently they decided to cooperate in the nation-wide campaign for the enforcement of prohibition.

Pittsburgh Tableland Council Holds Meeting

The Pittsburgh Allegany Tableland Council held a luncheon meeting in Pittsburgh on last Thursday at which time the interests and developments of the Allegany Tableland area were made the topic of discussion.

Men of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and the surrounding states sat together to plan for the development of the Pittsburgh Metropolitan area, of which the Allegany Tableland is a part.

Several committee meetings have been held since the annual meeting of the association at Aurora, and a foundation has been laid for what leading educators and economists pronounce as one of the outstanding projects for development in the United States.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette carried a news article and an editorial dealing with this develpoment in the modern science of regional planning.

The Republican, largest circulation of any Garrett County newspaper.

World Day of Prayer to be Observed in Oakland

World Day of Prayer, sponsored locally by the Oakland churches, will be observed here on Friday afternoon, February 12, in Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, it has been announced. The meeting will begin at 3.30 o'clock.

The service will be in charge of Mrs. Wiiiiam W. Grant. Addresses will be made by Rev. Walter B. Brock and Rev. D. C. Trimble.

GRANTSVILLE

FOR SALE—Dwelling and Lot in Grantsville; 8 rooms; furnace; hot and cold water; gas and electricity. Address, O. H. Yoder, sales agent, Grantsville, Md—Advertisement 47-7*

Emmanuel Durst

Emmanuel Durst, aged 74 years, died at his home near Grantsville on Thursday, January 21. Funeral services were held in the Springs Mennonite church Saturday afternoon, Rev. G. D. Miller and Rev. Edward Walls officiating. Interment was made in the cemetery nearby. The deceased was the last surviving member of the family of the late Samuel Durst and was unmarried.

Murder Suspects Caught

A great deal of excitement was in evidence in this community last Friday and Saturday, caused by the arrival of two Negroes pursued by officers from the LaVale sub-station of the Maryland State police. It was supposed that the men are the same pair that held up the Tasty Pastry shop in Frostburg and also murdered a Germantown (Md.) grocer, Horace D. Waters.

They succeeded in evading the officers by hiding in various buildings and alleys and later escaped into Pennsylvania. They were apprehended by the Meyersdale police on Saturday.

After being turned over to the officers of Maryland they were freed of any connection with the robbery of the Frostburg bake shop, but were taken to Montgomery county by Rockville police to be questioned in connection with the murder of Mr. Waters.

Grantsville vs. Confluence

The Grantsville Town Trouncers were victorious in the first basketball game of the season last Thursday night. Their opponents, the men's team of Confluence, played a very close game, losing by two points. The score was: Grantsville 17; Confluence, 15.

Death of a Child

The 5-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stahl, of Casselman, died Tuesday morning after a brief illness. Surviving are the parents, two sisters and four brothers. Funeral services at the home Thursday afternoon, Rev. A. C. Bell officiating. Interment will be in Grantsville cemctery.

Birthday Party

Mrs. Aaron Miller, of Springs, Pa., entertained at a birthday party in honor of her sisters, Mrs. Harvey Bender and Miss Edna Yoder, recently. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Yoder and daughters, Mrs. O. H. Yoder and A. J. Yoder, all of Grantsville; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Beachy and Harvey Bender, Miss Edna Yoder and Mrs. Harvey Bender, honores.

Telephone Company Reorganized

The shareholders of the Springs Mutual Telephone Company met in annual session at Springs, Pa., January 16, at which time the election of officers was held. The existing board was relected, as follows: C. E. Butler, Salisbury, president; G. D. Miller, Springs, vice-president; I. J. Maust, Salsibury, manager; H. S. Yoder, Grantsville, secretary and treasurer; Floyd J. Miller and G. W. Diefenbach, auditors. The personnel of the officers as published heretofore was in error.

Y. and M. Concert

The Y. and M. Quartet is planning a public program to be presented on Thursday evening, March 10, in the social room of the Lutheran church. The program will consist of vocal and instrumental music.

Teachers Entertained

Miss Ruth Keller entertained the Teachers' Bridge Club at her home last Thursday evening. Four tables of bridge were in play. Miss Anna Dawson won the prize. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Community Club

Mrs. J. U. Stanton will entertain the Grantsville Community Club at her home for their regular monthly meeting, on Wednesday afternoon, February 3, at 2:00 o'clock. Miss Burtis, county demonstrator, will be present and will conduct the demonstration, "Altering ready-made garments."

Mrs. Bender Entertains

The Bridge Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Byron Bender, at Little Crossings, last Tuesday evening. Three tables were in play and the prize was won by Miss Ethel Broadwater.

New Superintendent at Orphanage

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Amish-Mennonite Childrens' Home held on January 23, representatives from New York, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania were in attendance. The chief object of the meeting was to elect a new superintendent and matron of the home. In this the board made a wise selection by the election of Samuel D. Beachy, of Gortner, who was chosen to succeed the late Lewis Bender, recently deceased, and Mrs. S. D. Beachy was elected matron of the orphanage.

Mr. and Mrs. Beachy will assume their duties on or about March 1st. Noah Brenneman remains as assistant superintendent at the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Bowser were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Bowser.

MT. LAKE PARK

For the first time this winter the ground is covered with a light fall of snow. After experiencing the above-normal temperatures during nearly all of the winter months, the majority of our people seem to welcome the change.

Approximately 100 people gathered at the Ladies' Aid Hall, in Loch Lynn, on Sunday afternoon and marched to the home of Capt. B. L. Hardesty, where they joined in celebrating his 76th birthday.

A double quartet of men rendered several selections appropriate to the occasion. Rev. S. A. Jessee, pastor of the U. B. church, gave a very interesting talk. Capt. Hardesty has been a member of that church for approximately 50 years, having served as trustee for the past 20 years. He has been in failing health for some months but is well enough to thoroughly enjoy the visits of his host of friends, and an occasional dinner of ham hock and cabbage, his favorite dish. May he live to enjoy many more birthdays. Among the guests present was George White, of Oakland, aged 82 years.

Mr. P. C. Wendell, of Terra Alta, was the guest of Mrs. C. E. Hardesty Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rhodes were week-end guests of Mr. B. L. and Mayor C. E. Hardesty last week.

Mrs. M. L. Sisk spent the week-end with her husband in Keyser.

Mr. J. N. Wilson, an aged resident of Loch Lynn, who has been confined to his home for some time, is improving.

The death of Mrs. John Roby, aged about 80 years, occurred Tuesday evening, after a long illness. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. She is survived by her husband, who is also about 80 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fike spent a few days at Amboy, W. Va., guests of the latter's parents.

Mr. R. L. Hamill, of Loch Lynn, is improving his property.

The special servies which have continued at the U. B. church for the past few weeks have closed, with 24 additions to the church.

Richard Eugene Cale, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cale, of Terra Alta, died at their residence Thursday of last week. Interment was made in the Tunnelton cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Arnold and daughter, of Sewickly, Pa., are spending the week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Arnold, in the Park.

As we finish these few items, the sun is shining. Mayor Clayton, take due notice.

KITZMILLER

J. Faller, Mrs. Ann McNally, Mrs. John Droppleman, Mrs. Mayme Willis, Bernard Kilroy, Miss Mabel Harvey, Elk Garden; Mrs. Brosky and daughter Helen, Miss Arveta Davis, Vindex; Fielding Fidler, Elkins; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Swansbow, Shallmar.

Ladies' Aid Meeting

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Maude Hamill on the 14th inst., with Mrs. Hamill and Mrs. Frances Smith as the hostesses. Refreshments were served and the members present included Edith Hutson, Ethel Bender, Golda Warnick, Elizabeth Sowers, Lona Fortney, Alice Pew, Mattie Barrick, May Wilkins, Rebecca Hutson, Blanche Wilson, Delma Arnold, Margaret Hartley, Edna Kupfer, Hallie Pritts, Emma Ridder, Catherine Berrick, Wanda MacDonald, Georgia Shore, Loretta Nine, Maude Hamill and Frances Smith. The visitors were Mrs. R. A. Smith. Mrs. Lucy Poole, Mrs. Dotty Smith, Mrs. Carroll Smith, Lois Pritts, Violet Kupfer and Margie Kirby.

SHORT RUN

Owing to the remarkable weather conditions, Mr. J. C. Myers has completed his plowing. This is something that has not occurred in this community since 1913.

Mrs. William Burns, who has just undergone an operation for appendicitis at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, is recovering nicely. The Burns family recently moved into this community.

Mr. Robert E. Harvey is busily engaged in covering a one-mile water line, which he hopes to have completed in the near future.

Mrs. Julia Sharpless, who has been ill, is recovering.

Alfred Harvey, who had a severe hemorrhage of the nose, is out again.

Mr. A. Scott Harvey suffered quite a loss, due to the mysterious burning of his barn, on Thursday morning, January 14. Approximately thirteen tons of hay and some machinery were destroyed by the fire.

Mr. Nicholas Perento is engaged at this time furnishing props for the Shallmar Coal Company.

Those attending the Knights of Pythias celebration at Keyser, W. Va., Tuesday, January 19, were Milo Wilson, Scott Harvey, James Heepengarner and Robert Harvey.

Those visiting at the home of Mrs. Mary M. Wilson the past week were E Burton Wilson and son Charles, of Richwood, W. Va.; another son, James, of Morgantown University, and Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Barrick, of Kitzmiller.

Mrs. Sarah E. Harvey is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert E. Harvey.

Miss Bernice Campbell, of Kitzmiller, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Harvey recently.

Charles Wilson, while visiting in this community, was quite a proud slayer of a huge wildcat.

Dinner Party

James B. Wilson and Miss Esta Wilson, were host and hostess at a dinner party last Sunday when they had as their guests Misses Gladys Sharpless, Mildred Harvey, Dorothy Harvey, Josephine Harvey, Bernice Campbell, of Kitzmiller; Messrs. Don Bender, Dwight Barrick, Morris Kinkead, of Kitzmiller; Hubert Johnson, of Keyser, W. Va.; Wilson Sharpless and Buck Kinkead.

Taffy Pulling

Mrs. Mary M. Wilson gave a taffy party in honor of her guest, Mrs. Catherine Barrick, of Kitzmiller, recently. Those attending were the honoree, Misses Esta Wilson, Gladys Sharpless, Cassie Wilson, Mrs. Mary Wilson, Mrs. Susan Moon; Messrs. Milo Wilson, Buck Kinkead, Hubert Johnson, George Wilson, James Hoopengarner, Wilson Sharpless and Alfred Harvey.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our kind friends and neighbors for their acts of love and sympathy during the recent loss of our mother, Mrs. C. H. Mann, and also extend our gratitude to those who supplied cars or rendered service in any way. THE CHILDREN.

Don't Get Up Nights

Make This 25c. Test

You need this easy bladder physic to drive out impurities and excess acids which cause irritation that results in leg pains, backache, burning and getting up nights. BU-KETS, the bladder physics, containing buchu, juniper oil, etc., works on the bladder pleasantly and effectively as castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c. box (5 grain size) from your druggist. After four days, if not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. You are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Locally at Joseph E. Harned, Druggist.—Advertisement j. 28, f. 25.

W. C. T. U. Organizes

The Women's Christian Temeprance Union was organized on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. B. H. Sincell at a meeting which was attended by a number of Oakland women. Mrs. M. L. Stier was named chairman; Mrs. M. C. Hinebaugh, treasurer, and Mrs. Karl Kahl, secretary.

Literature was distributed at the meeting and discussion held on the prohibition question.

TRUSTEES' SALE

—OF—

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

In District No. 10 of Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of the powers vested in us by a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, passed on the 23rd day of January, 1932, in a cause wherein Viola Keenan and others were complainants and Thomas I. Male and others defendants, the same being No. 3030 Equity, we, the undersigned trustees, do hereby give notice that on at the hour of eleven o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Maryland, we will offer for sale at public auction the following real estate situate, lying and being in District No. 10 of Garret County, to-wit:

All that lot or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 5 on a plat of the tract of land conveyed by Henry G. Davis and wife to John W. Garrett by deed dated September 29th, 1881, and recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 5, folio 797, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, which plat will be found recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 20, folio 351, etc., one of said Land Records. Said lot of ground contains FORTY-NINE (49) ACRES AND THIRTEEN (13) PERCHES, more or less, and is the same which was conveyed unto John R. Male, late of Garret County, Maryland, deceased, by deed from Mary E. Garrett et al., trustees, dated May 25, 1893, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 22, folio 74, one of said Land Records of Garrett County, and title to which became vested in the parties in the above mentioned cause under the terms of the last will and testament of said John R. Male.

Save and excepting one-half acre conveyed by said John R. Male and wife to John Moon et al., Trustees for the U. B. Church, for church and burial purposes, by deed dated August 31st, 1896, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 30, folio 485, one of said Land Records of Garrett County. Also excepting one acre at the south side of the property devised to Albert N. Male by the will of said John R. Male, the line of which has been established.

The property is known as the JOHN R. MALE FARM, is located along the county road leading from Loch Lynn to Deer Park and Boiling Spring, is nearly all cleared and in a good state of cultivation, is improved by dwelling, stable and other farm buildings and would make a very excellent farm home.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third cash on day of sale, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser or purchasers, the credit portions to be secured to the satisfaction of the trustees and to bear interest from the day of sale.

ERNEST RAY JONES,
NEIL C. FRALEY,
Trustees.

OAKLAND A. A. QUINTET BREAKS EVEN IN GAMES

Wins Two and Loses Two During Past Week; Frostburg Normal Defeated Monday Night

TO MEET CO. G MONDAY

Oakland Independent basketball quint broke even in the number of games played during the past week, winning two and losing two. Oakland will meet Co. G of Cumberland in a return engagement at the Oakland High auditorium on Monday evening, February 8.

Davis defeated Oakland at the O. H. S. auditorium last night 22 to 17, after Oakland led at the half 7 to 4.

Goals were scored for Oakland by Pollock 3, McComas 2, Glotfelty 1, Graves 1, Nally 1; Davis, Park 3, Carr 3, Kramer 1, Golish 1, Golightly 2.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 1-1, McComas 0-2, Lee 0-1. Davis, Kramer 2-2, Golightly 0-1.

Frostburg Normal Loses

Oakland won its second game from Frostburg Normal School on Monday evening at the O. H. S. auditorium, 32 to 16. The Independent had previously won from Normal on its home floor 25 to 18. The outcome of the game was never in doubt after the first few minutes of play and Oakland led at half time 18 to 9. McComas with eight field goals led the scoring. James Lee playing at guard for Oakland made four field goals.

Couchman with three field goals, was high point man for the Normal basketeers.

Baskets were made by McComas 8, Lee 4, Hanst 1, for Oakland; and Mezick 2, Couchman 3, Jenkins 1, for Frostburg.

Fouls—Oakland, Pollock 1-1, Nally 1-2; Lee 1-1, Hanst 1-2, Sollars 1-1, Glotfelty 1-1. Frostburg, Mezick 3-3, Footen 1-1.

Loses to Co. G Quint

Oakland lost to Co. G National Guard quint from Cumberland on Tuesday night, at Cumberland, 30 to 22. The Cumberland team led at half time 13 to 10 and slowly increased its lead throughout the contest. Beckmeyer, with seven field goals, was high point man for Cumberland, while McComas, with five field goals, led the Oakland scoring. Hanst, regular guard for Oakland, had to leave the contest after the first three minutes of play due to a twisted knee.

Field goals—Oakland, Pollock 1, McComas 5, Nally 2, Hanst 1, Graves 1. Cumberland, Matlick 1, Bruce 4, Rosenmerkel 1, M. Golden 1, Beckmeyer 7.

Foul goals—Sollars 1-1, Lee 1-1, McComas 0-1. Cumberland, Bruce 1-1, Sapp 0-2, Beckmeyer 1-1.

Oakland will meet Co. G at the Oakland High School auditorium on Mondoy evening, February 8, in a return engagement.

Oakland defeated Aurora Independents at Aurora last Thursday evening 33-23 in a battle requiring two extra periods. The score was tied at 20-20 at the close of the game and a five-minute extra period added three points to each side.

In the second extra period of five minutes Oakland got its eye on the basket and ran up a ten-point lead, meanwhile holding the Aurora team scoreless.

Baskets were made for Oakland by Graves 3, Pollock 4, McComas 4, Sollars 1, Hanst 1, Lee 1. For Aurora, Parrish 4, Teets 3, P. Stemple 1, Myers 1.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 2-4, McComas 2-2, Hanst 1-4. Aurora, Parrish 2-3, Teets 1-3, F. Stemple 0-4.

Robbers Enter Treacy's Store But Flee Upon Officer's Approach

Two robbers broke into the store of Owen Treacy, corner of Second and Oak streets about 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, but failed to secure much merchandise as they fled at the approach of policeman B. B. Nethkin, who was making his rounds.

They gained entrance by cutting out the glass in the front door and evidently had just succeeded when Officer Nethkin, from the First National Bank corner, saw one of the persons on the lookout. Getting closer he noticed two men and they fled as he was crossing the railroad tracks.

He called Mr. Treacy and a hasty glance through the shelves disclosed that only one or two shirts were missing.

Friendsville High Wins From Oakland to Tie for County Championship

Friendsville High School basketball team defeated Oakland High School at Friendsville last evening 19-17 to win a tie in the county championship contest. Oakland held a 14-9 decision over Friendsville in the opening game. The Oakland girls' team lost 19 to 7.

Friendsville led at half time 12 to 7. In the county league Oakland has now won two games and lost one.

On Friday evening Bruce High School of Westernport will be in Oakland to meet the O. H. S. basketeers.

WILL COMPLETE WIDENING OF NATIONAL ROAD SOON

Remaining Portion in County to be Finished This Spring

Road construction projects in Western Maryland, including Garrett county, to be pushed as soon as weather conditions permit as a measure to relieve unemployment in the rural districts of Maryland, were announced by the State Roads Commission.

The work will include widening or relocation of highways, according to Harry C. Williar, Jr., chief engineer of the commission, who added that plans and surveys will be made at once. The work will represent the first group of widening projects to be undertaken in 1932 by the roads body.

As soon as the weather opens up sufficiently for contractors to lay concrete without lapse of time after the completion of grading operations, the work will be advertised for construction, Mr. Williar said.

The Garrett county project is described as follows: A section along the National Pike, for a distance of 7.5 miles, which will complete the widening of the National Pike between Baltimore and the Pennsylvania line west of Keyser's Ridge.

There are already shoulders on the National Highway from the State line to just east of route 37 intersection at Keyser's Ridge, and from the top of the hill east of Grantsville, at the intersection of the Meyersdale road, to the Allegany county line, and thence to Baltimore. The Garrett county portion from Keyser's Ridge to Grantsville is all that remains unfinished.

OAKLAND HIGH DEFEATS GREEN STREET 26 TO 20

Girls Win Preliminary Contest at O. H. S. Auditorium 27-13

Oakland High School defeated Green Street Junior High School of Cumberland in both games last Friday evening in the Oakland High auditorium. The girls of Oakland High defeated the Green Street sextet 27 to 13 in the preliminary, while the local boys won 26 to 20.

The shooting of Peddicord and Rice, who scored five goals each and had a total of 21 points, featured the Oakland victory. Kraft, with three goals to his credit, was Green Street's high point man.

The Cumberland team led at quarter time 7-3, and also at the half-time whistle, 7 to 6, but Oakland forged to the front at 15-14 at the close of the third period and increased its lead in the final stanza. This was Green Street's fourth loss in 27 games played. The lineup:

Oakland—26		Green Street—20
Peddicord	F	Kraft
Ray	F	Smith
Rice	C	Schilling
Dawson	G	Shugrue
Butler	G	Twigg

Substitutions: Oakland, Maroney for Ray. Green Street, Kelfer for Angellatta.

Field goals—Peddicord 5, Rice 5, Maroney 1, Kraft 3, Smith 1, Schilling 2, Shugrue 1, Kelfer 1, Angeliatta 1.

Foul goals—Peddicord 1-2, Rice 1-2, Butler 1-1, Maroney 1-2, Smith 1-1, Angeliatta 1-2. Referee, McComas.

T. B. Seal Sale Receipts Less Than Last Year

With money still coming in, the Maryland Tuberculosis Association reports that the Seal Sale returns in the counties of Maryland are slightly behind the returns for the same period last year. Up to January 23, the total collected in the counties amounted to $24,350. At this period last year the returns totalled $24,788. A special effort is now being made by the Seal Sale chairmen to have those who have not made payment for their seals to do so as soon as possible. A comparison of the returns from Garrett county shows $211 for 1930 as against $137 for 1931.

JUVENILE COURT BODY IS ORGANIZED WEDNESDAY

Miss Katharine Kirwan Explains Functions of Committee

The Juvenile Court Committee for Garrett county, appointed by Governor Ritchie, met for organization in Oakland on Wednesday afternoon, February 3. Mr. W. R. Offutt, Mr. A. T. Matthews, Rev. Walter B. Brock and Mrs. E. R. O'Donnell, members of the committee, were present. Mr. Harvey Friend, of Friendsville, is also a member of the committee. Mr. Matthews was elected chairman and Mrs. O'Donnell, secretary.

A program proposed by Miss Katharine Kirwan of the Maryland Children's Aid Society, was adopted after Miss Kirwan had explained the primary functions of the committee in counties where there is no juvenile court and no social worker. According to Miss Kirwan these functions are to gather data concerning all cases of juvenile delinquency arising in the county and to take steps to insure handling of every case in a manner that, in light of all available information, seems to be to the best interest of the boy or girl charged with a misdemeanor or crime.

The chairman was instructed to communicate with the Judges of the Orphans' Court, the State's Attorney and the various magistrates within the county expressing willingness of the committee to aid the authorities in wise disposition of individual cases and asking authorities' cooperation with the committee in its effort to see that the case of every youthful offender is carefully studied and handled in a way that will be best for him and for society.

22ND SCOUT ANNIVERSARY TO BE CELEBRATED HERE

Program Starts Sunday With Attendance at Church in Body

The twenty-second anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America will be celebrated February 7 to 13. The celebration recalls the fact that a "good turn" performed in London for an American visitor by an unknown Boy Scout was responsible for bringing the Boy Scout movement to the United States.

Boy Scout Week will be celebrated in Oakland by a program beginning Sunday, February 7, by attendance at St. Matthew's Episcopal church. On this day Scout troops throughout the United States will attend divine special services in churches.

Monday will be school day; Tuesday, home day, when good turns will be done in the home.

On Thursday, Feb. 11, there will be a public meeting of the troop. The Scouts will exemplify the twelve scout laws and the program will also include a celebration in honor of George Washington. All are invited to attend the meeting which will be held in the K. of P. Hall at 7:30. There will be refreshments.

Scouts will mobilize on Saturday morning for a community good turn, which will be followed by an overnight hike.

In the twenty-two years that have elapsed since the formal incorporation, February 8, 1910, more than 5,670,780 men and boys at one time or another have shared membership in the Scout movement.

Legion To Sponsor Washington Bicentennial Program

A Washington Bicentennial program, sponsored by Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, will be held in the Maryland Theatre, on Sunday, February 21, A. G. Hesen, post commander, has announced.

A committee has been appointed to arrange a program and includes Dr. George E. Clarke, chairman; John H. Carter and Harold M. Dawson. The detailed program will be announced.

To Hold Benefit Picture

A benefit picture, The Big Parade, will be presented in the Maryland theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, February 17 and 18. This is the first appearance of the picture here in the talkies, and new sound equipment is expected to be installed by that time, it was stated.

Fire Escape Is Erected

A fire escape has been erected on the Oakland Grammar school building, giving the children on the second floor two exits in addition to the stairway in the building.

The framework is in the rear of the building.

OFFICERS FOR MUNICIPAL ELECTION ARE APPOINTED

Annual Selection of Town Officials to be Made March 14

Clerks and judges for the coming municipal election were appointed at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and City council held Monday evening at the City hall.

George D. White, Charles F. White and Harry West were appointed as judges and Mrs. Emroy Bolden and Mrs. Bernard Gonder were appointed as clerks. The municipal election will be held on Monday, March 14, at which time a mayor, three councilmen and a treasurer will be chosen.

The retiring mayor is Grover C. Stemple, the three retiring councilmen are R. C. McComas, Ralph T. Thayer, and H. P. Stuck. Mr. Stuck was chosen following the election last year to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., who assumed his duties as treasurer for Garrett county.

Other Matters Discussed

Discussion was held in regard to aiding the Oakland Free Public Library in some way. All but one member of the council were in favor of rendering financial assistance, but decision was held over to investigate the legality of the procedure.

The proposed milk ordinance was discussed and it was decided to revise it to some extent and then present it to the council at its next meeting in March. "The milk ordinance, should it be passed, would not cause any hardship on farmers or dairymen who deliver milk in Oakland," Mayor Stemple said, "but would aid them. The license fee would be a nominal sum, not over 50 cents or a dollar, and the townspeople would be assured of clean and pure milk."

It was decided to paint the walls of the Fire Department room and bids will be asked soon.

The Board of Election Supervisors were granted permission to use the council room and the Fire Department room for voting places for district No. 14.

A right-of-way was granted to Leighton Brothers to extend the electric line through the town's property at the water farm, to their residence northwest of Oakland.

The monthly bills amounting to $1,040 were ordered paid. The next regular meeting will be March 7.

Two Automobiles Destroyed by Fire During Week

Two automobiles were destroyed by fire during the past week on the highway between Oakland and Crellin. One was an Auburn sedan, belonging to Foster DeWitt, Oakland garage owner, and the other, a Buick sedan, belonging to C. V. Gaumer, salesman for the Ball Band Rubber Company, Zanesville, Ohio.

The Buick sedan was wrecked near Ramsey's garage, on the outskirts of town Tuesday morning when it skidded on the slippery road and turned over. While the owner of the car was coming to town for a wrecker Belden Ramsey and Bernard Moon were engaged in removing the sample cases from the car and it is supposed that a short circuit in the wiring ignited the gasoline which had leaked from the tank. The car was enveloped in flames almost instantly and the two boys had a narrow escape from possible injury. The car was completely destroyed as was a sample case which the boys could not reach and which remained in the car. The loss is partly covered by insurance, according to State Policeman T. E. Currie, who investigated the accident.

Mr. DeWitt's car caught fire while he was driving it enroute from Oakland to Terra Alta last Thursday evening. Just west of Breedlove's on the highway and before reaching the river bridge at Crellin the car suddenly burst into flames and was completely consumed. Fortunately the driver escaped injury.

Certified Seed Potato Production One-third Larger than in 1930

Production of certified seed potatoes in the U. S. amounting to 8,704,999 bushels, was about one-third larger than in 1930, but about one-sixth smaller than in 1928, according to the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural economics. Twenty-two states were engaged in potato certification work.

Maryland raised 48,795 bushels of the Cobbler variety, 3,580 bushels of the Rural varieties exclusive of the Rural Russett, and 11,348 of the Rural Russets. All State totals were an increase over the preceding years.

To Observe Union Lenten Services Again This Year

Union Lenten services will again be observed on Wednesday evenings throughout Lent by the churches of Oakland. The first service will be held next Wednesday evening in the Methodist Episcopal church at 7:30.

These services are intended for the spiritual nourishment of the people of Oakland and the surrounding communities. The ministers of Oakland will speak on pertinent subjects.

FARMERS BEGIN KEEPING FARM ACCOUNT RECORDS

Book will Show Amount of Profit or Loss In Various Projects

January marked the beginning of a project in farm accounts for a number of farmers in cooperation with the County Agent and University of Maryland Extension service. Eleven account books have been distributed and a complete record of all business transactions, crops, expenses, etc., will be kept for the entire year. A specialist from the University will make three or four calls during the year and discuss various problems with the farmers who are keeping the accounts. The books are furnished by the Extension Service.

The record will show the profit or loss for crops, dairy business, livestock or other projects.

Those accepting the books were Guy S. Stanton, Paul Friend, Wm. Fitzwater. Wayne Hamilton. Daniel Frazee, Martin Frazee, Charles Nedrow, Orval Frazee, George Fitzwater, Delton Elzey and Carl Frazee.

The monthly report of the County Agent also stated that January marked the beginning of the maple syrup season in Garrett county and that a few producers had tapped their trees. The report also included the following: Richard Kilbourne, extension forester, spent four days in the county when meetings were held at Ryan's Glade, Bittinger and Grantsville. Plans for the marketing of the maple syrup in small bottles and jugs were discussed.

Possibility of Developing Winter Sports Here

The possibility of making Oakland the center of a winter sports program for Baltimore City was discussed last week in Baltimore between Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of Mountain Lake Institute, and Mr. H. H. Taggart, division passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and Mr. Fisher, of Baltimore.

There is a skiing club in Baltimore, the members of which are very much interested in developing a headquarters in Oakland, and at the first sign of snow and ice their committee is ready to come here and look over the possibilities for skiing and laso for ice boating on Deep Creek Lake.

These people have formerly gone to Lake Placid, New York, but prefer to develop their sport in their own State and on the main line of the railroad. Rev. Middaugh suggests that a committee be appointed from the Rotary Club to greet these visitors when they arrive. "This may prove the beginning of a winter sports program which has in it the possibility of bringing a great number of people to Garrett county," Rev. Middaugh said.

Garrett County Jail Is Given "Good" Rating by Welfare Director

The Garrett County Jail was given a "good" rating by the State Department of Welfare in the seventh annual report to the Governor, according to Stuart S. Janney, director. Only one of the twenty-three jails inspected were rated as "excellent." Conditions in six were described as "bad" and in nine as "very bad."

The Baltimore county jail at Towson was termed "excellent." Those in Allegany, Anne Arundel, Garrett and Prince George's were "good," and the jails in Frederick, Howard and Montgomery were "fair."

Mr. Janney reported conditions in the jails in Carroll, Dorchester, Queen Anne's, St. Mary's, Somerset and Worcester were "bad," and those in Calvert, Caroline, Cecil, Charles, Harford, Kent, Talbot, Washington and Wicomico counties were "very bad."

In Garrett county the building is adequate in size and structure, the report stated.

Mrs. Victoria E. Rafter, Kitzmiller, and Mrs. G. W. Kitzmiller, of Cincinnati, accompanied by their nephew, Mr. Pew, also of Kitzmiller, were in Oakland Tuesday.

REPORT SHOWS ACTIVITY OF MT. LAKE INSTITUTE

Monthly Summary Presented by Rev. I. S. Middaugh at Meeting of Board of Directors

OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING

A monthly summary of the activities connected with the development of Mountain Lake Institute was given by Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director, at the regular meeting of the board of directors held in the office of the county agent, Court House, Oakland.

The report states in part:

"Following the organization of the Institute on January 4, when the purpose of the Institute, its organization and plans were thoroughly discussed, the building of a budget was started and to date there are bonafide pledges slightly in excess of $1,000. A fair percentage of support has been enjoyed and as less than half the business men of Oakland have been reached by solicitation, we are certain of many additional pledges.

"Along with the building of the budget has been the constant drawing together of groups and individuals who might be concerned with the actual program. In this the Allegheny Tableland Association has played a considerable part. On January 6 a meeting was held in Pittsburgh under Dr. Reitel, chairman of the Council for Greater Pennsylvania, looking toward the listing of the tableland area as a project of the Pennsylvania Council. A manuscript has been prepared setting forth the natural resources of this area and turned in to the Council.

"During the month letters have been sent out to executives, corporations and leaders of religious and social groups. Some new opportunities are being developed for the Park this summer, including a Standard Training School for religious leaders under the auspices of the West Virginia Council, a ministers' conference, a program of extension activities beginning with a maple sugar producers' banquet on February 17, a potato growers' banquet, a poultrymen's banquet, community sings, a farmers' week, and a potato and poultry show.

"Plans have been discussed with executives of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the Blue Ridge bus lines in regard to making contracts with groups entering into the program.

"We are beginning to make contact with rural committees and during the coming month plan to hold meetings in almost every county of the group with Miss Sara B. Huff, well known music leader.

"Material has been gathered for the Institute booklet and a hotel directory is in preparation."

Both the West Virginia and Maryland Extension services were represented at the meeting and representatives of other organizations listed on the board of directors were also present.

To Present Band Concert And Lincoln Program at Hi School

A band concert by the Boys' Band and a program in honor of Abraham Lincoln will be presented at the Oakland High school auditorium on Friday afternoon, February 12.

Edith Brock will be master of ceremonies and the program will include the following: Star Spangled Banner, by band, scouts will present flag; address, Lincoln, by Lewis Jones; address, Lincoln as a scout, Carroll Casteel; Lincoln's Gettysburg address, by Vida Smith; march, National Emblem, by band; overture, The Altar of Genius; march, El Capitan; cornet solo, British Grenadiers, Elvin Iman, soloist; march, Washington Post, obligato by Charles Tusing, Donald Stemple, Harley Dawson and James Treacy; The Heart Bowed Down, solo by Regis Kerins; Stars and Stripes Forever March; Songs from the Old Folks, solos by John McIntire, James Treacy, Jack Treacy, Hugh Teets; quartet by Irving Broadwater, Jack Treacy, Kenneth Lawton, James Treacy; march, Flag of Humanity.

Central Relief Committee Meets

The regular meeting of the Central Relief Committee was held last night in the Masonic clubroom, when reports from the chairmen of the district committees were heard and a survey made of the needs of the entire county.

That the district storehouses were empty and in need of food, clothing and money was expressed by those in attendance upon the meeting.

Washington In Western Maryland . . . .

SURVEYOR, SOLDIER, STATESMAN AND PRESIDENT, VISITED ITS ROLLING HILLS

by

HELEN URNER PRICE

In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

Frederick.

While the country is observing Washington's bicentennial, this western section of Maryland glories in its own intimate associations with four phases of the first President's activities. Here it was that Washington, a boy of sixteen, surveyed the rugged lands of the Blue Ridge. Here he joined Braddock in his march against Fort Duquesne. After the Revolutionary War here he came as the country's most famous private citizen, promoting a navigation project of the day. And here, with appropriate ceremony, he was entertained as President of the United States.

Thrilled by the lure of adventure, the boy Washington, with George William Fairfax, started out in 1748 to survey the trackless wilderness beyond the Blue Ridge. On March 18 they arrived at Thomas Barwick's, near Hancock, where they stayed for a few days, pasturing their horses close by on the farm of Charles Polk. From Barwick's they crossed the Potomac in a canoe and traveled over a road declared by Washington to be the worst ever trod by man or beast, until they came to the home of Colonel Cresap, the redoubtable frontiersman who lived at Old Town.

There, to the youngsters' delight, they met a band of Indians returning from war with a scalp. Washington and his friends had some whiskey, "of which we gave them Part, it elevating their Spirits and put them in y. humour of Dauncing." His description of the dance in the firelight was portrayed with a vividness that a modern writer might well envy.

As a result of this expedition, which lasted five weeks, Washington was appointed surveyor of Culpeper county at a salary of fifty pounds per year.

In 1753, when Governor Dinwiddie needed an agent to cross the treacherous wilds near the frontier and deliver a letter to the French in the northwestern part of Pennsylvania he selected the 21-year-old major of the Virginia militia, George Washington. Accompanied by Jacob Van Braam as his interpreter, the messenger arrived on November 14 at Wills Creek (now Cumberland), where he stopped at Black Horse Tavern. This old log house, with its bar at the left end, was a rendezvous for the travelers of that day. Later it became the home of Martin Rizer, a noted gunsmith, whose patrons included Kit Carson, of Rocky Mountain fame. The logs of Black Horse Tavern were in such fine shape when the building was razed about eleven years ago that they were used in the reconstruction of "Washington's Headquarters" in Cumberland's Riverside Park.

While here Washington engaged Christopher Gist as guide and two white men and two Indian traders to go with him as servants. Striking out across the swamps and through miles of forest teeming with hostile savages, they reached Fort Le Boeuf on December 12. The major delivered the Governor's letter demanding that the French leave the Ohio territory and received an answer from the French commandant, Le Gardeur de St. Pierre—announcing that he intended to stay.

The return trip was made doubly hazardous by the continuous rain and snow. Washington states in his diary that "the Cold was so extremely severe that Mr. Gist had all of his Fingers and some of his Toes frozen." As their horses became weak and feeble, Washington decided at Venango to contiue his journey through the woods on foot. Tying himself in a "match coat" (so called because of matched animal skins) he set out with Gist in similar attire, their packs on their shoulders and guns in their hands. On January 7 they reached Wills Creek and nine days later, after traveling more than 1000 miles, Washington delivered to Governor Dinwiddie the letter from the French commander and his own report and map. His skillful execution of this commission proved to be the stepping-stone to his career. For so pleased was his Exellency with the recital of the trip that he requested a written detailed account. This Washington made, apologizing for the style and diction of the journal, which he explained was prepared in one day.

In 1754 Washington, now a lieutenant-colonel, had orders to defend a fort on the Ohio, and on April 2, with less than 150 men, he began a momentous march. Learning at Colonel Cresap's in Old Town that the fort had been captured by the French, he explored the Youghiogheny River valley in the unsuccessful search for a waterway opening to the lower fork of the Ohio. On May 28 he attacked and captured a party of French soldiers, under Jumoville, in their attempt to ambush the Virginia men. Jumonville was killed and the French and Indian War was started.

At Great Madows, after putting up a remarkable defense, Washington on July 3, was compelled to surrender his hastily constructed bulwark, called Fort Necessity, a circumstance which became famous as the only time that Washington ever surrendered.

It was in Frederick in 1755 that Washington first met General Braddock, who had invited him to become his aide-de-camp. The General had arrived from Alexandria by way of Rock Creek and Dowden's Ordinary (Clarksburg) and was awaiting impatiently the arrival of wagons for the transportation of supplies. Many historians have asserted that Braddock received Washington and Benjamin Franklin in Frederick on April 24, but Washington's own diary shakes these supposedly authoritative statements to the dust. According to his own notations, Washington was at Mount Vernon on April 24, in Winchester on April 30, and it was not until May 2 that he recorded his expenses at Frederick. At this time Franklin had finished his visit here and had departed. To refute the tradition that Washington met Franklin in Frederick is like bombing the Rock of Gibraltar, but in the interest of accuracy it must be denied.

A description of Frederick town and county at this time is obtained from the Journal of the Proceedings of the Seamen under Commodore Keppel, this being a detachment from the Fleet which supplemted Braddock's force of regular infantry and colonials.

On the 17th: Marched at 6 on our way to Frederick's Town, 15 miles from Dowden's; the roads this day were very mountainous. After going 11 miles we came to a river called Mouskiso (Monocaey), which empties itself into the Potomack; it runs very rapid, and after hard rain, is 13 feet deep; we ferried the Army over here in a flatt for that purpose, and at 3 o'clock arrived at the town, and put our men and ourselves into quarters, which were very indifferent. This town has not been settled above 7 years, and there are about 200 houses and 2 churches, one English and one Dutch; the inhabitants, chiefly Dutch, are industrious but imposing people; here we got plenty of provisions and forage.

On the 21st: At noon the General (Braddock) arrived here attended by Captains Orme and Morris, his Aides de camp, and Secretary Shirley, and went to Head Quarters, a house provided for him, and Sir John St. Clair arrived here.

It is not known whether the house mentioned was the old log tavern known as Washington's Headquarters, where the young Virginia is said to have conferred with his commanding officer, but this tradition persisted down to the collapse of that old building about forty years ago.

Scharf relates that Braddock, while in Frederick, purchased of Governor Sharpe an English charlot, and, accompanied by his staff and a guard of light horse, he left Frederick in the chariot by the road now named the Jefferson pike, turning about a mile from town at Prospect Hill, the colonial home of Daniel Dulaney.

As they passed by the mansion Washington is understood to have expressed his admiration for the horses on the estate. This pleased Daniel Dulaney, who in after years, according to tradition, gave Washington the famous white charger that carried him to victory through the battles of the Revolution. General Washington was greatly attached to his beautiful steed and after the war he wrote to the owner at Prospect Hill asking that the faithful animal be permitted to end his life grazing in the pastures of his youth. The request was granted and the white horse, made immortal by Currier and Ives, sleeps in the shadow of the Catoctin hills.

At Prospect Hall Braddock and his staff branched off by Butterfly lane to strike the trail that led past Braddock Spring. Near this spring is a stone with this inscription: "This boulder marks the National Trail over which traveled General Edward Braddock and Lieutenant-Colonel George Washington, 1755. Erected by the Frederick Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution."

The road along the north side of the Potomac not being yet made, the general proceeded by way of Winchester to Will's Creek, where he arrived amid a thundering salute of seventeen guns. Here the chariot was abandoned: its lurching over the narrow trail had convinced even Braddock that this was no way to go to war in America. At Will's Creek Washington was formally appointed aide-de-camp to General Braddock.

The tragic result of this expedition against Fort Duquesne is familiar history, as well as the fact that it was largely due to Washington's valor and military skill that a remnant of the expedition was saved in the smashing defeat on July 9 of the Battle of the Monongahela, in which Braddock was mortally wounded. Pale and weak from a recent illness, the young aide rode fearlessly into the fight. Two horses were shot under him and four bullets pierced his clothes, but he emerged unscathed from the conflict and led the depleted but reorganized expedition back into Maryland.

One of those rare flickers of Washington's sense of humor (suggestion of Mark Twain's remark that the report of his death had been greatly exaggerated) appears in a letter written at Fort Cumberland ten days after the battle:

As I have heard, since my arrivel at this place, a circumstantial account of my death and dying speech, I take this early opportunity of contradicting the first and of assuring you that I have not yet composed the latter.

It was on his return to Virginia and in recognition of his skill in extricating the troops that on August 14, 1755, still a youth of 23 but a veteran in frontier warfare, he was appointed colonel and commander-in-chief of the forces of Virginia. It was in that capacity that he again went to Fort Cumberland on the 17th of September to make a new inspection. The young colonel wanted his men to be smartly attired, and he ordered that every officer of the regiment should "provide himself as soon as he can conveniently with a Suit of Regimentals of good blue Cloath; the Coat to be faced and cuffed with Scarlet, and trimmed with Silver; a Scarlet waistcoat, with Silver Lace; blue Breeches and a silver laced Hat, if to be had, for Camp and Garrison Duty."

In October, 1756, Colonel Washington started out to make a personal survey of the frontier from Maryland to North Carolina, with the purpose of establishing a chain of forts to protect the colonists from warring Indians. The successful completion of this project was one of his greatest achievements as a military engineer. No original record of this journey has been found except two letters to Governor Dinwiddie and a few items of Washington's expense account. Still standing, with its gray walls outlined against the sky, is old Fort Frederick, one of the sturdy Maryland ramparts of that defensive line.

As both Fredericksburg and Mount Vernon were so close to the Maryland border, Washington necessarily made many trips into the State. One of the frequently used crossings of the Potomac lay far to the west of Paw Paw. On September 4, 1769, we find he rode to the fields near Hancock, where his horses were in pasture, then proceeded to a Mr. Flint's near by. In 1770 he journeyed clear to the Ohio and on his way beck stopped at Killam's Tavern, near Frostburg. The next day, November 27, he called on his old friend, Colonel Cresap, at Old Town. With that his recorded visits to Western Maryland end until the Revolution is over.

It was not as a dashing young warrior that Washington next returned to Western Maryland, but a man grown stern and somber in the service of his country. The terrific years of the Revolution had left their mark, but his figure was still magnificently erect and in his eyes benevolence remained.

In 1784 General Washington became interested in a project to make the Potomac River navigable to the west. On September 1, accompanied by his nephew Bushrod, who afterward became a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and by Dr. James Cralk and the latter's son, he started on a trip to obtain information about the river and to transact some real estate business of his own. At Bath (now Berkeley Springs) James Rumsey showed him the working model of a boat that convinced Washington of its possibilities. This is one of the recorded episodes cited to prove Rumsey the pioneer in steamboat invention.

Leaving his companions at Cumberland and taking one servant with him, the general rode again on the Braddock road. Near Allegany Grove he dined on September 10 at Gwynne's Tavern and lodged that night at Tomlinson's Tavern at Little Meadows. Early the next morning he crossed the Youghiogheny, which he decided could be so improved as to permit navigation, and breakfasted at Mount's Tavern in Oakton. His travels then took him over the battle ground of Fort Necessity, past the place where General Braddock lay buried, up through Pennsylvania, and then down the western edge of Maryland to the house of Charles Friend, which stood on what is now known as the Stephen Browning farm, occupied at present by Joseph T. Glotfelty, about one and a half miles west of Oakland. Unhappily, it must be confessed that at the Friend house (most inappropriately) the traditional Maryland hospitality was found wanting, as Washington feelingly writes that they got nothing for their horses and only boiled corn for themselves.

Fortunately, Mr. Friend's indifference to the great general has been more than counterbalanced by the enthusiasm of Oakland's present city (county) surveyor, C. Milton Sincell, who in his interest in Washington's trips through Garrett county has checked the famous traveler's field notes by his own surveys and can point out the exact spots where the Father of His Country once passed.

Leaving the Friend house, Washington, again accompanied by his nephew, Bushrod, passed Archer's (Archie's) Spring, crossed Backbone Mountain and then went to the house of Thomas Logsdon at Gormania. On October 4, after journeying about 680 miles, he returned to Mount Vernon.

The Potomac Navigation Company, with Washington as president and James Rumsey as superintendent, was organized on January 5, 1785. In August of that year Washington and the other directors left Georgetown on horseback for an inspection tour of the Potomac River and surrounding country as far as the Shenandoah Falls at Harper's Ferry.

Fortified by the "cold colation, with spirits, Wine, &ca" that they took with them, they turned from the main road three miles from Georgetown and rode to Mr. Goldsborough's at the head of Seneca Falls. The next day, having obtained canoes, they started at the head of the falls and went down stream to the Little Falls, returned by water to the Great Falls and then, after partaking of a luncheon provided by the gentlemen of the nighborhood, returned to Mr. Goldsborough's house, where they spent the night.

The next morning they rode through the Maryland Sugar Lands, 1,400 acres of which belonged to Geo. Plater. The general remarked on their being "fine and very level," becoming of an inferior quality as the country extended twelve miles further to the Monoeaey. From the Monocacy to Frederick, a distance of about twelve miles, the soil was "unexcelled for fertility, convenient levelness and luxuriant growth of timber."

Washington was intensely interested in agriculture and he was impressed by the good condition of the farms on the manor of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who owned in that section twelve or fourteen thousand acres.

In his diary Washington describes Frederick Town as being situated on a branch of the Monocaey and lying rather low, the country round being beautiful and in high cultivation. In the town of that day there were a courthouse, churches, a workhouse and other public buildings. The mechanics were numerous, "in proportion to the aggregate; and the spirit of Industry seems to pervade the place, tho' trade, it is said, had slackened."

In his diary he writes:

Friday, 9th. Dined at a Dutchman's 2 miles above the Mo(uth) of Monoeasy and reached the former (Frederick) about 5 Oclock. Drank Tea, supped and lodged at Govr. Johnson's.

In the Evening the Bells rang, and Guns were fired; and a Committee waited upon me by order of the Gentlemen of the Town to request that I wd. stay next day and partake of a public dinner which the Town were desirous of giving me. But as arrangements had been made, and the time for examining the Shenandoah Falls, previous to the day fixed for receiving labourers into pay, was short, I found it most expedient to decline the honor.

After recording that he breakfasted on August 6 at Governor Johnson's and dined at Morris' Tavern at Harper's Ferry, Washington writes that the land extended for seven miles to the Catoctin mountains continued of the same excellent quality, although it was not quite so luxuriant in appearance, while the country stretching ten miles beyond the river was more hilly and of a second quality, but "strong and very productive." The remaining three miles to the river was "good soil."

The next day, about sunrise, Washington and the directors rode from Harper's Ferry to Keeptryst (now Sandy Hook), where canoes were provided, in which they investigated the river until breakfast time, when they returned to the ferry. A little later, having then but one available canoe, Washington, Colonel Gilpin and Mr. Rumsey set forth with the intention of running through "the Spout" (the rapids just below Harper's Ferry), but were dissauded because of the frailty of their craft. Two days later, however, in a suitable boat, Washington, Colonel Gilpin and Colonel Fitzgerald triumphantly made their way over the Spout and the other falls and rapids and breakfasted on the Maryland side at a Captain Smith's, where their horses had been sent the evening before.

Captain Smith, whose first name one is hardly surprised to learn was John, lived near what is now the town of Brunswick, formerly called Berlin, which in 1787 was laid out by his father, Leonard Smith, on part of a tract of land delightfully called Merry Poop-o-Day. Capt. John Smith had been an officer in the Revolutionary Army and was one of the original members of the Society of the Cincinnati, of which Washington was president. After leaving Capt. Smith's the party dined at Noland's Ferry and lodged that night at a Mr. Taylor's house, about three miles above the mouth of Goose Creek and approximately ten miles below Noland's.

On August 10, while again sailing the Potomac, they arrived at Smith's Ferry (now Knoxville). From there to Lucket's Ferry the water was of sufficient depth for boats and smooth, except at one ripple near Lucket's that was caused by a fish dam. Between this place and the Catoctin ridge in Virginia, where the river passes through the mountains, they navigated Hook's Falls, which were not difficult to cross except for the shallowness of the water and the crookedness of the channel, both of which Washington declared could be improved. From these falls to Noland's Ferry, about four miles away, the navigation, leaving Trammel's Island on the left and Peach Island on the right, was easy and pleasant, with only shoal water in one or two places, which the directors decided could be improved without much expense.

The Potomac Navigation Company was not a financial success and this particular project was abandoned, but after the War of 1812 the policy that Washington had sponsored a generation earlier was taken up by the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, by which ultimately the canal was completed to Cumberland. Almost alongside rose the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which ultimately served the purposes of the canal, but served it more efficiently and the canal fell to disuse.

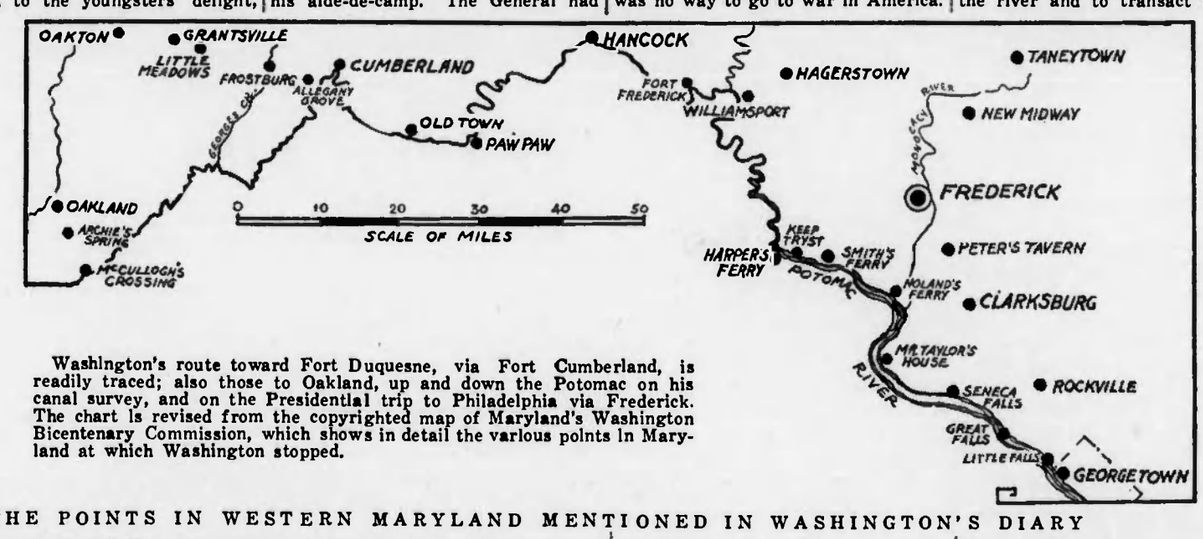
In a letter to Thomas Jefferson, of date February 13, 1789, Washington wrote: "A factory of glass is established upon a large scale on Monocacy river, near Fredericktown, in Maryland. I am informed it will this year produce glass of various kinds nearly to the amount of ten thousand pounds in value."

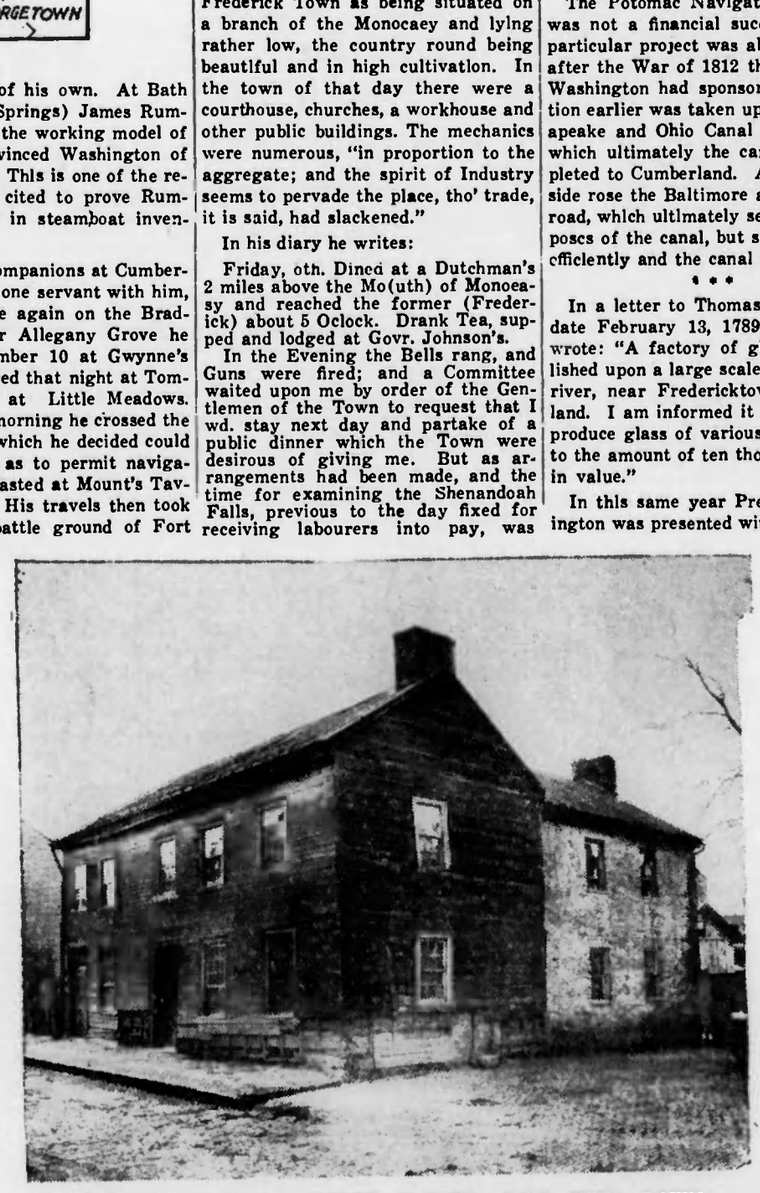
In this same year President Washington was presented with a lot of the glassware, carried in person to Mt. Vernon by the manufacturer, John F. Amelung, a native of Germany and a familiar name to glass collectors of today. Among the rare pieces were two large goblets of flint glass upon which was engraved the Washington coat of arms.

It was soon after Mr. Amelung's visit to Mount Vernon, according to a paper written by his greatniece,



Washington's route toward Fort Duquesne, via Fort Cumberland, is readily traced; also those to Oakland, up and down the Potomac on his canal survey, and on the Presidential trip to Philadelphia via Frederick. The chart is revised from the copyrighted map of Maryland's Washington Bicentenary Commission, which shows in detail the various points in Maryland at which Washington stopped.

THE POINTS IN WESTERN MARYLAND MENTIONED IN WASHINGTON'S DIARY



CUMBERLAND'S BLACK HORSE TAVERN, NOW TORN DOWN.

Julia von H. Kalkman, and recorded by the Frederick County Historical Society, that the President visited the glass factory in the Urbana district and spent the night at the Amelung mansion, Mountevina. No documentary evidence of this exists, but a possible explanation is found in a circumstance pointed out by J. Alexis Shriver in his article (in the January 10 Magazine) on Washington's Maryland trail. For Washington gave his diaries, notebooks and ledgers to his nephew, Bnshrod Washington, who had an unfortunate habit of presenting parts of the priceless papers to his relatives and friends as souvenirs. Through this circumstance the diary from February 3 to September 30 of the year 1789 is missing, and the fact that there has been found in Washington's own script no record of this visit to Mountevina may be thus explained.

In her article Miss Kalkman writes that her uncle gave the President a princely reception, a band of musicians being in the delegation which went part of the way to meet him. At night there was a banquet and ball, illuminated by a display of fireworks. After dinner the next day President Washington departed for Mount Vernon in the Amelung coach, in which he was escorted by his host the greater part of the trip. The upper door sections of this coach, the original panels and glass through which the distinguished passenger must have looked, were given to Miss M. Louise Johnson while on a visit to Mountevina and are used as picture frames to decorate her dining room.

In 1790 the President visited Hagerstown, then known as Elizabethtown. As his personal records of this trip are among the souvenirs, we are indebted to the historian Scharf for the details.

On October 20 the distinguished visitor was met three miles from town by Capt. Rezin Davis, of the Light Horse, and many prominent citizens, who escorted him through the street, since named in his honor, to Baltzhoover's Taven, where an elaborate supper was served. After spending the night at the home of Gen. Otho Holland Williams, Washington left the next morning for home.

It was as President that Washington, on June 30, 1791, visited Frederick on his way from Mount Vernon to Philadelphia, which at that time was the capital of the country, New York having just been abandoned as the capital and Washington not yet being ready. In his diary of this date the first President explains that, as he wished to see the country north of Georgetown along the upper road, he decided to pass through Fredericktown in Maryland and, accordingly, breakfasted at a small village called Williamsburgh (now Rockville), dined at Peter's Tavern, twenty miles further, and arrived at Frederick about sundown, the entire dlstance being about forty-three miles. He describes the road along which he passed as being rather hilly, but states that the land was good and well-timbered, especially from the Monocacy to Frederick, where for four miles the soil was very rich and fine, the country more thickly settled and the farmhouses of a better grade than he had expected to find.

On nearing Frederick the President, according to Scharf, was met by a company of horsemen composed of the prominent citizens of the county and headed by Major Mounjoy Bayley, chief marshal, who conducted the distinguished visitor through the town to a tavern, the name of which Washington does not mention.

But here we encounter a tradition so dear to Frederick hearts that it must be here recorded, but with the painful admission that Washington's diary neglects to mention it: Anyway, the tale runs that across the street from Kimball's Tavern lived an attractive, dark-haired girl named Barbara Hauer, afterward immortally known as Barbara Fritchie. She, any devoted Fredericktonian will declare, assisted Mrs. Kimball in entertaining the President by pouring coffee for him out of a blue Staffordshire coffee pot that is now proudly displayed in Frederick. Evidently the charming Barbara's personality was as vivid in those days as when, seventy-odd years later (and again in a manner which most regretfully is supported by tradition rather than by undisputed record!) she became Frederick's brightest star, a stellar position which, justly or not, she has held ever since—for it is declared that the Lowestoft bowl that is exhibited beside the coffee pot was presented to her by the appreciative and courtly general. These china pieces, with their treasured associations, were given by Barbara Fritchie to her niece, from whom they were inherited by her descendants. And who is going to demolish such a tradition?

To be sure, some historians, in defiance of Frederick's proud tradition, say that President Washington stopped at Brother's Tavern on this visit to Frederick (just another group of iconoclasts say that Stonewall Jackson did not even march past her house!), but they will have to work hard to get around that beautiful blue coffee pot and the Lowestoft bowl.

After leaving the tavern (whichever it was) the President was escorted to the residence of Governor Johnson, where there was a brilliant illumination to celebrate the event. In his diary of the following day Washington writes:

Friday, July 1st. Received an Address from the Inhabitants of Frederick Town and about 7 Oclock left it—dined at one Cockerley's 13 miles off and lodged at Tawneytown only 12 miles farther, being detained at the first stage by rain and to answer an address wch. had been presented to me in the morning.

Cockerly's, or Cookerly's Tavern, where the President dined, still stands at New Midway and all of the Frederick county buildings where Washington personally records having visited, is the only one still standing. The old stone house, with its quaint portico, and original Colonial woodwork, is splendidly preserved and is now the home of Charles A. Stover.

Scharf states that General Washington spent the night at Terra Rubra, the country mansion of Major John Ross Key. As this house was only a few miles from Tawneytown, it is entirely consistent that Washington, with his customary brevity, should refer to the place where he lodged as Tawneytown. Terra Rubra was the birthplace of Major Key's two children, Mrs. Roger Brooke Taney and Francis Scott Key, author of The Star Spangled Banner.

Washington was a fine judge of good land. Before it was divided, Frederick county was the largest wheat-growing county in the United States and its grain crop of 1791 was far-famed. In addition to be impressed by this wonderful fertility of the land, the President had been charmed by the beauty of its scenery, and it is asserted by Scharf that in a letter to Sir John Sinclair, President Washington declared that "Frederick county is the Garden Spot of the United States."

On October 14 of this year the President visited Williamsport, where he was received with enthusiastic demonstrations. This thriving town, like many another whose ambitions flourished briefly, was considered a possible site for the capital.

During the Whisky Insurrection of 1794 General Washington, accompanied by his private secretary and Alexander Hamilton (who then was Secretary of the Treasury, but who eagerly resumed his old war paint under his old general), journeyed through Maryland, arriving on October 13th at Williamsport by way of Greencastle. The next morning they crossed the Potomac below Hancock, spent the night at Berkeley Springs and then went to Old Town. On October 16 they set out for Cumberland, where they were met by a party of horsemen under the command of Major Lewis, a nephew of Washington, and by Brigadier-General Smith, who escorted them to the camp. From there they were escorted to the residence of Major David Lynn, an old Colonial officer, whose hospitality the President highly praised.

After inspecting the troops at Cumberland and arranging for an early advance of the militia against the insurgents, the President left on October 19 for Bedford. The rebellion collapsed forthwith. On this trip President Washington wrote his farewell address to the army. It was his last journey through Western Maryland.

Observe 77th Birthday Anniversary

A party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Durst, at Mount Nebo, was given by their neighbors on January 29th, the occasion being the celebration of the elderly couples' 77th birtbday anniversaries, both having been born on the same day. About fifty guests were present. Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Durst.

Miss Caulk Entertains

Miss Emma Caulk was hostess to the Teachers' Bridge Club at the Victoria Hotel, Thursday evening. Four tables were in play. The prize was won by Miss Mary Miller. Delicious refreshments were served.

Ladies' Aid Quilting

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church held a quilting party at the home of Mrs. C. U. Edwards on Thursday afternoon. One comfort was completed.

Successful Bake Sale

The bake sale, which was conducted by the Girl Scout troop here on Saturday was very successful. The sum of $8.00 was realized and will be used to promote the activities of the local troop.

Home Hygiene Class Convenes

The Home Hygiene Class met at the residence of Mrs. Fred. Livengood for its second meeting last Wednesday afternoon. "The making of a patient's bed" was the subject for discussion and demonstration. Eight ladies were in attendance. The class is being conducted by Mrs. Cole, county nurse, and will meet again on Wednesday afternoon, February 10, at 2 o'clock. All meetings will be held at the home of Mrs. Livengood.

Basketball Games

The Grantsville Trouncers and the men's basketball team of Friendsville played a very interesting game here Tuesday night in which Grantsville was again victorious, winning with a score of 22 to 13.

The Grantsville team motored to Friendsville Thursday evening and won against the Friendsville team by one point, the score being 20 to 19 in favor of Grantsville.

Young People's Society Organized

A young people's organization has been started by Rev. S. D. Sigler and other interested persons in the Lutheran church. The meetings, which will be held each Tuesday evening, will be both devotional and recreational in character. All are welcome.

At the first meeting twelve people were present and elected the following officers: Casper Loechel, president; Mary G. Miller, vice-president; Iva Klotz, secretary and treasurer; Mabel Younkin, pianist. Various committees will be appointed by the president. A name for the organization will be chosen at the next meeting.

Farwell Party

A farewell party was given Wednesday evening, Misses Anna Durst and Helen Miller being the honor guests, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Miller. About thirty were present and participated in games, contests and other features of the evening's amusements. The two young women left Monday, February 1, for the University of Maryland Training School for Nurses.

Studios Observe Centenary

The Holmes-Wallace Studios took its part in the general observance of the Lewis Carrol Centenary by presenting its Story Club in four scenes from the famous "Alice" books, at the second choral and dramatic evening, Friday, January 29, in the studio. Beautiful and characteristic costumes and picturesque stage setting, combined with excellent dramatic work, made a most charming performance for which the children of the club deserve great credit. The cast was as follows: Alice, Florence Davis; Hatter, Rhoda Shumaker; March Hare, Helen Miller; Doormouse, Claudia Paul; Cheshire Cat, Mary Helen Gnagey; Red Queen, Grace Swauger; Tiger Lily, Mary Schaefer; Rose, Grace Hanft; Daisies, Mildred Beachy, Evelyn Spiker, Marjie Miller, Betty Beachy; Violet, Mary Jane Beachy.

Rhoda Shumaker played the piano overture, Birds and Butterflies, and Mr. A. J. Miller sang the prologue, "Mr. Dream-Maker." At the close of the drama, Florence Davis and Rhoda Shumaker played a piano duet; Edgar Bender gave a reading and piano solos were rendered by Pauline Dietle and Verl and Cecil Edwards.

The second part of the program, given by the Choral Club, follows:

"In Old Madrid," Miss Ruth Conley and Choral Club; baritone solos, "I Fear No Foe" and "My Lonely Caravan at Night," by Mr. A. J. Miller; "The Stars in Heaven" (Rheinberger), Choral Club; "The Vikings," Choral Club with Miss Wallce, reader.

The children's part of the program was repeated at a matinee Saturday afternoon, January 30, with Miss Helen Folk, reader, and Miss Delta Gantt, soprano, assisting. Trials of skill, in which performance the audience joined, followed the program, Miss Grace Hanft winning the prize.

Y. and M. Quartet Musical

The Yoder and Miller quartet, which is planning a musical program to be given in the Lutheran social hall on Thursday evening, March 10, is composed of O. H. Yoder, auctioneer; Olin L. Miller, contractor; Claude Yoder, farmer, and Irvin Miller, florist, of Springs, Pa.

Lutheran Missionary Society

The Lutheran Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Floyd C. Dichl on Tuesday evening, February 2. The meeting was led by Miss Emma Caulk and was very interesting as well as beneficial. A large attendance was present. Delicious refreshments were served.

Birthday Party

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gnagey gave a birthday party on Saturday evening at the National Hotel in honor of their ten-year-old daughter, Mary Helen. About thirty guests were present and enjoyed the music and games of the evening's merry entertainment.

Bridge Club

Mrs. C. O. Bender entertained the Bridge Club at her home last Tuesday evening. The prize was won by Mrs. J. R. Gnagey. Refreshments were served.

Former Resident Leads Meetlng

Dr. Grata V. Broadwater, of Chambersburg, Pa., presided at a meeting of the American Bureau of Chiropractic Auxiliary, No. 11, organized by himself a year ago, in the Chambersburg High School, last week. Dr. Broadwater is a son of the late Noah Broadwater and a former Grantsville boy. He is a leader in his profession in the city in which he is located. His many Grantsville friends join in wishing him much future success.

Ladies' Aid Will Hold Supper

At the last meeting of the Methodist Ladies' Aid plans were made for a roast pork supper to be given at the American Restaurant on the evening of February 18th from 5 to 9 o'clock. All are invited. The proceeds will be used for repairs for the parsonage.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1932

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Oakland Improvement, Manufacturing and Development Company of Garrett county was incorporated, with E. H. Sincell, president; D. E. Offutt, vice-president; F. A. Thayer, secretary; A. G. Sturgiss, treasurer; E. E. Sollars, J. W. Veitch, E. M. Spedden, H. J. Mayers, H. W. McComas, Waring Thomas and the above officers constituting the board of directors. The company was organized for the purpose of improving and developing Oakland and Garrett county.

A saw mill owned and operated by Louis Littman at Swanton, was destroyed by fire, along with some manufactured shingles, entailing a loss of $2,000 with no insurance.

Eighteen freight cars were wrecked at Bloomington, many of them falling to the Western Md. Railway tracks where that road passes beneath the B. and O. tracks on the Bloomington bridge spanning the Potomac River.

A regular old-time blizzard struck Oakland. The grounhog seemed to understand his business, as he had seen his shadow two days previous.

Messrs D. E. Offutt, G. W. Delawder, G. S. Hamill and R. T. Browning went to Annapolis to look in on the Maryland Legislature then in session.

Lakin, 6-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. M. Friend, of near Oakland, was playing with a pocket knife and fell upon it, the blade penetrating his abdomen.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The furniture and fixtures of the Knights of Pythias lodge was moved from the former lodge room in the First National Bank Building to the new Knights of Pythias building on Third street, which had recently been completed.

Cold weather was prevailing with a fine sledding snow.

The store of D. E. Offutt and Sons was burglarized and goods valued at $150 to $200 carried away. Two colored men were arrested in Brunswick charged with the robbery.

Thomas Harne butchered two four-months-old hogs, which netted [illegible] pounds.

Senator Speicher prepared a bill for introduction in the Senate to divide Election District No. 8 into two voting precincts.

February, 1912, was composed of 29 days; of these days there were five Thursdays and The Republican had five issues that month, something never before occurring in its history. February, 1872, had five Thursdays, but that was before The Republican was established. The calendar will not show five Thursdays again in February until the year 1940.

KITZMILLER

The funeral of Mrs. Blanche O'Donald Price, aged 48, who died at Memorial Hospital Cumberland, was held at the Methodist church here Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, with interment in the Nethkin cemetery. She was a resident of this place for many years and was a member of the M. E. church and active in church work.

Mrs. Price was the mother of two small daughters, Eshter and Lillian, and is also survived by her husband her mother, one brother and one sister.

The pallbearers were Joe Craver, Joe Beals, C. E. Rafter, W. S. Arnold, Harry Wilson and W. D. Walter; the flowerbearers were Misses Verba Walker, Gladys Hamill and Lucy Poole, Mrs. Blanche Wilson, Mrs. Lydia Davis and Mrs. H. G. Barrick.

Quite a large number of persons from a distance attended the funeral among them being Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Price, Buckhannon; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Price, Frostburg; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Price, Keyser; Dr. and Mrs. LeRoy Price, Shinnston; Herbert Price, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, Bloomington; Mrs. W. W. Davis and son David, Miss May Davis and Mrs. William Howard, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Clara Launell, Everett Koontz, Mrs. Alice Mayers, Moundsville; Mrs. Lola Rankin, Mrs. Robert Durham, Westernport; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simpson and Miss May Simpson, Cumberland.

Mr. Clever Poole, of Moorfield, W. Va., visited here on Sunday.

Mr. George Nethkin, of Baltimore, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. J. E. Chappell, of Cumberland, visited her sister, Mrs. Ethel Bender, on Sunday.

Mrs. G. W. Kitzmiller, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is visiting at the home of Mrs. V. E. Rafter.

Miss Froney Williams, of Washington, D. C., visited her sister, Mrs. Lucy Paugh, a short time recently.

NEW GERMANY

Sunday school this Sunday morning at the Reformed church at 9:30, followed by church services in the M. E. church at 10:30, with Rev. A. C. Bell, the pastor, in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Robeson, of Frostburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Warnick spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Otto.

William Dailey, Monongah, West Va., is visiting members of the Dieling family in this community.

Emmons Warnick has recently been employed in Cumberland.

Mrs. Floyd Broadwater and daughters, Freda and Mabel, spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Dieling.

Otis Kamp, Grantsville, spent the week-end visiting relatives in this community.

Mrs. Arthur Broadwater, Mrs. Lee Broadwater, Mrs. Marshall Durst and Mrs. Floyd Broadwater were guests at the home of S. L. Otto on Thursday.

KEMPTON

BITTINGER

Your trouble's a ton, or your trouble's an ounce,
For your trouble is what you make it.
It isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts—
But the question is: how did you take it?

William Dietel and family, of near Jennings, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver C. Buckle, at their home in this village, last Sunday afternoon.

Cecil Bittinger and his sister, Miss Mildred Bittinger, of near Hagerstown, Md., spent last week with relatives in this community.

Plans Develop for Maple Sugar Banquet on February 17

Plans are developing for the bringing together of the producers of maple syrup and maple sugar of the Allegheny Tableland area in a banquet in the Methodist church at Mountain Lake Park on the evening of February 17th. The banquet will begin at 5:30 o'clock with a fifty cent charge per plate. The thought of this banquet is not primarily that of commercial development, but the coming together and the establishment of friendly relations between the producers of a light commodity living in the different counties of the area, according to Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the Mountain Lake Institute. All extension workers, maple sugar producers and interested business and professional men are invited to the meeting. Mr. Nat T. Frame, Director of the Extension Service of West Virginia University, Dr. Albertson, of the Council for Greater Pennsylvania, have been invited and it is hoped by those in charge that Miss Sara B. Huff will also be in attendance.

NO MATTER HOW YOU TRAVEL

The Telephone Helps You All Along The Way

THE railroad, the steamship, the motorbus, the airplane, the street car, the taxicab—all use the telephone in countless ways to speed transportation service and to make it safe. They use it because it is fast and sure.

But chiefly they have telephones so that you can quickly find out about schedules and rates, make reservations, arrange about baggage, order cabs, and in many other ways do business with them.

The telephone is the universal thought-bearer. It wipes out time and distance, puts friend in touch with friend, buyer with seller, servant with served.

It is yours to command for a few cents a day.

Mrs. John Olin Wilhelm, accompanied by her son Leonard Wilhelm, of near Avilton, were here Thursday on business connected with the estate of the late Mr. Wilhelm.

Messrs. Fred. G. Fox, George McCullough and Mr. and Mrs. Juniper Teets; also Mr. and Mrs. Silas Teets and Charles T. Frantz, all of Friendsville and community, were in Oakland yesterday morning.

Arthur Naylor, who accompanied Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Naylor on their trip to Sebring, Florida, returned to Oakland Saturday night, making the return by water to New York, thence by rail to Oakland.

The sales and clerical forces of the Oakland and Kingwood stores of the West Penn Company were in session Tuesday at Kingwood with some of the representatives of the corporation from Morgantown, West Va.

Leonard Murphy, St. John's College, Annapolis, and Thomas Gonder, Jr., and Thurl Tower, University of Maryland, spent a few days in Oakland with their parents recently, having several days' vacation between semesters.

Mrs George S. Cochran, of Tampa, Florida, is here on a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Thayer, Mrs. Cochran being called home owing to the illness of her mother, who has been confiend to her home several weeks.

Mr. James A. Enlow was one of the honor guests at a banquet at the Hotel Morgan, Morgantown, W. Va., on Tuesday evening, which was given for octogenarians who had for 80 years or longer sung the song of life among the West Virginia hills. Miss Sara B. Huff, West Virginia State director music, and one of the workers of the Mountain Lake Park Institute, was the hostess. Rev. I. S. Middaugh and Mr. H. V. Leighton, of Mountain Lake Park, were also present at the dinner.

The American Legion Auxiliary will have a card party on Wednesday, February 24, it has been announced.

Mr. C. H. Baker, of near the Park, was a caller at The Republican office Tuesday.

The Republican was visited on last Thursday afternoon by Mr. Solomon Orendorf, of near Bittinger, who was accompanied by his three daughters, Misses Alma, Carrie and Freda Orendorf, all of whom became greatly interested in the operation of the various mechanical contrivances used in production of the paper.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week the office of the Board of County Commissioners was besieged by large numbers of taxpayers from every section of the county who appeared before the board to have their personal and real estate assessments revised. In many instances the Commissioners, in view of decreased valuation, the requests of taxpayers for a reduction was acceded to while on the other hand the assessments were increased when it became apparent that under-valuation was evident. As a general proposition the action of the board in the matters under consideration resulted satisfactorily.

Rev. Brock to Give Series of Talks on Washington

In recognition of the Bi-Centennial of George Washington, Rev. W. B. Brock will give a series of "Messages from the Life of Washington" at the Sunday morning services in the Presbyterian church. The topics will be as follows:

"Washington, the Youth," February 7; "Washington, the Man", February 14; "Washington, the Patriot", Feb. 21; "Washington, the Christian", Feb. 28. Special music by the girls' choir, the Triple Trio, will be rendered at each service.

Next Sunday, in discussing "Washington, the Youth", at 11 o'clock Rev. Brock will speak about the famous story of the hatchet and the cherry tree which many historians regard as legendary, and its significance, if any. He will also mention the interesting and valuable advice which Washington gave to young people on the alluring subject of courtship and marriage.

St. Paul's M. E. Church Notices

The themes for discussion at St. Paul's M. E. church, Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor, are as follows: At 10:45 a. m., "The hunger of the soul." For 7:30 p. m., "Conditions of forgiveness."

Employes of the West Maryland Power Company are engaged this week in re-equipping the Brainard-Warner mines located near Blaine, W. Va., prior to resuming operations in the mines which have not been working since 1926. It will require thirty days or more to clear the mines of accumulated water, after which it is the intention of the owners of the property to operate full time.

County Superintendent has issued a neatly printed folder containing the rules and regulations governing the operation of the school busses and the conduct of the pupils and drivers using the conveyances. A copy of the folder is to be given each pupil and they must be governed by the rules laid down therein. Safety is the chief thought of the superintendent and this he seeks to impress upon the minds of the children who are transported in the vehicles.

DIED.

MRS. LILLY O. DAVIS

Mrs. Lilly O. Davis, aged nearly 59 years, died Sunday morning about 11:15 o'clock at Elkins, West Va. Mrs. Davis was stricken while engaged in the morning worship at the Elkins M. E. church and died within a few moments.

Funeral services were conducted on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock at the M. E. church in Oakland by Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor, assisted by the Rev S. B. Hart, of Elkins. Interment was made in Oakland cemetery.

Mrs. Davis is survived by her husband, D. S. Davis; by two daughters, Mrs. Georgia Whipkey, of Oakland, and Miss Beryl Davis, of Elkins; one son, Delbert M. Davis, of Oakland, and four grandchildren. She also leaves four sisters, Mrs. Grace Randolph and Mrs. Lura Gayhart, Staunton, Va.; Mrs. Annie Ford, Salem, W. Va., and Mrs. Leta Davis, Huntington, W. Va., and one brother, Mr. Lee Davis, of Salem.

The deceased was born in Doddridge county, West Va., and lived in Oakland and vicinity since 1901. She was a member of St. Paul's M. E. church of Oakland and of the local chapter of the Eastern Star. Members of the Men's Bible class of the M. E. church were the pallbearers and members of the Missionary Socitey of the same church were flowerbearers.

The announcement of Mrs. Davis' sudden death came as a great shock to members of her family and her large circle of friends in Oakland where she was well known and greatly esteemed for her many noble Christian virtues and motherly regard for the unfortunate and especially those in need.

R. P. MALONEY

Word was received here that R. P. Maloney, a former vice-president and general manager of the Davis Coal and Coke company, and located at Thomas and Oakland for several years, had died in New York city Sunday night at 12 o'clock.

The news of Mr. Maloney's death came as a shock as he was comparatively a young man. In addition to his duties with the coal company Mr. Maloney was interested in a number of enterprises in this section, one of them being the ownership of the Turner-Douglas mine at Corinth.

Funeral services are being held at Punxsutawaney, Pa., today. The deceased is survived by his widow and two children.

MRS. MARGARET M. WELCH

Mrs. Margaret Missouri Welch, aged 87 years, 3 months and 16 days, died on January 24, 1932, at the home of her son near Cassville, W. Va. She was the widow of the late Albert Welch, who preceded her in death a number of years ago, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church having joined that church in early life.

Mrs. Welch is survived by two children—George Clifford, of Cassville, W. Va., and Mrs. Effie Kimmell, of Oakland; also by 13 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon, January 26, by Rev. J. C. Skipper, at the Thayerville church. Interment was made in the Thayerville cemetery.

SIMON J. LICHTY

Simon J. Lichty, aged 76 years, died Tuesday at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he had been receiving treatment three or four weeks. Funeral services will be conducted at Gortner on Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. Lichty is survived by the following children: Jonas Lichty, of Salisbury, Pa.; Mrs. John Stutzman, Hartzville, O.; Noah Lichty, Daniel Lichty, Mrs. J. D. Swartzentruber, Miss Mary Lichty, Mrs. D. J. Swartzentruber, Ross Lichty and Roy Lichty, all of Gortner.

DR. TRUMAN E. FAIRALL

Dr. Truman E. Fairall, aged 84, native Garrett countian, died at his home in Tecumseh, Nebraska, on Sunday and his remains were interred yesterday. He was the father of Mrs. Harry West, of Oakland, who is the only surviving member of his immediate family.

MRS. VICTOR SERENO

Mrs. Victor Sereno, aged 29, died at her home in Crellin on Saturday night. Death was caused by blood poisoning.

Funeral services were held Tuesday from the Crellin M. E. church, Rev. J. B. Rupert officiating, assisted by Rev. S. A. Jessee. Interment was made in the Ashby cemetery. The deceased is survived by her husband and three small children; also by her parents and several brothers and sisters.

OAKLAND HIGH SCHOOL NEWS AND ATTENDANCE

"The Acorn," School Publication, Ready For Distribution

The Acorn has been printed and is now ready for distribution. This edition contains all the news of Oakland High School. Patrons of the school who are not already subscribers are urged to procure copies of the paper.

The school orchestra is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. E. C. Willis. A program is expected from them soon.

Square Circle Geometry Club members are fixing up their club room. The club is under the direction of Miss Margaret Hamilton and has as its president Lindsey Gonder.

The school has had an extension light put at the corner of the new building. Throwing its light on the steps of the fire escape it may lessen the possibility of accidents due to insufficient lighting on the steps.

Home room programs were held Thursday morning. Each room presented a program.

The Democracy class has secured for its study of history a package library from the Maryland Library Commission.

TRUSTEES' SALE
—OF—
VALUABLE REAL ESTATE
In District No. 10 of Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of the powers vested in us by a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, passed on the 23rd day of January, 1932, in a cause wherein Viola Keenan and others were complainants and Thomas I. Male and others defendants, the same being No. 3030 Equity, we, the undersigned trustees, do hereby give notice that on at the hour of eleven o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Maryland, we will offer for sale at public auction the following real estate situate, lying and being in District No. 10 of Garret County, to-wit:

All that lot or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 5 on a plat of the tract of land conveyed by Henry G. Davis and wife to John W. Garrett by deed dated September 29th, 1881, and recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 5, folio 797, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, which plat will be found recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 20, folio 351, etc., one of said Land Records. Said lot of ground contains FORTY-NINE (49) ACRES AND THIRTEEN (13) PERCHES, more or less, and is the same which was conveyed unto John R. Male, late of Garret County, Maryland, deceased, by deed from Mary E. Garrett et al., trustees, dated May 25, 1893, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 22, folio 74, one of said Land Records of Garrett County, and title to which became vested in the parties in the above mentioned cause under the terms of the last will and testament of said John R. Male.

Save and excepting one-half acre conveyed by said John R. Male and wife to John Moon et al., Trustees for the U. B. Church, for church and burial purposes, by deed dated August 31st, 1896, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 30, folio 485, one of said Land Records of Garrett County. Also excepting one acre at the south side of the property devised to Albert N. Male by the will of said John R. Male, the line of which has been established.

The property is known as the JOHN R. MALE FARM, is located along the county road leading from Loch Lynn to Deer Park and Boiling Spring, is nearly all cleared and in a good state of cultivation, is improved by dwelling, stable and other farm buildings and would make a very excellent farm home.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third cash on day of sale, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser or purchasers, the credit portions to be secured to the satisfaction of the trustees and to bear interest from the day of sale.

ERNEST RAY JONES,
NEIL C. FRALEY,
50-4t Trustees.

Lesson for February 7

THE SLAVERY OF SIN (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—John 8:31-36.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Be Free.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Makes Us Free.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Fight for Freedom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Slavery or Freedom?

We are living in a day of boasted freedom. Revolt from authority is almost universal. Anarchy lifts up its vicious head in the home, society, business, state, nation, and the world. It is this spirit which is revolting against the Eighteenth amendment under the pretext of liberty and freedom. Sin which is fundamentally and essentially lawlessness (I John 3:4) is back of all violations of the Eighteenth amendment. The vital truth of this lesson is the only solution of the prohibition question.

I. Discipleship and Freedom (vv. 31, 32).

Violators of the Eighteenth amendment are not true disciples of Christ. Some church men may be against this law, but not true disciples. In these verses Jesus indicates the following stages of discipleship:

1. Believe on Jesus (v. 31). This means not only assent to Christ's teaching, but acknowledgment of his authority. It means to give Christ the place of lordship over the life. All who allow Christ to rule their lives are in sympathetic obedience to the national constitution.

2. Continue in Christ's words (v. 31). To continue in his Word means:

a. Meditation upon it.
b. Confidence in it.
c. Prayer over it.
d. Obedience to it.

The teachings of Jesus Christ constitute the standard of life for every true disciple. His words are adequate for every decision, habit, or duty. The word of God is the sole and adequate rule of authority to the Christian. Indulgence in intoxicating liquor is prohibited by God's Word, even to the extent that drunkards are debarred from heaven (I Cor. 6:10).

3. Assurance (v. 31). "Ye are my disciples indeed." Continuance in Christ's words demonstrates the fact of discipleship.

4. Knowledge of the truth (v. 32). Those who obey Christ enter upon higher knowledge. They have an experiential knowledge. Demands made by God's Word are not always apprehended at the first, but those who continue in the ways of obedience come to know God and see that what he demanded was right (John 13:7).

5. Freedom (v. 32). The one who renders implicit obedience to Christ enters upon real freedom (Romans 8:2).

II. Righteousness and Freedom (vv. 33, 34).

Those who practice sin are in slavery. The evil doer is under the mastery of the Devil; "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." Doctor Pierson says that the sinner's slavery is threefold:

1. Slavery to guilt.
2. Slavery to penalty or judgment.
3. Slavery to power or habit.

A little thought shows the abjectness of this slavery. Consciousness of guilt is universal. All know that judgment is coming. In the sober moments of life all men acknowledge coming judgment and have "a certain fearful looking for of judgment." All know that they are helpless to break their habits of wrongdoing. Freedom is possible only in conformity with the divine will.

III. Sonship and Freedom (vv. 35, 36).

Regeneration is necessary in order to obtain freedom from sin. Sin's power must be broken through the salvation of the individual. The works of the Devil can only be destroyed through the regeneration of the individual. Happily Christ can destroy the Devil's works through the sonship of those who believe on him (I John 3:7-9). The only way to secure sobriety on the part of man is to get him saved through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The Eighteenth amendment can no more make a nation sober than the ten commandments can make a man tell the truth and desist from murder. The only way to get the benefit of the Eighteenth amendment is to have a revival. It is in securing the sinner's freedom by bringing him as a child into the family of God. So long as people are ignorant of Christ they will remain in bondage to sin. Sin is a hard taskmaster and has as its end death (Romans 6:23).

MT. LAKE PARK

Last Sunday evening about 10:30 o'clock the Oakland Fire Department answered a call to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Frame. The fire was a flue blaze and no damage resulted.

The people of the Park owe a debt of gratitude to the Oakland Fire Department. We must remember that it is composed of business men of our neighboring town, who, when they are at home away from their business, enjoy the comfort of an easy chair, listening to the radio and having a quiet evening. Yet when the alarm of fire sounds their own preferment nor the chilly blasts of winter deter them from their duty. And do they respond quickly? From the time the alarm was phoned in to the central office last Sunday evening until the department was at the Frame residence with a line of hose laid, was a little over seven minutes. And that is going some. And it is a volunteer organization, which goes to show that it is not money alone that buys loyalty to a community. It is the fine spirit back of the service.

Old Man Winter showed some little pep the last few days. And while the old gray mare ain't what she used to be, we suspect he appeared just to remind us that one swallow does not make a summer, nor does warm days in January always mean that spring is here. Well, there is consolation in the knowledge that Mr. G. Hog failed to get in his dirty work at the crossroads last Tuesday. It may be that the result of the depression has so reduced his weight that he thought it no use to try. But cheer up! This is February, not April, and there is yet plenty of time for the old man to strut his stuff. Caution: Don't lay off the red flannels.

Honor Roll

The following are the names of pupils of the Loch Lynn school who made perfect attendance records during the month of January, 1932:

Water Pressure Tested

On Monday the Oakland Fire Department tested the water pressure at the fire plug situated near Harvey and Ream's store, in Loch Lynn. The test lasted for a period of twenty minutes and it is reported that the pressure was undiminshed at the end of the test. We are informed that the Mayor and Council of that village are contemplating some additional fire protection this year.

It occurs to us, as has been suggested by a number of citizens, that owing to the tremendous fall of leaves in the late summer and fall, many of which are permitted to lay until the following spring, the Park is much more in need of adequate fire protection than is Loch Lynn. Many more fires occur here than across the railroad, and in nearly every instance, unless the Oakland department is notified as soon as the fire starts, the property is an entire loss—and seldom rebuilt.

It is hoped that the Mayor and Council of the Park can see their way clear to provide several fire plugs located at stragetic points during the present year. It is reported on good authority that had the department been provided with only 100 extra barrels of water at the time of the destruction of the Gnegy property last year, it could have been saved. Aside from the loss of the individual property owner, every home destroyed reduces the capital assets of the Park to the extent of its value and reduces tax income just that much.

Some Old Letters

We were permitted to examine two old letters at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Enlow recently. They are curious relics of bygone days. One was mailed in Iowa, dated March 2, 1847, and addressed to Mr. William White (a grandfather of Mrs. Enlow) at Yough Glades, Allegheny county. As was the custom at that time, the letter was not enclosed in an envelope, the address being on the reverse side of the written page. The postage was ten cents. The other letter was mailed from a town in Pennsylvania in 1846. It was addressed to Mrs. Catherine White, wife of William, at Green Glades, Md. It likewise was not enclosed in an envelope and the postage was five cents.

It is thought that Green Glades was a postoffice near Deer Park and that Yough Glades was possibly Oakland. Does any reader know?

Minor Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fike were called to Terra Alta Monday by the death of the mother of Mrs. Fike, who had been an invalid for several years.

Mrs. Richard Cale, of Terra Alta, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford, here for several days, returned to her home on Tuesday.

Mr. L. A. Frame, of Columbus, O., spent Sunday night with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Frame, enroute to Morgantown, to attend the Farm and Home Week activities.

Mrs. Allie Haymond is spending a few days in Fairmont with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward McFarland, Cumberland, spent the week-end with Mrs. McFarland's mother, Mrs. Maude E. Brenneman, in the Park.

ACCIDENT

Wedding

Miss Beulah Keller, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Keller, and Mitchell Rush, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rush, were married at the English Lutheran parsonage Friday evening, January 29, by Rev. A. B. Harper. The bride has been employed for the past year in Wadsworth, Ohio. The groom is assisting his father on the farm. The newly weds will move into an apartment in the home of Mrs. Anna Neill in the near future.

Natal Note

Mr. and Mrs. George Lohr announce the birth of a daughter, Nina Virginia, Friday, January 29, at their home near Accident.

Citizens' Meeting

There will be a meeting of the citizens of the town of Accident on Saturday, February 20, at 8:00 p. m., in the school building, for the purpose of nominating a ticket for two councilmen to be elected at the municipal election, Tuesday, March 1. Messrs. Newton Gies and Robert Alexander are the councilmen whose terms expire.

School Notes

Mid-year exams are a thing of the past. The Vo.-Ag. department has not moved into the building which has been provided, but hope to move Wednesday. The inside painting has been finished and the outside will be done later.

Class Meeting

The Victor's class of St. Paul's Sunday school and its teacher were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Englehart last Wednesday night. Contests were the diversion of the evening and a number of the boys were successful in winning prizes. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Englehart. There were thirteen members and guests present.

Personal Mention

Messrs. H. J. Speicher and C. A. Guthrie motored to Marietta, Ohio, last week to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Miller, George and Carl Miller spent Friday of last week in Cumberland.

Mr. D. A. King and daughter Ola motored to Tunnelton, W. Va., last Sunday. They were accompanied home Sunday evening by Mrs. D. A. King, who had been visiting Tunnelton relatives for several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Kamp visited relatives at Keyser's Ridge one day recently.

Mrs. Fannie Weitzel, of Avilton, is spending several weeks visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Weitzel.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Welch and friends, Gortner, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander.

Miss Amelia Miller spent several days last week as the guest of Misses Esther and Frieda Harmon in the Cove.

Messrs. Wm. Weyrich, Roy Churchman and Jed Keat, all of Bellaire, O., were week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Speicher.

Ross and Lena Speicher motored to Blue Ridge college over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hetrick and son Park spent two days last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hetrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Timmons and daughter, Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. L. Gingerich, of Frostburg, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Humberson.

Mr. and Mrs. James Glotfelty and members of their family and Mrs. A. Schlossnagle, of Oakland, visited Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Smail one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Detrick and children motored to Leisenring where they will spend a week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Georg and Mrs. Wm. Miller visited Mrs. Fred Bowser last Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Bowser were Sunday guests at the home of George Miller.

Mrs. Ed Brougher, who had been caring for Mrs. C. C. Goehringer, is spending this week at her home in Johnstown.

Mr. J. L. Englehart is spending several days this week in Baltimore on business.

Mr. Conrad Smail received notice of the sudden death of a relative, John Lewis, at Turtle Creek, Pa.

FRIENDSVILLE

Peter Guard and a friend, from Pittsburgh, Pa., were visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Statler over the week-end.

Mr. H. L. Wolf, one of the leading merchants and a highly respected resident of Friendsville, suffered a severe stroke of paralysis one day last week. He is a little improved at this time, but still confined to his bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Welch, formerly of this place, spent the week-end here with Mr. Welch's mother, Mrs. Buenvista Welch.

The thermometer registered ten above zero here on Monday morning, the coldest day of the season, but there was no snow.

A little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Savage is suffering with an attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. Tarleton Humberson, of near this place, while engaged in cutting wood last Saturday, had the misfortune of having his hand badly mangled by the saw. It was found necessary to take him to Cumberland and at the Memorial Hospital in that city the third and fourth fingers and a part of his right hand were amputated.

The examinations in the schools are now over and everyone is back at regular work. Friendsville High stood third best in the county for percentage of failures, there being three other high schools having a higher percentage of failures and two with a lower percentage.

Mr. Joe Schroyer is confined to his bed with inflammatory rheumatism. He is somewhat improved at this time.

J. W. Holman was in Oakland on Tuesday evening where he attended a session of his fraternity.

A number of petty thieving jobs have taken place in and around this place in the past two weeks. Better lock your hen house.

Milk is now selling at eight cents a quart delivered, and eggs at thirteen cents per dozen, with butter at twenty cents a pound.

When financial conditions similar to the one of today prevailed a little over a quarter of a century ago, they were known as a panic, but now we have a more refined word; we call it depression.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guthrie and son Wayne spent Sunday with relatives and friends in Somerset, Pa.

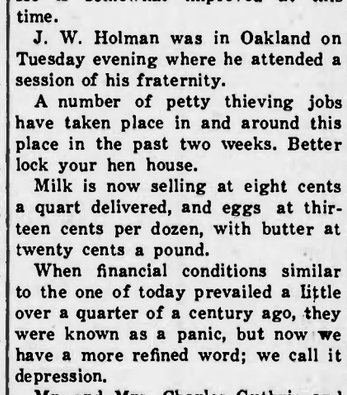
Mr. Sylvanus Fike is reported to be in a very critical condition as the result of illness.

Mr. Harry Bole, of Pittsburgh, was transacting business in Friendsville last week.

Mrs. Orval Rush, who has been a patient at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, has returned to her home in Friendsville.

The following named ladies attended a meeting of the nursing class in the high school building here on January 26: Mrs. A. F. Neil and sister, Mrs. F. C. McCullough, Mrs. J. W. Holman, Mrs. J. E. Statler, Mrs. Alex. Grove. The next meeting will be held on February 9th in the high school building.

SCOOP'S COLUMN



By Scoop Himself

He Keeps a Diary, the Great Big Sissy!

FRIDAY

Up at last possible minute and got to office only 15 minutes late. Opened fan mail and read papers; received 16 telephone calls and had 7 interviews asking about the number of fish in Deep Creek Lake as related in last week's issue. Told them all that was Bill Glotfelty's opinion of how many there were, judging from his luck in catching them. Went to Scout meeting and concluded that youth of today knows as much about everythhing as former generation had hard job in learning in thirty years; thence to high school basketball game to see Cumberland get trimmed and gripe about it as usual.

SATURDAY

Up as usual and on time as usual. If it wasn't for working after hours lots of times I'd think I was getting by with something. Doc Yak Yutzy called and we put him to work. Can't run around much on Saturday as I must stick close to office and pressroom and supervise Arcbibaldson's work.

SUNDAY

Up, but not quite as usual. Buckwheats slide down and I slide into church pew, not late—much. Had Sunday dinner with boss editor and afterwards another of his cigars. Both up to standard. Ran around looking for fires in afternoon and then a trip in Bob Hoffman's new car to see if it suited me. It did and he has decided to keep it.

MONDAY

Up and wondering if I had enough alcohol in radiator of car. Received letter urging me to take up correspondence course in advertising—$1 down and only five a month for 96 months, and why was I delaying to grasp this opportunity to prosperity and success? Got thawed out and decided to get some news. Interviews with John Carter, Miss Burtis, F. E. Rathbun, John Fitzwater and E. Z. Tower failed to produce any results except list of mariage licenses. Heard new joke as spun by A. G. Ross and told it to Doc Yak Yutzy, who said he had already heard it (he always has). Looked in at "Snowbird" Jim Lee—very busy reading detective stories in his father's office. Helen Hinebaugh in Mr. Friend's office just as busy.

TUESDAY

Looks like winter is over if you want to believe the groundhog. Heard story of local barefoot boy, minus his cheeks of tan, who trod Oakland streets last Friday night in nothing but an overcoat. Asked H. C. Sincell, Bet Dawson, Neil Fraley, Slim Shaw and a lot of others what they really knew about the Japanese-Chinese situation, and after going into a great deal of detail, the result was———. Tried to find out who the Sheriff locked up during the past few days, but he was out. Seems like he is always on the go and he gets his man. Found out from those who advertise that business is fairly good. Also heard loud hollerings from those who don't advertise in The Republican that business is rotten. Heard someone insisting that another fellow have a drink. It's getting so a person can't refuse politely any more. They have to have it hollered at them with emphasis before they can understand.

WEDNESDAY

Watched for opportunity to see State's Attorney Dawson, who was in conference with somebody. Mayor Stemple relates accomplishments of town council for 1931, and adds a few of his wisecracks. Everything will be published but the wisecracks, because this is a decent paper. Floyd Stahl ran the clippers over my head and called it a haircut, and then Hervey Bittner tried to inveigle me into that new electric massage machine they've got over there. Said it had worked wonders on Andrew Gonder's centralized excess.

THURSDAY

Up early and down to the office in time to listen to the usual complaint that I had spelled a name incorrectly and blamed it on the linotype machine and proofreader, as usual. Received pay check and collected my I.O.U.'s which were outstanding. Managed to save enough money to keep up my Christmas savings. Made the last minute rounds before press hour so I wouldn't get scooped on anything, as something always happens just before the zero hour.

And there's another issue gone, but not forgotten.

Japan warns foreign governments to make Chinese stop their warlike actions, or she will call out her army. This is asked when Japan is doing the invading. Nice people! if you ask me, which you probably won't.

Somebody sent in another anonymous communication to Scoop pointing out the fish error in The Republican and also one in the Democrat. On the one about stocking Deep Creek Lake with pike he wants to know wherether "00,000 is a good many or not so many." Since Bill Glotfelty answered this query another answer isn't necessary, but the boss editor said the number would be the same at fishing time if they stocked the lake with six million.

On the second enclosure were the words, "Assistant Grant Lecturer," instead of "Assistant Grand Lecturer," appearing in the Democrat headlines, and the person asks if this by chance is Billy Grant.

Inasmuch as the writer of the communication spelled Democrat incorrectly he won't have much to crow about, since his thought was handled only once, whereas the words appearing in the paper are handled at least four times and by four different persons.

And now, I invite you to send in more letters to Scoop, and I dare you to sign your name.

Teachers of First Grade Pupils to Meet Friday Afternoon

A meeting of the teachers of the first grade pupils in two-room teacher and graded public schools of Garrett county will be held at the Oakland Grammar School building on Friday afternoon, February 5, F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent, has announced in a circular letter recently sent to teachers intcrested in this conference.

The meeting will be devoted to improving the quality of instruction in the first grades of the two-teacher and graded schools in the county and will be attended by the three supervisors, Misses Flossie Skidmore, Kate Bannatyne and Gladys Hamill.

Such questions as stimulating reading readiness, adjusting educational seatwork and technique of teacher to levels of ability found in the same group, developing desirable reading habits and skills, will be brought before the meeting.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends and neighbors wh owere so kind to us during our recent bereavement in the death of our dear husband and father, Olin Wilhelm. We also wish to thank those who sent floral offerings and those who proffered their cars for funeral purposes; the ministers, the Rev. Bert Constance and Rev. A. C. Bell for their services and comforting words.

HIS FAMILY.

KLINGENSMITH IS BROUGHT TO OAKLAND BY SHERIFF

Upholsterer, After Serving Jail Sentence In Pennsylvania Will be Tried here on Theft Charge

Earl Klingensmith, who posed as an upholsterer here last summer and when leaving between two days hauled a truckload of furniture entrusted to him for repair to New Kensington, Pa., where a portion of it was recovered by the owners, the arrest of Klingensmith following on a charge hanging over him in Pennsylvania, where he served time during the past winter, was brought to the Garrett County Jail in Oakland Tuesday night by Sheriff Haenftling. He will remain in jail until the March term of court on an indictment found by the September grand jury charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses and larceny of goods.

Klingensmith has been in the Cambria County Jail at Ebensburg, Pa., since the latter part of July and his term of imprisonment for a breach of the Pennsylvania law has just expired. He refused to waive extradition and it was necessary to take formal steps to have him brought back to Maryland.

Klingensmith advertised last summer that he upholstered furniture and was an adept at rebuilding old pieces and had gathered a truckload of material from householders in this community before disappearing. The furniture, or a part of it, was found by Sheriff Haenftling and Constable Cecil Ramsey when they went in search of Klingcnsmith at a point in Pennsylvania about 150 miles north of Oakland, but the officers were then unable to bring the man back to this State because of the fact that he was wanted in Pennsylvania for law breaking.

OAKLAND HI SCHOOL WINS FROM KITZMILLER TEAMS

Little Opposition Is Afforded Local Basketeers Monday Evening

Oakland High school basketball teams easily defeated Kitzmiller on Monday night at the Oakland High auditorium, the boys winning 30 to 10, while the girls showered baskets to win 34 to 5.

Rice, Oakland's center, had a big night and rang up nine field goals and 2 out of 4 fouls to score 20 points for his team, while Peddicord with three field goals, and Maroney with two field goals and one foul, contributed the remainder of the scoring. Dawson and Butler were the mainstays on the defense.

During the fourth quarter Charles Davis, Schell Hoye, Carl Ray, Turney and Spoerlein saw service on the Oakland team.

For Kitzmiller Jones with two field goals led the scoring. Barrick, Walatkus and Bender made one each, with Barrick getting one foul. Woodell shot most of the points for the Oakland girls.

Another girls' team from O. H. S., playing at Aurora on Monday evening, was defeated 19 to 17 in an overtime period.

Bruce High school of Westernport had to extend itself to defeat Oakland High school boys' team last Friday night 24 to 22. Rice, with nine field goals, led the attack on the basket for Oakland, while Whitworth made five goals for Bruce high. Maroney made one field goal and one foul, and Butler made a foul goal to complete Oakland's scoring.

Legion to Assist in Drive for More Jobs

The campaign of the American Legion, the American Legion Auxiliary, the American Federation of Labor and the Association of National Advertisers to bring about a recovery of business through employment of 1,000,000 workers now out of jobs will open formally on February 15, A. G. Hesen, post commander of Proctor Kildow Post No. 71, announced.

These organizations bring into the campaign more than 5,000,000 Americans who are organized and who are accustomed to working as organizations. Through local committees American communities will be combed to discover work. There is one object, to get more jobs for the unemployed.

The local post will assist in the movement in every way possible, according to Mr. Hesen. President Hoover is back of the drive in this war against depression.

To Show George Washington Film at Maryland Theatre

"George Washington, His Life and Times," a four-reel film made at the request of the Federal Commission for the Bicentennial Celebration of the birth of George Washington, will be shown at the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Thursday, February 25, morning, afternoon and evening.

There will also be a two-reel eomedy and a one-reel cartoon in connection with the feature. The admission will be 15, 20 and 35 cents. At the evening show the George Washington films will be projected in addition to the usual program of pictures.

MARRIED

Mullinix—Leighton—Miss Margaret Leighton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Leighton, of Loch Lynn, and W. Day Mullinix, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Mullinix, Damascus, Md., were united in marriage at the home of the bride, Loch Lynn, Friday evening, February 5, at six o'clock. The Rev. I. S. Middaugh, former pastor of the Methodist church at Mountain Lake Park, performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and she was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Leighton, student at Bowling Green University, Bowling Green, Ky. The best man was Mr. B. O. Aiken, principal of Accident High School.

The bride was attired in a beige point lace gown and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a light blue gown trimmed in white lace with a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Harold Miller, Grantsville, played Lohengrin's Wedding March and Miss Grace Falkenstein, of Oakland, cousin of the bride, sang "O, Promise Me."

The house was attractively decorated with ferns and cut flowers by the Weber and Sons company, Oakland.

Mrs. Mullinix graduated from the University of Maryland in Home Economies with the class of 1930 and has been teaching home economics in the Grantsville High School the past two years.

Mr. Mullinix is a graduate of Washinton-Lee University, Virginia, class of 1926, and has been principal of Grantsville High School three years.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and a buffet supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullinix left for a brief trip to points in the east. The bride's going away suit was of brown silk with accessories to match. Upon their return they will rcsume their positions at the school until June. They will reside at the National hotel, Grantsville. At the close of the school Mr. and Mrs. Mullinix will go to Chicago where the former will complete his course at the University of Chicago for his doctor's dcgree.

Those present at the ceremony were Mrs. Edward Hislop and Miss Kathryn Hislop, Hyattsville, Md.; Mrs. Raymond Carrington, Washington, D. C.; Miss Grace Maxwell, Miss Isabel Bewich, Miss Barbara Schilling, Miss Rose Alice Laughlin, Mrs. E. D. Burner, Miss Louise Lee, Mr. Carl Everstine, Cumberland; Edward Wheeler, New York City; B. O. Aiken, Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. L. W. Stephenson and Miss Blanche Cale, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Miss Helen Leighton, Bowling Green, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Karl Kahl, Mrs. E. H. Hinebaugh, Miss Grace Falkenstein, Miss Eva Falkenstein, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, Oakland; Mrs. Harold Miller, Grantsville; Rev. and Mrs. Middaugh, Miss Nell Lee, Miss Mary O'Donnell, Miss Kate O'Donnell, Miss Vivian Clary, Miss Ada Leighton, Mrs. Rhoda David, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Lelghton and Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Leighton, Mountain Lake Park.

Meeting of Parent-Teacher Association Held Thursday Night

Dr. George E. Clarke, health officer, and Miss Flossie Skidmore, grade supervisor, were the speakers at the regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher association held last Thursday evening in the Oakland Grammar school.

Dr. Clarke spoke on the importance of adherence to quarantine rules and expressed appreciation for help given along this line, stating that only one family had been careless.

Miss Skidmore gave points on how to better the association and then explained the marking system used on the children's report cards. A further discussion of the last subject will be carried on at the meeting on March 31.

1075 PENNIES USED TO PAY FINE BEFORE JUSTICE

"Ten dollars and costs," declared Justice A. S. Teats Tuesday afternoon when Scott Pennybacker, Franklin, West Va., was tried before him for driving an automobile without proper license.

And from beneath his arm came a large tin box from which 1075 pennies were extracted in payment of the fine. They were laboriously counted by Mr. Pennybacker and Officer Thomas E. Currie, who made the arrest, and were then taken to the Garrett National Bank to be recounted.

The pennies weighed five pounds and four ounces. Mr. Pennybacker is collector for some slot machines, it is said, and he had a reserve supply of copper coins in another tin box under his arm. His name had nothing to do with his position, he stated.

Harvey Squires, of Kingwood, W. Va., was fined $1 and costs for not having any license in his possession on Tuesday before Justice Teats.

SCOUTS TO CLOSE WEEK'S CELEBRATION WITH HIKE

Public Meeting Scheduled for Thursday Night Is Postponed

The twenty-second anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America will be concluded this week-end by the Oakland Troop with the regular meeting on Friday evening and an overnight hike on Saturday.

The public meeting which was to have been held in the K. of P. hall on Thursday evening has been postponed.

Anniversary week began on Sunday, February 7, when every scout was expected to be in church. Approximately 25 members of the troop attended St. Matthew's Episcopal church in a body where Rev. D. C. Trimble delivered the sermon.

Scouts will mobilize on Saturday morning for a community good turn, which will be followed by an overnight hike at the permanent scout camp on Deep Creek Lake. Plans are being made for a compfire program and a weiner roast on Saturday evening.

At the regular meeting on Friday evening the scouts will rededicate themselves to the scout oath and laws, as will be done by each troop throughout the United States at some time during the anniversary week.

West Penn Reduces Number of Accidents in 1931

Employes of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company brought about a reduction of approximately 60 percent in accidents during 1931, figures just released by the safety department show. All divisions of the company took part in a contest in which the gas department, located principally in Fairmont and Morgantown, took first prize. Electrical employes took 2nd, with railways 3rd.

The contest began January 1, 1931, and monthly statements showed progress of the movement against accidents. When final results were tabulated recently the total of all accidents had been reduced from 348 in 1930 to 188 in 1931. While elimination of all accidents was the goal of the company, special emphasis was placed on the elimination of those accidents which cause employes to lose time from work. These were reduced to 65 in 1931 from 130 in 1930. The greatest reduction was shown in days lost from work as the result of accidents. During 1930, employes of the Monogahela System lost 25,136 days because of accidents and this figure was reduced to 1,825 days in 1931. In the former year allowances in days were made for fatalitles and total or partial disabilities. The company suffered no fatal accidents in 1931.

The Republican Gets Sample of Cherry Vanilla Ice Cream

The Republican was in receipt of another treat from the Imperial Ice Cream Company on Tuesday afternoon, the sample belng its newest special, cherry vanilla.

This special is dedicated to the two great presidents whose birthdays are celebrated this month, and particularly the two hundredth anniversary of the birthday of George Washington.

Ranking along with black walnut in popularity among the office staff, the cherry vanilla was much enjoyed by those who were fortunate enough to be present at the time of its arrival.

Deputy Collector To Assist in Filing Income Tax Returns

For the purpose of assisting taxpayers in filing lncome tax returns for thc calendar ycar of 1931, a dcputy collector of internal revenue will be in Oakland on February 23 and 24, according to Galen L. Tait, collector.

The collector will also be in Frostburg February 25 and 26; Luke on February 27; Westernport on February 29; Barton on March 1 and in Lonaconing on March 2.

OAKLAND A. A. DEFEATS CUMBERLAND FIVE 25-12

Company G No Match For Local Quint Which Goes on Rampage

Oakland Independents won from Cumberland Company G quint at the Oakland High School auditorium on Monday evening 25 to 12, to get revenge for their 28 to 20 defeat at Cumberland a week ago.

Oakland led at half time 8 to 6 and gradually increased its lead throughout the remainder of the contest, the third quarter ending 18 to 11.

McComas led the Oakland scoring with five field goals and two fouls and was closely followed by Pollock who sank four double deckers. Bruce, with two field goals, led the Cumberland scoring.

Oakland will meet the Lonaconing Good Will five at O. H. S. auditorium next Tuesday evening.

Lineup and summary:

"BIG PARADE" IN SOUND PROVES HIT, SAYS CRITIC

Will Be Presented Here For Legion Benefit February 17-18

A revival of some of the really great silent motion pictures has become a reality. There is no doubt that the tremendous hits five, six and seven years ago will be seen on the screen again this year—with sound effects added to them, says one of the film critics writing under a Hollywood dateline of February 4.

To test the plausibility of such a movement Mctro-Goldwyn-Mayer added sound to the "Big Parade," one of the greatest films of all time. The picture then was taken to San Jose, 400 miles from Hollywood for a trial run so that studio executives could get a real public reaction to their experiment. And they were satisfied that the public wants good pictures, whether they were made last month or six years ago.

"The Big Parade" was a sensation when it was released in 1925. And, if the audience reaction in San Jose can be taken as an indication, it will be an equally big sensation this year. The film is unchanged except for the addition of sound effects and a synchronized musical score. The lack of dialogue is scarcely noticeable after the first reel.

There seems little necessity for going into the story of this first big war film other than to say that the battle scenes have been made even more realistic by the addition of sound—the booming of large calibre guns, the crackle of machine guns, the whir of airplane motors and the songs of the men as they march into battle.

John Gilbert's first rise to fame came as a result of "The Big Parade" and it is quite possible that the revival of the film will restore him to the elevated position he once enjoyed.

"The Big Parade" will be presented at the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Wednesday and Thursday, February 17 and 18. It is sponsored by the local post of the American Legion. The proceeds will be devoted to the needs of the post. Tickets may be had from members of the Post.

Mr. Walter Iman and family moved from Oakland to Vindex, Garrett county, Thursday, at which point Mr. Iman is engaged as superintendent of the Davis Coal and Coke Company. Oakland people will regret to learn this bit of news.

Man Is Fined For Peddling Rugs Without License

Ritz Gosefh and George Harrison, who claimed to be from Philadelphia, were arrested Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff Samuel Cole on charges of violating the State and town laws relative to peddling without having first applied for and secured a license so to do. The two men were alleged to have attempted to sell rugs, blankets, etc., to householders and along the streets of Oakland.

Following their arrest they were given a hearing before Justice W. A. Gonder. The charges against Harrison were dismissed but Gosefh was found guilty and was fined $30 and costs, amounting to $45.

Claiming he had only $35 Justice Gonder was about to pass a jail sentence upon him when he suddenly remembered a ten dollar bill in his back pocket.

The fine imposed was the minimum under the State law and the town ordinance.

PYTHIANS TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY ON FEB. 19

25-Year Medals To Be Presented to 21 Veterans of Lodge

Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, will celebrate its anniversary on Friday night, February 19, at Castle Hall, and a large attendance of the membership is anticipated, according to a member of the committee having the matter in charge.

This night is also set aside for the ladies, and it is the wish of those in charge that they turn out in goodly numbers. A program is being prepared for this occasion which will consist of instrumental numbers, singing, talks and refreshments.

In addition, the Grand Lodge of Maryland will be represented by Col. Nelson W. Russler, of Cumberland, supreme representative. Presentation of 25-year medals will be made to twenty-one members of Garrett Lodge who have been faithful through the past quarter century.

For the regular meeting on Friday evening the attendance committee will have a special number to offer—a valentine social in addition to the other features.

Home Economics Classes Serve Hot Lunches at High School

As a project for the freshman girls in the home economics department of Oakland High School, hot lunches are now being served to students and faculty members under the supervision of Miss Lucy Trickett, home economics instructor.

The project was instituted on Monday and thus far during the week there have been approximately forty each day to be served. Vegetable soup is five cents, hot beef sandwiches are five cents, rolls and butter are five cents and cocoa is three cents.

The unique feature of the innovation is that students may pay for their lunches in vegetables, fruit, etc., and therefore do not need cash. In this way those who have to come a long distance to school and who have to spend their lunch period in the building are enabled to secure hot food, well prepared and nicely served.

Garrett County Graded Schools Have Highest percentage of Attendance in Maryland

For the third consecutive month, Garrett county graded schools have led all other counties in percentage of attendance. During the month of December the average was 94 percent, while the county's elementary schools also led the entire State with 93.7 per cent. The elementary schools were second in November.

One teacher schools were second in the State for December with 93.7, and two-tcacher schools were eighth with 92.4. High schools were low, Garrett county standing fourteenth with 92.4.

This report was just received from the State Department of Education by County Superintendent Rathbun.

SUNDAY PROGRAMS BEING ARRANGED FOR MT. LAKE

Each County of Tableland To Be Responsible For One Sabbath Afternoon During Summer

MISS HUFF WILL DIRECT

Plans for a program of religious music and community singing each Sunday afternoon of the summer season are being developed by the Mountain Lake Institute, according to Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director.

Miss Sara B. Huff, music leader, was in Oakland a short time Tuesday afternoon and laid the foundation for what is hoped will be one of the most popular and helpful portion of the summer program.

Each Sunday afternoon a period will be given to the singing of hymns and songs of various periods in the history of church music. These services are to be widely advertised in West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania and will be held in the amphitheatre at the Park. Following the singing it is planned to have a speaker of national renown for a vesper address.

Each county in the Tableland area will be responsible for an afternoon's program, Garrett county being the host on the opening day. In later programs, Tucker, Preston, Grant, Mineral and Somerset counties will be responsible. One outstanding weekend will be known as Allegheny Tableland Day with Saturday spent at Deep Creek Lake, followed by the religious program on Sunday in the amphitheatre.

Features of the Sunday afternoon programs will be the singing of the great Scotch songs, songs of the Welsh Singing Society, hymns of the present church bodies, Moody and Sankey gospel hymns, songs of the Catholic ehureh, exeerps from the operas, songs of the Slovaks, Colonial days, songs of rural schools and rural churches, and will also include a band concert day, a pageant of the great Indian legend and a day of minstrelsy.

Miss Huff will return within a few days to meet with committees and work out dates for this program, Mr. Middaugh stated.

All communities desirous of developing community singing should get in touch with the Mountain Lake Institute and arrange for a date when Miss Huff can meet them. Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn have already organized a community singing committee and have held one meeting.

School of Religious Education

A summer school of religious education may also materialize from present plans of the Institute, it was stated. The program anticipates a Standard Teachers' training course, a post-graduate course for those who have taken considerable work previously and a coaching conference for ministers and others who desire to become accredited teachers. All denominations will be touched in this area.

First of Lenten Services Held Last Night

Last night at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church in Oakland the first of a series of Lenten services was held at which Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor of the host church presided. Rev. W. B. Brock read the scripture lesson and offered prayer; the choir of the church rendered a special number. Rev. C. A. Shilke was the evening speaker and his sermon was from the selected theme to be followed throughout Lent and Holy Week: "The Personalities about the Cross—Herod, the Tetrareh." The offerings at the services will be used for the promotion of the Daily Vacation Bible school. The service next Wednesday will be held in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, when Rev. D. C. Trimble will be the speaker.

Today May Set New High Mark For February Temperature

With the thermometer standing at 67 degrees at eleven o'clock this morning and the sun shining brightly, there are prospects of making a record high mark for the month of February before the day is over, according to those in charge of the Government station at Weber's.

Yesterday the thermometer reached a maximum of 63 degrees. February thus far has been considerably warmer than usual, as has the entire winter period.

Lesson for February 14

JESUS AND THE MAN BORN BLIND

LESSON TEXT—John 9:1-41.

GOLDEN TEXT—Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Blind Man See.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Sight to a Blind Beggar.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Did for a Blind Man.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Light of the World.

I. Working the Works of God While It Is Day (vv. 1-5).

1. The disciples' problem (vv. 1, 2). In their minds all affliction, negative and positive, was God's retribution for sin. Therefore, they argued that this man's blindness proved his sin. They recognized also that the effect of sin is sometimes hereditary. The common philosophy of men about us today is that sickness, disease, and all sorts of calamities, is God's judgment for sin.

2. The Lord's answer (vv. 3-5). Jesus affirmed that in this case there was neither sin on the man's part nor that of his parents, but that it was an occasion for the display of the works of God and that he had come to execute this task while it was day because the night would come when no man could work. Since Christ is the light of the world, the task which challenged his attention was the opening of this man's eyes. The purpose of Jesus in working miracles was not a mere exhibition of miraculous power, but "to illustrate in the physical sphere his power in the spiritual sphere." It was illustrative of man's utter helplessness in his own salvation. The natural man is blind and dead (II Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:1). God, by his Spirit, must quicken the soul dead in trespasses and sin before he can see to take hold on Christ, the remedy for sin.

II. The Man's Eyes Opened (vv. 6, 7).

1. The means used (v. 6.) Jesus spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle and anointed his eyes. Observe that the means used in this miracle were a little less than foolish in themselves. The object must have been to show the man the utter inadequacy of the means to the accomplishment of the end, that he might be convinced that the power was of God.

2. His obedience (v. 7.) He immediately obeyed. He did not stop to question the reasonableness of the command. Obedience only to that which seems reasonable is not obedience at all. He did not inquire as to what would be the result.

III. The Man's Testimony (vv. 8-36).

In his testimony we have a fine example of the development of faith.

1. He testified to his personal identity (v. 9). This was very easy. His self-consciousness enabled him to know that he was the same man who was born blind.

2. He testified as to how it was done (vv. 11-15). So definite was his experience that he was able to tell just how it was done.

3. He testified that the one who opened his eyes was a prophet (v. 17).

4. He testified that this healer no doubt was sent of God (vv. 30-33).

5. He worshiped him as the Son of God (v. 38).

IV. The Results of His Confession.

1. As to the people, they were divided in their sentiment (v. 16). Some believed Jesus was from God because of his works. Others believed that he was a sinner because he did his work on the Sabbath day.

2. As to the man, they cast him out (v. 34). Faithful testimony will often result in ostracism from religious people, but there must be faithfulness.

3. As to Jesus, he found the man (v. 35). Being cast out by men, he found himself in the arms of Jesus. He was led on to a deeper faith. He first saw Christ as a miracle worker, then as a prophet, and finally as the Son of God.

This whole lesson may be viewed from three angles:

1. As an acted parable of a life that issues from faith in Christ. It is an illustration of the spiritual sphere in terms of the physical.

2. The testimony of the deity of our Lord. This testimony is fourfold:

a. The miracle itself an unheard-of work, that a man born blind should receive his sight.

b. The unwilling admission of the enemies themselves who made a public and official investigation.

c. The testimony of the man himself

d. That of his parents.

3. An illuminating example of the development of faith.

SAGE REMARKS

Talk without action saps the will.

New Society Formed

At a delightful banquet served in the Italian room of the Oakland Hotel yesterday evening, one of the most unique organizations of the town came into being, that of a Bachelors' Defense Club, or in other words a sanctum sanctorum for unmarried males who look upon leap year as one beset with grave danger.

The meeting for the formation of this latest club was called by Bill Browning, who was unanimously elected president of the association after the members had eaten of food cooked by Jim Kerins, Jim Painter and Judson Loar. Other officers included: Assistant Chief Ferret, Willie O. Davis; Pen Wielder, Wellington (Doc Yak) Yutzy; Keeper of the Mazuma and Russian Rubles, Max Jarboe.

Other members of the club include Harry L. Miller, Ern Gortner, Harry Loar, Neil Liller, Percy Frantz, Bob Wolfe, John Weber, Jim Carney, Earl (Spide) Thayer, Herman Englehart, Bill Shaffer and Fred. P. Miller, of Accident.

The keynote speech made at the banquet by Bill Browning was as follows:

"Gentlemen, we are gathered here to organize and band ourselves into a firm, unrelenting, resisting bunch of efflorescent males. It is our duty as good American citizens to protect and uphold the sterling qualities of manhood and protect it against the ever-increasing inroads made upon it by these insidious and plotting females.

"If we had been properly organized four years ago both Jim Towler and Ed. Offutt might today be among the charter members of this noble organization.

"I, myself, can speak of personal experiences against the wiles and caprices of certain women, of a continual fight to enslave me. Gentlemen, it has been a hard battle; I have fought and struggled and many times have almost crossed that darkened door from which no man returns.

"Look at these matrimonial friends of ours; they are old men at thirty; their shoulders droop from the everlasting drudge of culinary work.

"See the light with me! Make yourselves strong and fight with me. Carry our banner, "Bachelorates Semper Liheri, (Bachelors always free).

"Personally I cannot afford it. It takes all my time to hunt and fish. Our good friend and brother, John Weber, has agreed to look over every plotting female and due to his long experience in evading the net, will probably diagnose their intentions toward us.

"And now let us offer a silent prayer for our beloved brethren who have passed on that long and weary journey."

During the meeting a petiton for membership was handed to President Browning. The paper was signed by George Littman, Robert Hoffman, Olin Hardesty, Russell Brown, Ossie Hinebaugh, Butsy Hart, Terrence Tamburini and Bill Eggers, and the contents stated that although the petitioners weren't sure whether or not they were considered bachelors, they felt the need of the protection offered by the Bachelors' Defense Club and therefore sought admission.

A motion to accept the petitioners was tabled until the next meeting.

Here's What You're Missing

Here's a sample of what the girls are missing. The names were picked at random, and I am sure all the others have similar qualifications or others just as good:

BILL BROWNING—Age unknown; tall; intelligent face; one bald spot on head; is kind to animals and won't be home much. Has no touring car but a gasoline truck which gives him no excuse for parking due to a shortage of fuel. And there's more to his credit, too, but we can't tell you everything.

HARRY MILLER—Has a meat and grocery market, a Willys-Knight car, diamonds, and everything. Just think, girls, your pantry stocked with groceries free of charge. It's the chance of a lifetime and leap year will soon depart.

JIM KERINS—He's everything a mother-in-law could hope for. He's Irish and has a sense of humor and an exceedingly sunny disposition, and that with some other things is about all. But what the heck! We can't have everything.

JOHN WEBER—He has a Ford. It's been around a few telephone poles but is still o. k. He's a good sport, plays bridge and is able to supply the finest flowers and all you may need for your birthdays, Easter and also funeral and bridge parties. This chance should not be overlooked.

MAX JARBOE—He's a real find—the sweetest blue eyes (or are they brown?). Anyway he has two of them. He ordinarily weighs 165 and when he's invited out he weighs much more than that, but that's neither here nor there. He's always around a lot of cash, but that's neither here nor there, either, but what's a lot of money among the natives of Zula Hula? He has a bass voice that would rock the cradle of the deep, and what more would a young girl want?

And how Mayor Stemple knows the right time to come to The Republican to be just in time for some ice cream, is beyond me. He says he has dog sense and can smell it. Anyway cherry vanilla special has all our mouths hollering for more.

OCTOGENARIANS ORGANIZE AT MORGANTOWN BANQUET

Jas. A. Enlow, Mt. Lake Park, Is Business Manager; "Never Grow Old" Is Song Chosen

MISS HUFF IS HOSTESS

Mountaineer minstrels who have sung life's song for 80 years or more among the West Virginia and Garrett County hills are quite numerous, according to reports received by Miss Sara B. Huff of New York City, and special director of a state-wide music program in West Virginia for 1932, who gave an honorary dinner for them in Morgantown at the Hotel Morgan during Farm and Home Week, which was termed the most unique feature of the week's activities.

Six octogenarians were present for the dinner and nearly 350 others from all parts of the state wrote letters giving information about themselves and expressing their regret in not being able to be present. John Muldoon, 92 of Monongalia county, was the oldest person to attend the gathering. He was accompanied by his wife who is 80. A telegram of congratulations was sent from the group to Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Sumner of Fayette county, who were the oldest couple so far reported. Mr. Sumner is 100 years old and his wife is 98.

Following the honorary dinner the Society of Octogenarians was formed with Dr. B. D. Purinton, 82, President Emeritus of West Virginia University, as president and historian. He lives at 85 Grandview Avenue, Morgantown. Other officers chosen were William T. White, 84, of Wadestown, Monongalia county, treasurer; Alexander Stonestreet, 86, of Wolf Summit, Harrison county, was named chaplain; J. A. Enlow, 85, of Mountain Lake Park, business manager; John Muldoon, 92, of Morgantown, was named Justice of the Peace, and Mrs. Muldoon, 80, was made cheer leader. "Never Grow Old" was chosen as the official song of the society.

Octogenarians Honored by Dinner at Farm and Home Week

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, ONE OF AMERICA'S GREAT SONS

On January 17th occurred the 226th anniversary of a great American who should not be forgotten amid the nation's tribute to George Washington this year; for this noted American was not only a glory to our history but without him Washington might not have been able to achieve our independence.

This great American was Benjamin Franklin, who became, next to George Washington, the best known American of the 18th century. Wherever enlightened men gathered during the lifetime of Franklin, they accounted him foremost in philosophy, politics and diplomacy, and to this day his name is secure in history as that of a pioneer in science.

Franklin was one of the most versatile men of our history. His clear thinking and good common sense won him fame everywhere. As for his winning personality, it proved a tremendous asset to the American cause. The final victories of Washington on the battlefield would never have been possible but for Franklin's skill in the field of diplomacy and his ultimate winning of the French nation to America's side.

Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston on January 17, 1706, the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission reminds us. His father wanted him to learn the trade of candle-making, an occupation that he disliked so much that he threatened to revolt. To forestall his running away to sea, the boy Franklin was apprenticed to his half-brother James, a printer; and here Franklin's rapid self-education got its start. In his brother's shop he met intelligent people, he eagerly read the best books and he soon tried his hand at writing for his brother's newspaper, called the "first sensational sheet in America."

Quarreling with his brother, Franklin set out for Philadelphia at the age of 17, to make his own way. There he soon caught the attention of Governor Keith at whose suggestion he went to London. There, in spite of many hardships, he soon obtained employment and his agreeable personality brough him many influential friends. One of them, a Quaker merchant named Denham, offered Franklin a job in a store that he planned to open in Philadelphia. Within a short time Denham died and Franklin again was without a job, but his next step was important.

With Hugh Meredith he established a printing shop in Philadelphia and in ten years he had made it the most important business of its kind in the country. Next he bought the Pennsylvania Gazette, which soon gained a circulation of 10,000 and became one of the outstanding papers of the time. In this paper he began those pithy maxims to be gathered under the title of "Poor Richard's Almanac," which lives today in lasting fame.

Meanwhile Franklin's interest and activities had broadened in every direction. He founded the American Philosophical Society, organized the first fire company in Philadelphia and became the city's postmaster and clerk of the Pennsylvania Assembly. His interest in science also developed, and he invented a stove and began those experiments in electricity which have made his name a household word in the scientific world.

Every schoolboy knows the story of Franklin's suspicion that the lightningbolt was simply a larger specimen of the spark he drew from a Leyden jar. He proved the likeness with his historic experiment of the kite and the key during a thunder-storm. The invention of the lightning-rod soon followed.

Franklin's diplomatic feats make too long a list for a newspaper column, but it was he who first sought to bind the Colonies together in union. He performed many saving services for the Colonies before the Revolution, and during that struggle his influence in France provided the factor that turned the Revolution to victory for America.

Even at 81, Franklin's deeds for his country were not yet ended, for in 1787 he performed the culminating service of his long and great career with the fitting act of becoming a member of the Convention that wrote the Constitution.

Throughout his life he was a devoted admirer of George Washington and the friendship of these two men is one of the fairest pages in early American history. On his death, on April 17, 1790, Franklin willed his cane to Washington, with the famous words: "My fine crab-tree walking sticks, with a gold head curiously wrought in the form of a cap of liberty, I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, General Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it."

A baby beauty, and flowers, and love—THAT makes a Valentine.

Fine Old Saint

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

HE had been ill, quite ill. When she was getting a little better some of her friends, conscience smitten, said each unto herself:

"I must go and call on Sally and ask her what I can do for her. She's all by herself. I suppose it's the only decent thing to do and I don't believe she'll need anything much now."

So one by one they telephoned and this is what they said:

"Oh, my dear, I didn't know you had been so ill. I thought it had only been a slight cold, and not having heard from you I thought I'd call up to see what had happened! I'll come up and see you if I may. I wish I had known you were ill before. I might have been able to bring you something. But I'll come up today and see what I can do for you. Good-by, dear. I am so relieved you're a little better. Now don't do too much. I simply won't hear of it. Good-by."

So, every day for a week, one of them at least dropped in to see what could be done.

And this is what they did:

They let her get up and make them tea (when they called around teatime.)

They let her get them just the "simple lunch she would have had herself" (she wouldn't have had any herself, not feeling strong enough to get it!) when they came around lunch time.

They let her make coffee and sandwiches when they came in the evenings.

And as they left, at different times, each said approximately the same. It was this:

"Now don't do too much, dear. I couldn't bear it if you got really ill. You're looking so much better now. Oh—don't bother to thank me. It was a pleasure to do what I could."

Yes, she felt sadly disillusioned. Life seemed to her a very sordid proposition.

She remembered when she was passing a jewelry shop one day. She had seen a sign in the window:

"We furnish the license free to anyone buying a wedding ring from us."

Fancy their having such a sign! And there must have been people who had responded, or they wouldn't have such an advertisement.

She could fancy the mortification and embarrassment of having one's prospective husband suggest such an economy.

Alas, though, something had gone entirely wrong with her romance in life. Now, Valentine's day was approaching, and once more she knew she would have no flowers to wear, while all her other friends had them.

It had been hard. Illness, and nothing now to buck her up. She was lonely and young. It was worse, she felt sure, than being lonely and old.

Her mind went back to the days when she was sixteen. There was Geoffrey Pratt. They had talked of their future together—but they were both very young and Geoffrey had gone away that next year. She had never seen him since; it was over ten years. To think of being able to speak of something as having happened ten years before. It made her feel so old.

Suddenly her mind was aroused from these thoughts by a ring at the bell.

Was she dreaming? Could it be—

"Why—Geoffrey?" she stammered. "Is it you?"

"Such a question," he laughed.

And then—but why pry into those precious moments of hers?

He had come back! In real life, too, and clad in the armor of romance. And tomorrow—St. Valentine's day—they were to be married. He had had a dreadful time getting back for that special day!

And why hadn't he written? Why hadn't she? Each had thought the other of course now cared for some one else when letters were not answered at first—letters which were never received. It was only natural to think that. But he had heard, only two months before, when he had been down in South America, from some one who had seen her. She was not married. She wasn't supposed to be engaged.

And he had come—all the way—to get her. Nothing would do but that.

Oh yes, there still was romance.

And St. Valentine was a mighty fine saint!

All Hearts Bow to Good Saint Valentine

LOVERS beware! A wealth of cheery little red hearts and rampant cupids are flaunting their charms from shop windows to lure even the wary into the endearing ways of St. Valentine.

And just what chance have young men and their sweethearts! There's no telling when one of these paper arrows may reach home or a plaintive verse, as sweet as a sugar plum, succeed in entwining itself around a lose tendril of a wistful heart.

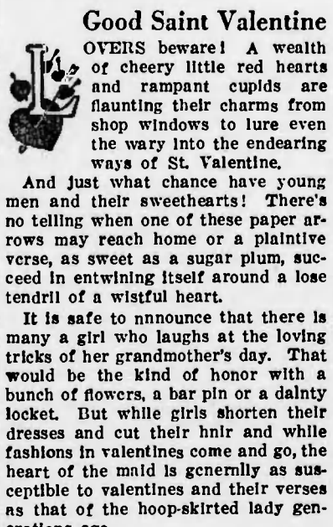
It is safe to announce that there is many a girl who laughs at the loving tricks of her grandmother's day. That would be the kind of honor with a bunch of flowers, a bar pin or a dainty locket. But while girls shorten their dresses and cut their hair and while fashions in valentines come and go, the heart of the maid is generally as susceptible to valentines and their verses as that of the hoop-skirted lady generations ago.

"What are those things?" questions a mystified buyer, pointing to a row of lacy confections. "Would a girl really like one of them?"

Like them! She couldn't help it; they were the very essence of the old-time valentines. Through a paper lace gate was visible a graceful lady in hillowy skirts and a pair of love birds, shaded in delicate lavender. Quite a contrast to the satirical and humorous concoctions which were popular a few years ago. But any older woman will say there is nothing new about them. They are imitations of the hand-wrought and fanciful expressions common years ago.

Little Old Lace

By WILLIAM HERSCHELL



LITTLE old lace valentine,
Heritage of Auld Lang Syne,
You have secrets, old as gold;
Secrets you have never told.
O the glad hours Youth has spent
Drowning in your sentiment!

BOY still longs to see her look
As he slips you in Girl's book;
Waits to see the glad surprise
Beaming from enraptured eyes.
All he craves is just to know
None but his could please her so!

CYNICS call it puppy-love,
Yet no soul-glow from above
Brings God's heaven nearer view
Than the heart throbs born of you,
Little old lace valentine,
Heritage of Auld Lang Syne!

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

There has been a great deal of comment in the newspapers concerning the recent statement of Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the cabinet of President Wilson, to the effect that he did not believe the time was ripe for the United States to enter the League of Nations. Mr. Baker has been one of the most consistent supporters of the theory of Uncle Sam's adherence to the League. Several weeks ago, at a Democratic banquet in Winchester, Ind., he reaffirmed his faith in the League and it was widely stated at the time that this reaffirmation eliminated him as a presidential possibility in the campaign of 1932. Now many of the political dopesters are declaring that his latest statement to the effect that the League is not now an issue in American politics, puts him back in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

* * *

Mr. Baker in his statement says among other things that he thinks it would be a great mistake to make the League issue a partisan matter. There is not much chance unless Mr. Baker is nominated for President that it will be a partisan matter again in the near future for the reason that Democratic leaders generally are as much opposed to the entrance of the United States into the League as are Republican leaders, and the rank and file of the Democratic party is as much opposed as is the rank and file of the Republican party. At the time the League fight was hot in the Senate many pro-Leaguers made the charge that Republican leaders were opposed to Uncle Sam's joining the League because it was a Wilson measure. This was not true, and it must not be forgotten that several Democratic leaders, whose partisanship has never been questioned, were opposed to the League, too.

As a matter of fact, when President Wilson first brought the League idea back from Europe the general unorganized sentiment of the country was favorable to the idea. We had heard so much during the war about universal brotherly love and making the world safe for democracy, that it seemed only logical to the unthinking that, with the war over and everybody loving everybody else, some sort of organization to prevent war was the next step.

The easiest thing for the leaders in the Senate to have done would have been to recognize this sentiment, put the League over and look somewhere else for an issue. But fortunately for the country, there were in the United States Senate many students of international politics who were not looking for the easy way. They recognized the fact that the world had not been changed by the war and there was just as much factionaism, as much selfishness and as much crooked international politics in Europe as there had been before 1914. They foresaw the dangers that would come from a political League of Nations, especially to a country like the United States which had always been isolated and which had economic standards different from those of Europe. As a result there came the historic Senate fight against the League of Nations which was eminently and convincingly successful.

Since that time sentiment against Uncle Sam's joining the League of Nations has been growing steadily in the United States, and it has been growing in spite of the tremendous propaganda for Internationalism which has been unloosed in successive floods in the United States. The reason why this international propaganda has failed is that the people of the country have been studying international politics and are better informed on European affairs than they were when the League idea was first brought to our shores. And again, this propaganda has failed because happenings in the world have steadily tended to refute the claims of the internationalists. The latest refutation has been the League fizzle in Manchria.

The League will not be a political issue again soon unless the Democrats nominate Newton D. Baker for President. If they do, no power on earth can keep the League from becoming an issue, not even a declaration against it in both party platforms. From a political standpoint the Democrats could not do the Republicans a greater favor than to nominate Mr. Baker for President. They would at once present the Republicans with an issue on which they have won two sweeping national victories, and on which the chances of winning are better at this time than ever before.

BITTINGER

The depression seems to have reached the proverbial groundhog, for even that critter did not do a bit of business in this section on February 2nd, for it was very cloudy the entire day.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Buckle, accompanied by Messrs. E. S. Brenneman and R. L. Emory and Miss Fern Buckle, motored to Oakland on business last Friday.

Merchant and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp, who have been ill at their home in this village for some days, are reported as being much improved at this time.

The members of the Busy Workers Sunday school class were entertained by Miss Marie Stark last Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Ada Fike, of Eglon, W. Va., and Mrs. Sarah Schrock, of Mountain Lake Park, were guests at the home of their brother, Silas C. Beachy, at the Beachy farm, near this village, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bittinger visited friends in Frostburg last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beitzell and Mr. Harold Brenneman motored to Cumberland on business one day last week.

Sheriff Walter Haenftling, of Oakland, was in this section on business a few days ago.

Frank Brenneman spent part of last Saturday with friends on the east side of Meadow Mountain.

Owners of maple sugar camps in this community are beginning preparations for the opening of their plants and if the weather continues favorable they hope to soon have some newly made maple sweets for sale.

The heaviest rain of the present year fell in this section early last week and as a result the streams were much swollen but no damage resulted.

Sheriff Haenftling purchased two young horses from Earl Resh, one of the farmers of this community, one day last week.

LINCOLN

If the spirit of Abraham Lincoln sometimes walks the streets after dark, as poets assert is true, it would have paused recently before the great bronze incarnation of its flesh in a Chicago park—not to admire this St. Gaudens masterpiece, but to enjoy the spectacle of a half dozen boys playing baseball under its floodlights. Perhaps the one hundred per cent patriot, zealously watchful of disrespect, would have resented the intense, dirt-smeared catcher squatting at the foot of the statue, and his "Batterup," and "Socko! You're out!" But, we opine, not so the spirit of the Emancipator hovering in the shadows. Probably it would have gleaned a wisp of satisfaction that it should have been even the unwitting means of providing for these street urchins an evening playground which their eiders had failed to supply. For Lincoln was a friendly, informal sort of person. He liked people, and children were an especial delight.

It is unfortunate that talking-moving pictures were unknown in his day so that the reallty of his personallty might have been preserved vlsually and audibly for other generations. It is twice unfortunate that already there is a veil of myth about Lincoln the man. He has been raised to the pedestal of a hero and something has been lost in the process.

With the years, it becomes increasingly hard to visualize Abraham Lincoln as he must have been: an angular person whose voice had a mid-Western drawl; a young man whose forehead veins swelled and throbbed as he split hardwood tree trunks into rails; a small-town lawyer who knew polities as well as law; a very important man in Washington who sometimes was very lonely for humble, sincere friends.—The Rotarian Magazine.

OPENING OF THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

President Hoover will officially open the nine-months' nation-wide George Washington Bicentennial Celebration at noon (Eastern standard time) February 22, when he will deliver his George Washington address before a joint meeting of Congress, assembled in the House of Representatives in the Capitol. The Judges of the Supreme Court, members of the Cabinet, foreign diplomats and many other distinguished visitors will also be present, and the address will be carried to every corner of America over a nation-wide hook-up.

Following his address, President Hoover will be escorted to the East steps of the Capitol and will give the signal for the singing of "Amcrica" by a chorus of ten thousand voices. It is expected that millions of people will join in this "sing" as it comes over the air.

The great chorus gathered at the Capitol will be conducted by Walter Damrosch and will be accompanied by the United States Army, Navy and Marine bands which will play as a unit un ier the direction of John Philip Sousa. An "inaugural" crowd is expected to be on hand for these ceremonies.

After luncheon, President Hoover, accompanied by the members of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission and the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission, will go to Mount Vernon to lay a wreath on the tomb of the Father of IIis Country ln the name of a united nation.

At 3:00 p. m., there will be exercises at the Washington Monument under the ausplces of various patriotlc societies of the District of Columbia.

In the evening the Gcorge Washington Colonial Costume Ball will be held at the Mayflower Hotel under the auspices of the United States George Washington Bicentcnnial Commission and the District of Columbia Bicentennial Commlssion. No effort ls being spared to reproduce the Colonial atmosphere for this occasion. The affair is being managed by experts and every State will be represented by especially invited guests.

While the celebration officially opens on February 22, Sunday, February 21, will be an active day in the District of Columbia as well as in every city in America. The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission has suggested special religious services for George Washington to be held wherever people gather to worship. Response from the various church organizations to this projcet has been remarkable. It is probable that practically all of the 232,000 churches will hold special services honoring the First President on this day.

A folk-masque written especially for the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission by Percy MacKaye will be presented at Constitution Hall, Washington, D. C., on the evening of February 21. This masque is being produced under the auspices of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission and the District of Columbia Bicentennial George Washington Commission.

The masque is entitled "Wakefield," named after the birthplace of George Washington, and portrays in symbolic form the story of George Washington. Five hundred adults and children are being rehearsed for this production and the music will be furnished by the United States Marine Band. The folk-masque is being printed by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission for use of other cities. It is expected that this masque will be produced in all the large cities of the United States during the Bicentennial Celebration.

During the week of February 22, motion pictures depicting principal events in the life of George Washington entitled "Washington the Man and the Capitol," will be shown in the theatres of America as a feature of the Bicentennial Celebration. Hundreds of theatres have already arranged for sueh a showing, and, undoubtedly, practically every motion picture theatre in America will be booked to show the life of George Washington on the screen.

LET'S KEEP COOL

Day by day, as this is written, the Sino-Japanese situation seems to be getting more serious. Warships of the United States, Great Britian, France, and Italy are at Shanghai to protect the nationals of these nations in case the fighting spreads to the international quarters. It is the duty of every nation, of course, to protect the lives of its citizens when there is trouble. It is equally clear just now, that this is as far as the United States will go or should go in the Far Eastern situation.

While it is true that public sympathy generally in the United States is pro-Chinese, it is not to be forgotten that after all the Chinese are not blameless. For years the country has been torn by conflicting armies, headed by factionalists who in some cases are little better than brigand chiefs. China has been unable to form a strong centralized government for itself, and is now paying the consequences of disorganization and lack of national defense. If the Chinese cannot organize and protect themselves it is too much to ask that other nations shall continually do this for them every time a foreign foe arises.

The Japanese claim that they are in China to protect the lives and property of Japanese citizens who have been attacked by Chinese. While the average Amcrican may be inclined to believe that the Japanese have gone farther than neeessary to do this, still there is not much we can do about it. Our principal duty is to see that American lives are safe. Outside of that we have no military duty in the matter and Americans should keep cool in this time of crisis.

WORDS GONE TO WASTE—

The city editor of the New York Herald Tribune, Stanley Walker, writing in Harpers, estimates that 300,000 words of press agent material are received at the office of New York newspapers eaeh day of the year. Practically all of this material is consigned to the waste basket, most of it without even being opened. Mr. Walker is unable to understand why American businessmen, reputedly a rather shrewd lot, continue to pay good money for this sort of useless advertising.

Mr. Walker's figure, 300,000, represents a lot of words. Add to that the hundreds of thousands of words contained in the press agent material that goes out to the newspapers ln the "provinces", and you have a staggering total involving an appalling wasteage of paper, effort, and money. Not a day goes by but a mass of unopened letters goes into the waste basket in this office. In every other newspaper office the same thlng goes on.

Press agents must be able to convince their clients that newspaper editors are guileless individuals. Indeed, these agents seem to hold something of the same opinion. They lay down a constant barrage of "news stories" which, at first glance, really appear to be just that. Careful reading, however, never fails to reveal somewhere in the article the name of some advertiser or advertised product. Not once in a blue moon do the "stories" get by the desk.

The amazing thing is that even though one has to search far and wide before he discovers one of the releases actually in print, nevertheless they keep on coming and, presumably, American business concerns keep on paying. It seems to be "just one of those things."

ROAD BUILDING HELPS EVERYBODY

We have heard much of the value of road building as a means of alleviating unemployment. Now it is interesting to see the actual results. During 1931, the building of rural roads and streets kept something like a million men busy in actual construction work—and, in the words of Thos. H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, "for each individual so employed the total highway expenditure provides additional indirect employment equivalent to two other persons."

Consequently, in 1931, the road and street construction program was of benefit to about 3,000,000 men—which means that it helped some 10 or 12 million persons. Seventy-five to 80 per cent of the money spent went to labor.

The best part of all is that road building, even when advocated principally to help the unemployed, is not a "relief" measure of the kind that costs taxpayers millions of dollars which pay no return. Every time a rural or farm-to-market road is built another town or area is given a chance to progress, to develop—and its inhabitants, particularly farmers, have a chance for greater prosperity, for a fuller social life, and for more advantageous marketing of products. It is worth repeating that the road dollar is a genuine, gilt-edge investment which returns a high rate of interest—not only in actual cash, but in benefits which cannot be measured in money.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A sleighing party, composed of many of the young people of Oakland, went to Aurora, West Va., where a dinner was enjoyed at the Lantz hotel and afterward dancing. The party was chaperoned by an Oakland matron.

Patrick Hart, a brother of the then Mayor Owen Hart, left Oakland for Florida, declaring that this section of country was "too cold for an Irishman."

The commissioner of patents, Washington, D. C., issued a patent to John Cornelius, of Oakland, for a wrecking machine or stump extractor.

The members of the local Lutheran church was called to meet on February 24 to determine if sufficient financial encouragement was forthcoming to erect a new church during the approaching summer.

Fred. Felty opened a general store in the Bishop building on Second street.

Jonas Frazee, young merchant of Selbysport, visited Oakland on business.

Among the notaries public appointed for the county were G. A. Fraley and James M. Litzinger, of Oakland. Samuel C. Hoye, George W. Merrill and C. N. Friend were named school commissioners. Governor Brown was then the chief executive.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Judges and clerks were appointed to conduct the municipal election to be held in Oakland.

Members of council were also appointed to investigate the feasibility of sounding a fire alarm by a whistle to operate either by compressed air or the high pressure gas main then in use.

Lawrence Bittinger, rural mail carrier, was injured when his sleigh struck a stone hidden under the snow, resulting in the wrecking of his sleigh and in falling from it Mr. Bittinger was kicked in the face by his horse.

Dixon and Kelso completed the repairs and alterations to their store building.

Mr. Dice Spiker had contracted for the erection of a new brick dwelling on his farm south of Oakland.

MOST MARYLAND PEOPLE LIVE IN 35-44 AGE GROUP

14.3 Percent of State Total In "Young-Middle-Age Group"

Do you happen to know what age group in the population of Maryland has the largest number of persons in it? Would you believe that one out of every seven is in the group from 35 to 55 years old?

In order that the disease fighters in city and state departments of public health may map out their disease prevention campaigns intelligently, it is necessary for them to know not only where and what diseases are occurring, but also what age groups of the population are likely to be affected by them. For this and various other reasons, estimates based upon the U. S. Census reports are made every year by the State Department of Health of the number in each age group in Maryland. The estimates for the current year were made by the Bureau of Vital Statistics and are based upon the Census returns of 1920 and 1930.

Considering the people of Maryland as one big family, it is interesting to note that there are more people living in the State who are from 35 to 44 years old—what may be called "the young-middle-aged-group" than in any other age-group. Out of a total population of 1,671,448, there are 239,447 in this group, of 14.3 per cent of the total. This proportion holds good in both white and colored populations.

Since 1920 there has been a gradual decline in the birth rate, not only in Maryland, but throughout the country. This has been offset in Maryland in two ways—the steady saving of infant lives and the prolonging of life in the older age-groups. These changes have brought about some shifting in the present relative sizes of the different age-groups, in comparison with the former proportions in these groups.

For instance, in connection with these estimates, Dr. John Collinson, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, points out that at present 27.9 per cent of the total population is made up of the babies under a year old—of whom there are 25,982—their older brothers and sisters in the preschool age and those in the school age up to 14 years, a total of 466,333 children. He also shows that in 1920, when the total population of the State was 1,449,661, there were 430,579 children, or 29.6 per cent of the total population at all ages in the group under 15 years old.

One-third of the present population—559,157, or 33.4 per cent of the otal, is in the group from 15 to 34 years old; a little less than a third—544,170—or 32.5 per cent of the total, is in the group from 35 to 64 years old, with 239,477 from 35 to 44; 182,391 from 45 to 54, and 122,302 from 55 to 64. There are nearly 100,000 persons in the State—97,472, to be exact—5.8 per cent of the total—who are 65 years old or older. Of that number 70,020 are from 65 to 74 and 27,452 are 75 years or older.

Removing Crab Grass Spots

Crab grass is undoubtedly one of the worst lawn pests in many sections of Maryland. This is an annual which comes from seed each year in early summer. It spreads rapidly, taking root at the joints and smothers out the better lawn grasses. It persistentiy reseeds in spite of close mowing. However, the fact that the seeds germinate in late spring gives the cue to effective methods of fighting this weed. If the growth of good grasses can be stimulated in the early spring to form a thick sod, it is difficult for the crab grass to gain a foothold. Therefore, a well established lawn should be fertilized regularly, especialliy in early spring.

The 1930 drouth injured lawns in many sections so that crab grass was able to flourish and smother out the lawn grasses. Fall is usually the best time to correct these troubles, but if the re-seeding has been neglected it should be tended to early in the spring. Bare spots should be raked up lightly and reseeded with a good grass mixture. Ordinarily freezing and thawing will cover the seed sufficiently if planted the last of February or early in the March.

One of the best treatments after this early seeding is to put over the entire lawn a thin layer of compost. This seems to have a stimulating effect in the germination of grass seed. If well rotted manure or woods earth is not available, a good loam soil may be mixed with pulverized sheep manure and bone meal together with a little peat moss.

Spare the Soap and Spoil the Silk

If you have ever washed your favorite silk dress and had it come out of the tub spotted with ugly black specks, you have said, "Never again".

"What causes black specks to appear on silk garments when they are washed?" is a question that many people are asking.

The answer is—lack of sufficient soapsuds in the washing. All water has some hardness caused by lime. Even soft water has a certain amount. When soap combines with the lime it forms a white material known as lime soap. If enough soap is added to make suds, these lime soaps will not form. If a soapsuds is not made and kept, the lime soaps combine with the dust and dirt in the fabric which is being washed and form the dark, greasy looking deposits which settle especially in seams, hems and other thicknesses of the silk.

No amount of rinsing in clear water will remove this deposit. The cure must be sought in washing silk garments in enough soap to maintain a thick, lasting suds which prevents these black specks. The harder the water, the more soap is required.

If you have already spoiled clothes by insufficient soap, try washing them over again, using lukewarm suds. If you do it properly, your garments will be made bright and fresh looking, without a trace of the objectionable specks.

CHILD HEALTH MEETINGS SCHEDULED FOR COUNTIES

Steady Increase in Number of Children Brought to Conference

Provision is made in the schedule of health conferences for the current year, under the joint direction of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health and the county health departments, for at least one conference every month in each county, for the health examinations of babies and their brothers and sisters under school age. Later in the spring special conferences will be held, with the cooperation of the State Department of Education, for the examination of children who will reach school age this year in preparation for their admission to school.

There has been a steady increase, year by year, in the number of children brought to the health conferences. The report of last year's conferences, prepared by the Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., shows that 8,423 children under school age, representing over 5,000 families, attended the conferences in 1931, an increase of 2,254 over the attendance in 1930.

Of last year's total, 5,879 were white and 2,544 colored. Of the white children 2,212 ranged in age from babies a few weeks old to their older sisters and brothers nearing five, and 3,667 were from five to seven years old. In the colored group, 1,585 were under five and 959 from five to seven.

Including the stops made by the Department's healthmobile in its tour of Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore last summer, 388 places representing every county in the State, were visited and 545 conferences were held. One out of very four children examined—2,201, or 26 per cent—were free from handicapping conditions. Thirty-nine percent—3,294—had decayed teeth or other conditions of the nose or throat; 1,508 with enlarged or infected tonsils and 440 with adenoids. Of these, 429 were mouth breathers. Fifteen percent—1,295—gave evidence of faulty nutrition; 169 had postural defects, and bone changes due to rickets were observed in 368. Unfavorable conditions of the lungs were reported in 82; of the heart in 122; 51 had some defect of vision; 16 of hearing, and 41 were mentally retarded.

A report of each examination was forwarded to the family physician. The importance of keeping the well children well by the careful observance of the rules of healthy living and by regular supervision by the family doctor was stressed at every conference. The necessity for having any conditions that needed correction attended to was urged upon the mothers at the conferences.

DIED.

MRS. GEORGE KEIFER

Under and by virtue of the powers vested in us by a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, passed on the 23rd day of January, 1932, in a cause wherein Viola Keenan and others were complainants and Thomas I. Male and others defendants, the same being No. 3030 Equity, we, the undersigned trustees, do hereby give notice that on at the hour of eleven o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Maryland, we will offer for sale at public auction the following real estate situate, lying and being in District No. 10 of Garret County, to-wit:

All that lot or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 5 on a plat of the tract of land conveyed by Henry G. Davis and wife to John W. Garrett by deed dated September 29th, 1881, and recorded in Liber W. H. T., No. 5, folio 797, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, which plat will be found recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 20, folio 351, etc., one of said Land Records. Said lot of ground contains FORTY-NINE (49) ACRES AND THIRTEEN (13) PERCHES, more or less, and is the same which was conveyed unto John R. Male, late of Garret County, Maryland, deceased, by deed from Mary E. Garrett et al., trustees, dated May 25, 1893, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 22, folio 74, one of said Land Records of Garrett County, and title to which became vested in the parties in the above mentioned cause under the terms of the last will and testament of said John R. Male.

Save and excepting one-half acre conveyed by said John R. Male and wife to John Moon et al., Trustees for the U. B. Church, for church and burial purposes, by deed dated August 31st, 1896, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 30, folio 485, one of said Land Records of Garrett County. Also excepting one acre at the south side of the property devised to Albert N. Male by the will of said John R. Male, the line of which has been established.

The property is known as the JOHN R. MALE FARM, is located along the county road leading from Loch Lynn to Deer Park and Boiling Spring, is nearly all cleared and in a good state of cultivation, is improved by dwelling, stable and other farm buildings and would make a very excellent farm home.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third cash on day of sale, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser or purchasers, the credit portions to be secured to the satisfaction of the trustees and to bear interest from the day of sale.

Abraham Lincoln in 1864, From a Portrait Considered by Many to Be His Best

Simple Beauty Marks Rebuilt Tomb of Lincoln

Shrine at Springfield Now More Worthy of the Great President.

PRESIDENT HOOVER dedicated a transformed Abraham Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Ill., June 17, last year.

When the monument over the spot where the body of the Civil war President rests was given to the world again pilgrims to the grave found that it is a place of simple grandeur befitting a national shrine.

For months it was closed to the public while skilled artists plied their arts to repair and rebuild it and gave it beauty, simplicity and dignity.

The reconstruction was made possible by the passage of a $177,000 appropriation by the general assembly in 1929.

Much the Same Outside.

Outwardly the monument appears the same, except that it has an air of newness, of freshness. In a terrace created at the south or entrance side of the monument there is a bronze head of Lincoln by Gutzon Borglum on a pedestal of granite.

The great transformation is in the interior of the monument. Under personal supervision of C. Herrick Hammond, state architect and former president of the American Institute of Architects, the previously unused and unfinished area at the base of the monument was opened and architectural skill and art combined to fabricate a rotunda connecting galleries and sarcophagus chamber.

One of the main features of the galleries joining the rotunda and the sarcophagus chamber are nine Lincoln statuettes of bronze depicting Lincoln at various stages of his career. These are the handiwork of internationally famous sculptors.

At each of the four corners of the central unit of the monument there is one of these statuettes, about three feet in height, resting on a pedestal in a niche. Diagonally across from each of these is a statuette in a similar niche.

These bronze statuettes were obtained by the state through the efforts of Mr. Hammond and H. H. Cleaveland, director of the state department of public works and buildings.

The sculptors, Daniel C. French, Fred Torrey and Leonard Crunelle, are each represented by two models, while Lorado Taft, Adolph Weinman and the late Augustus St. Gaudens each have one.

As a background for these statuettes there are rich, warm-colored panels of marble.

Supreme Effect in Chamber.

Beautiful as are the rotunda and the galleries, the supreme effect is attained in the sarcophagus chamber. There the pilasters and frieze are of french black marble, as dark as midnight, with walls of St. Genevieve golden vein marble. On the upper portion of each jet-black pilaster there is a bronze wreath.

The ceiling of the chamber is covered with gold leaf, and the room, like the rotunda, is lighted indirectly by lights hidden by an ornamental cornice.

There over the spot where Lincoln's body lies beneath many feet of concrete has been placed a new sarcophagus of solid marble of warm red hue. On it is the simple inscription:

"Abraham Lincoln,
1809—1865."

Directly above what formerly was the north door, but now transformed into a window covered with a wrought-iron grill, there is cut in the marble this famous tribute to the emancipator:

"Now He Belongs to the Ages."

Across from the sarcophagus in a crypt sealed with slabs of marble rest the bodies of Mrs. Lincoln and three of their sons, Edward Baker, William Wallace and Thomas.

Flags Form Honor Guard.

Arranged along the semicircular wall of the sarcophagus chamber, flanking the sarcophagus, there is an array of nine flags.

In the place of honor, at the right of the sarcophagus, stands the Stars and Stripes. The official standard of the seven states in which the Lincoln family lived from the time of their arrival in America until the end of the emancipator's career—Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois—occupy the next seven positions.

President Hoover personally installed the flag of the President of the United States.

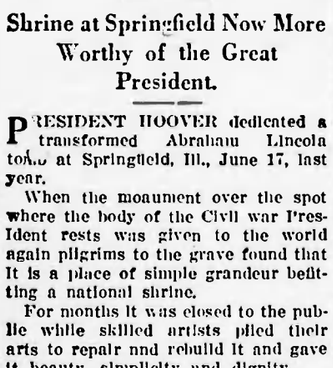
Looking at Lincoln

February 12 means Lincoln. On that day we of this nation and many in other nations honor the name which connotes struggle, achievement, patience under an avalanche of rebuffs and the saving grace of humor brightening a persistent upward light for a great ideal. All these things shout "Lincoln" when February 12 comes around.

His Great Task

Lincoln rose out of the soil and stain of life in a Middle West community to attain the greatest heights. He held the nation together until it was finally joined in such a way that it will not separate again.—Exchange.

LINCOLN'S TOMB



All the solemnity and decorum befitting the last resting place of America's beloved President has been exemplified in the re-designing program.

WHEN the victory shall be complete—when there shall be neither a slave nor a drunkard on the earth—how proud the title of that land which may truly claim to be the birthplace and the cradle of both these revolutions that shall have ended in that victory.—Abraham Lincoln.

A PROPHECY
(From "Lincoln's Grave.")

Old soldiers true, ah, them all men can trust,
Who fought, with conscience clear, on either side;
Who bearded death and thought their cause was just;
Their stainless honor can not be denied;
Ring it and sing it up and down the land,
And let no voice dare answer it with sneers,
Or shut its meaning out;
Ring it and sing it, we go hand in hand,
Old infantry, old cavalry, old cannoneers.

And if Virginia's vales shall ring again
To battle-yell of Moseby or Mahone,
If Wilder's wild brigade or Morgan's men
Once more wheel into lines; or all alone
A Sheridan shall ride, a Cleburne fall—
There will not be two flags above them flying,
But both in one, welded in that pure flame
Upflaring in us all,
When kindred unto kindred, loudly crying,
Rally and cheer in freedoms' holy name!
—Maurice Thompson.

Lincoln Wrote His Own Autobiography

Document in Possession of Milwaukee Family.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S autobiography, consisting of slightly more than 500 words in his own handwriting, is in the possession of Mrs. Harriet F. Richardson and her son, of Milwaukee, Wis.

They were willed the document by the late Miss Fannie Fell. Jesse Fell, Miss Fell's father, shared law offices with Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. He prevailed upon Lincoln to write the autobiography in 1859 when it became apparent that the great emancipator would become a Presidential candidate.

Extracts from the autobiography follow:

"I was born February 12, 1809, in Hardin county, Kentucky. My parents were both born in Virginia of undistinguished families, second families, I should say. My mother, who died in my tenth year, was of a family of the name of Hanks, some of whom now reside in Adams, and others in Macon county, Illinois.

"My paternal grandfather, Abraham Lincoln, emigrated from Rockingham county, Virginia, to Kentucky about 1781 or 1782, where a year or two later he was killed by Indians, not in battle, but by stealth, when he was laboring to open a farm in the forest.

"His ancestors, who were Quakers, went to Virginia from Berks county, Pennsylvania. An effort to identify them with the New England family of the same name, ended in nothing more definite than a similarity of Christian names of both families, such as Enoch, Levi, Mordecai, Solomon, Abraham and the like.

"My father, at the death of his father, was but six years of age and he grew up literally without education. He removed from Kentucky to what is now Spencer county, Indiana, in my eighth year.

"At twenty-one I came to Illinois and passed the first year in Illinois—Macon county. Then I got to New Salem, where I remained a year as a sort of clerk in the store. Then came the Black Hawk war and I was elected a captain of volunteers, a success which gave me more pleasure than any I have had since. I went into the campaign, was elected, ran for the legislature the same year (1832) and was beaten. Only time I have ever been beaten by the people. The next three succeeding biennial elections I was elected to the legislature.

"During this legislation period I had studied law and removed to Springfield to practice it. In 1841 I was elected to the lower house of congress. From 1849 to 1854 I practiced law more assiduously than ever before—always a Whig in politics, and generally on the Whig electoral tickets, making active canvasses.

"If any personal description of me is thought desirable, it may be said, I am 6 feet 4 inches in height, lean in flesh, weighing on an average 180 pounds; dark complexion, with coarse hair and gray eyes—no marks or brands recollected."

CHICAGO'S TRIBUTE

Night and artificial light add to the beauty of Lincoln's monument, located in Lincoln park, Chicago.

LET every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his fathers, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty.—Abraham Lincoln.

LINCOLN AS A YOUTH

The Lincoln of 23, the volunteer in the Blackhawk war, youthful and strong, with brow unmarked by the cares of the nation, with face unseamed by sorrow, is this Lincoln—the work of Leonard Crunelle.

Lincoln Forbears Not Men of Mean Stock

His Ancestor a Member of Jefferson's Cabinet.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN came of no mean stock, according to Dr. Louis A. Warren, of Fort Wayne, Ind., director of the Lincoln Historical Research foundation and editor of Lincoln Lore.

The Civil war President's family belonged to the ante-bellum southern aristocracy of Kentucky, and one of his ancestors was a cabinet officer in a Democratic administration, Doctor Warren's research has revealed.

In refuting the popular misconception that Lincoln rose from poverty and was of an humble origin, Doctor Warren declared that if his revelations were a shock to cherished ideas of the emancipator, they had the sound backing of documentary evidence.

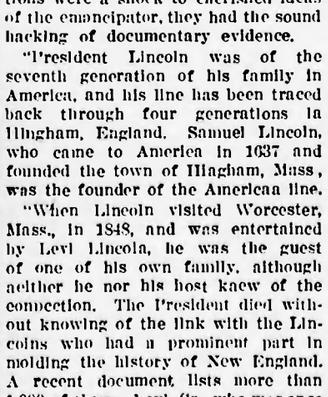
"President Lincoln was of the seventh generation of his family in America, and his line has been traced back through four generations in Hingham, England. Samuel Lincoln, who came to America in 1637 and founded the town of Hingham, Mass., was the founder of the American line.

"When Lincoln visited Worcester, Mass., in 1848, and was entertained by Levi Lincoln, he was the guest of one of his own family, although neither he nor his host knew of the connection. The President died without knowing of the link with the Lincolns who had a prominent part in molding the history of New England. A recent document lists more than 1,000 of them. Levi, Sr., who was once governor of the Bay state, was secretary of state under Thomas Jefferson."

Doctor Warren traced the migration of the Lincolns from Massachusetts, through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, across the Ohio river into Indiana and thence to Illinois.

"Lincoln's grandfather, once holder of 5,000 acres of land in Kentucky, was massacred by the Indians in one of the great tragedies of the family. Following his death, when Lincoln's father, Thomas, was ten years old, the widow was defrauded out of practically all of the land, which may explain the beginnings of the humble origin theory."

LINCOLN IN OIL



Here is a recently discovered original oil painting of Mr. Lincoln which, with other relics of the martyred President have been acquired for the University museum.

Sought Supreme Wisdom

Abraham Lincoln said: "I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that of all about me, seemed insufficient for that day."

Last Witness of Tragedy

Henry C. Hardy, ninety-year-old Union veteran of the Civil war and believed to have been the last surviving witness of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, died at his home at Berryville, Ark., in 1930.

NEST-EGG FOR LOTTIE'S EDUCATION

By FANNIE HURST

(©) by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service.)

SIBBIE was one of those women who had married early (a first-love elopement), had spent the subsequent years bemoaning the fact that she had not availed herself of the opportunity for a college education.

The stage had all been set for Sibbie to attend a state university when she eloped instead. It had been no great blow however to her parents, the idea of college, which in a modest way they had been able to afford, had been to them more of a new-fangled notion than a project of value. So when Sibbie eloped with a nice local boy, with prospects in his father's machinery shop, it had seemed more of a blessing than a calamity.

In a way this was true, because the pretty Sibbie was to enjoy three years of complete marital happiness before her husband succumbed to influenza during an epidemic.

It had been hard sledding after that. Her little girl was just two when the father died. Her father-in-law's machine shop was destined to bankruptcy, her own parents had passed on meanwhile, leaving assets that were chiefly in the form of mortgages.

There had not been a time after those first three years of married happiness when Sibbie had not been harassed, pressed and burdened with the responsibilities of the struggle for existence of herself and little girl. And through all the driven, work-ridden years the regret that had lain uppermost in the mind of Sibbie was her failure to avail herself, when a girl, of the opportunity of a college education. Lack of it seemed the fundamental explanation of so many of the handicaps that oppressed her. It was humiliating when she thought of her little daughter Lottie, that she, Sibbie, instead of earning their living by some such activity as teaching or professional work, should be obliged to accept a salesladyship in a dry goods store or sit behind the wire cage of a cashier's desk in a lunch room.

A college woman happened to run one of these lunch rooms in which Sibbie was employed as cashier. The very books she kept on her desk were a sign of reproach to the mother of little Lottie. They were the kind of books Sibbie was not only unprepared to read herself, but was unprepared to pass along and discuss with her daughter. Books of psychology; science; collections of essays.

Because her mind had never been sufficiently trained, Sibbie had not the patience for reading anything except the most superficial magazines and the tabloid newspapers. Vaudeville and motion pictures were her forms of entertainments and it was all she could do to keep awake if she accompanied her little daughter, for the sake of its cultural significance, to a lecture or a symphony concert.

And so Sibbie found herself going through life, branded, as it were, by this outstanding lack; branded by the fact that as an uneducated woman she was fettered to walks of life that otherwise might have been roads to a higher destiny. Try as she would to excuse herself, Sibbie was forced at last to realize that her intellectual curiosity had simply never been awakened.

The proprietor of the restaurant was the sort of college woman whose tastes had been stimulated back in the formative years. Sibbie realized that same need within herself. She had no talent for culture; no appetite, except one that should have been artificially stimulated in her youth.

And, of course, this regret began gradually to be offset by an ambition. Before Lottie was in her 'teens, a gleaming resolution had already lit Sibbie's eyes. Lottie would never know the bitter pangs of regret that had eaten their way through the life of her mother.

When Lottie was thirteen, the fund for her college education already amounted to three figures in Sibbie's little bank book.

And delightfully enough, Lottie showed promise of a distinct appetite for learning. She was the sort of child to whom going to school was a pleasure. Her teacher liked her; her reports were excellent and to Sibbie's delight, it was not unusual to find the little girl, after school hours, curled up on a couch reading a book, instead of playing out of doors with the neighborhood children. And good books they were. Dickens. When Lottie was sixteen, she spoke French almost as well as the graphophone records from which she had learned it. By this time her application was in for admission into a large eastern college for girls, and Sibbie's nest-egg was already large enough to account for the first two years of Lottie's college life.

Even in her choice of companions, Lottie brought gratification to her mother's heart. She was not only a member of the high school's literary society, but vice president as well, and presided when the president of the organization, Lon Brown, son of the principal of the high school, was obliged to be absent. She had a fine executive quality and once or twice it had been Sibbie's privilege to sit in at one of these sessions and see her young daughter, pert, slim, alert, and intelligent, conduct the affairs of this cultural organization with manner and precision.

Sometimes the literary society, or the dramatic club of which Lottie was also a member, met in the modest little home where Sibbie took great pains to serve excellent refreshments. There was a girl named Edda May, of wealthy parents, who had come to be a great chum of Lottie's. Sometimes they practiced their dramatics together, while Sibbie held the book and prompted them. Lottie and Edda were bound for the same college. Once, too, Lottie was chosen to play Juliet opposite Lon Brown's Romeo in the school production of that play, and it seemed to Sibbie, sitting there beholding, that no fulfillment could be finer than this vicarious one that was hers. Compared to the joys of beholding in this girl of hers the fruition of her own stunted and blunted desires, the years of struggle, grief and despair, were as naught.

In a way, Sibbie used to argue with herself, it was a blessed dispensation that she had been too silly and ignorant a girl to realize the incalculable advantages of an education. Otherwise, she might never have realized thus keenly how essential were the cultural attributes she desired so passionately in her daughter.

The world was filled with women who had suddenly found themselves in the routine rut of homes, without having had time to equip themselves for life; women without the capacity to desire the better things. Sibbie had been such a woman. The avenues of good reading, of foreign languages, of art were closed to her, because she had never prepared her mind to understand or love them.

There came to be something horrible to Sibbie in the news that this and that young girl of Lottie's acquaintance had married.

Too soon, too soon, was what her heart tolled when things such as these came to her. These young girls, just out of high school, had not time to prepare themselves for the better things; the banquet-things of life's table.

When Lottie was eighteen, she was graduated with honors from her high school.

There were three months between her and the time she was to enter college; months that were heart-hurtling and terrible to Sibbie in many ways, as the time of her separation from this child approached, and yet months that were lit with the flame of fulfillment.

To add to the excitement and the fine quality of her anticipations, Lottie won a traveling scholarship of two months in Europe, on the strength of an essay she wrote for a local newspaper. It came out of a clear sky, because Sibbie had not even known that her daughter had entered the competition. Two months in Europe! Two months among the art galleries, the palaces and the capitals of England, France, Germany and Italy. Why, that in itself was enough to give a girl a running start in a cultural life that was limitless in its possibilities.

More than that, think what it would do to jerk the pretty Lottie, tired from the arduous activities of her graduation, out of the apathy which had come over her of late.

But as a matter of fact, the effect was just the contrary. Like a flower drooping of its own weight, Lottie somehow failed to respond to the incredible good fortune that had befallen her and for some reason, all the old enthusiasm about her entrance into college had flowed out of her, leaving her a wan and listless girl who was puzzling to her mother.

After all, it was impossible to account for a lassitude so deeply rooted as Lottie's, merely by the strenuous activities attending her graduation. Something fundamental was to be reckoned with in Lottie.

It all became startlingly clear, just one week before she was to sail for Europe. She eloped with Lon Brown.

The effect upon her mother, the subsequent happy setting-up of the two young people into a small homestead, and the resultant years of good fortune and tribulation, happiness and heartache, are precisely what would be expected. Sibbie, with the unconquerable resiliency of the human being, recovered from the shock of her disappointment and learned to accept in good faith the really pleasant destiny that had overtaken her daughter. Lon was a good fellow, industrious, ambitious and capable. Their first child was born on Lottie's birthday.

She is six years old now, her name is Sibbie. The nest-egg toward her college education has already been started in the savings bank.

Biblical Perfume Recipe

The first known recipe for a perfume, wrote C. J. S. Thompson in "The Mystery and Lure of Perfume," is that which is given in the book of Exodus, 30:34: "And the Lord said unto Moses, taken unto thee sweet spices, stacte and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense: of each shall he a like weight: and thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered together, pure and holy: and thou shalt beat some of it very small. . . . And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be unto thee holy for the Lord."

MT. LAKE PARK

The Weather

While this winter's mild weather, resulting in a total lack of ice, has not encouraged a serious consideration of providing for winter sports in this community, yet we must remember that this has been an exceptional year, with temepratures away above normal. In normal years we can usually count on a good deal of freezing weather with a good supply of ice resulting.

In this connection, Mrs. Alma Bell, assistant postmaster here, voiced a suggestion, or rather two, that seems sound. First, to making a skating pool, similar to the project in Oakland. This can easily be accomplished, at a minimum cost, by simply excavating a channel down to the proper level, permitting the water to flow from the Little Yough to that part of the glade most suitable for the purpose. A gate could be installed to shut off the flow in the summer time. It would possibly be necessary to scoop out a small amount of dirt to bank up the edges of the pool, but the expense would be comparatively small.

The other suggestion has to do with the building of a landing field for planes. This also could be done without great cost. There are several places here within the Park area suitable for this purpose with enough parking space for automobiles.

Both these suggestions are worthy of consideration.

Hopes Are Being Revived

We are of the opinion that the people of the Park and adjacent communities really ought to feel encouraged over the prospects for the coming summer. After the season closed last summer and until late in the winter, it looked as though Mountain Lake Park would become in reality simply a "whistle stop," with nothing doing to attract visitors. And the continued depression did not add much to the gaiety of the prospects. But along came the Tableland Association and the Extension Service projects and hopes began to revive. At this writing prospects are bright for an almost continuous program from early summer until late in the fall. There appears from time to time in this paper reports showing that progress is being made. In the event that sueeess is attained Rev. Middaugh deserves a very large share of the credit, along with his co-workers, Mr. Leighton and Rev. C. A. Shilke. The commlttee is working early and late to bring about the desired results.

And believe it or not, we heard the song of a robin last Sunday morning. With the thermometer hovering at or near the sixty mark as this is being written, we ean hardly blame the bird for getting his seasons mixed. Jake Echard says that even his lawn needs clipping.

We were rather surprised to see a bunch of spring chickens being shipped from the express office here during the past week. The crates we saw contained birds that would average between two and three pounds and as fat as a butter roll. Upon inquiry we learned that they were being shipped by J. H. Reinhardt, of the Mountain Lake Canning Company. He has an up-to-date poultry plant at Oakland and incubates hundreds of chicks. Broilers ready for market late in January we think deserves a special mention.

Rev. Roland Aspinall, formerly M. E. pastor in the Park, now stationed at Glendale, W. Va., was here a few hours Wednesday enroute to Kingwood, whence he was called by the death of his mother.

Mrs. Warren Rathbun has returned from Pittsburgh after having spent some time in that city with her mother.

Capt. B. L. Hardesty, who has been seriously ill, is able to be out of the house, which is gratifying news to his many friends.

The special meetings which have been In progress at the Baptist church in Loch Lynn, closed on Sunday evening.

A fifteen-pound rutabaga takes its place in the hall of fame along with the three-foot parsnip in Bob Moomaw's truck garden.

A shipment of three car loads of canned peas was made this week from the canning plant here, and three car loads of seed peas were received.

And its darn hard work filling space at this time of year.

FRIENDSVILLE

Mr. Ulrich Gilleland, formerly of Friendsville, now living in Hagerstown, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Friend.

The Ladies' Aid of the M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. H. J. Black last Thursday with the following members in attendance: Mrs. Frantz, Mrs. Nedrow, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Minc ugh, Mrs. Holman, Mrs. Shea, Mrs. Augustine, Rev. Shea. The next regular meeting of the organization will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Friend on March 3.

Rev. Shea conduced the funeral services for Miss Lelia Lint, aged 18, at her late home near Selbysport on Sunday. Interment was made in the Frazee Ridge cemetery.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson and Sheriff Haenftling were here transacting business Saturday.

Miss Roselle Bishoff is again on duty in the high school. Mrs. J. R. Barron substituted as teaeher for her while she was ill.

A committee representing a welfare organization is rendering aid in serving hot lunches in school to undernourished children of miners, etc. The menu for Monday consisted of bread, butter, cocoa and rice. The menu will be changed daily.

A number of people from his community attended the funeral services of Mrs. C. C. Goehringer at Accident on Sunday. Mrs. Goehringer spent her early life in this place, before her marriage being Miss Nellie Savage.

The girls' basketball team of the local high school brought back from Cumberland Friday night another victory to add to their long list. They have won every contest entered this season.

Mr. H. L. Wolf, who suffered a slight stroke of paralysis a short time ago, is slowly improving.

Miss Theresa Wotring has returned to her home in Thomas, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coddington have moved into the residence here formerly owned by Mrs. McKean and which was recently purchased by Mr. Coddington. They formerly lived at Weber's.

Mr. Speelman Elected Mayor

The contest for town officers last Tuesday resulted in the election of Norval Speelman, for mayor, who received 113 votes, a majority of 7 over his opponent. Paul Friend, L. J. Lytle and George Hileman were chosen as members of the town council.

Barn Burned

The barn belonging to William Kisner, near Friendsville, was destroyed by fire about noon on Friday. The structure as well as the contents were a complete loss. There was some insurance.

Band Social

Members of the recently re-organized band are contemplating holding a social in the near future. The date will be announced later.

FARM AND HOME WEEK IS PLANNED FOR MT. LAKE

Four-Day Program of Lectures and Demonstrations Would Be From August 22 to August 26

INCLUDE MUSIC PROGRAM

One of the outstanding developments of the summer program at Mountain Lake Park, according to Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the Mountain Lake Institute, is the plan for a Farm and Home Week, from August 22 to 26. During this four-day program, similar to the type given at the State colleges during February, will be presented.

During this week lecture courses in the growing of farm crops, poultry husbandry, dairy industries, homemaking, music and art will be given each morning, followed by demonstration periods on nearby farms in the afternoons.

Farmers will have the opportunity of hearing leturers from the colleges in their respective subjects and also noted speakers will be furnished by nationally known corporations, Rev. Middaugh stated.

A program of home making, music and art will be planned and directed by Miss Sara B. Huff, music director. The entire program will be planned to especially adapt the best scientific discoveries of the agricultural colleges to the needs of the average farmer.

Pledges Are Short

Addition pledges to the extent of about $1,400 are needed to fully carry out the yearly program, but work on that line has been postponed by the director in order to get the program scheduled as early as possible. Although the pledges already made are not due until May 15, those in charge are asking that those who are financially able at this time, pay them to Rev. Walter B. Brock, treasurer, to help bear the expense.

A number of corporations have offered cooperation to the institute program within the past few weeks, Rev. Middaugh stated, including the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the Blue Ridge Bus lines, the International Harvester Company, the DeLaval Separator Company and others.

Maple Producers' Banquet Attended by Sixty

Approximately 60 were present at the Maple sugar products' banquet held at Mt. Lake Park last evening when those interested in the development of the industry gathered to discuss and hear questions on this matter.

Nat T. Frame, extension director of West Virginia University at Morgantown, spoke on the social and recreational program which had been started at Mt. Lake Park, and stated that the new interpretation of economics included more than the accumulation of wealth.

Others who spoke were Dr. Archibald Moore, of Oakland, J. D. Watson, of Confluence, Pa., president of the Allegheny Tableland association; John H. Carter, county agent; and Fred J. Reed, counay agent for Preston county, W. Va.

Miss Sara B. Huff, music leader, led the singing and showed some song slides. The program for the summer months was outlined by Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of Mt. Lake Institute. Grantsville, Bittinger and other sections of the county were represented and people attended from Morganown, Masontown, Kingwood, W. Va., Confluence, Pa., and other sections of both neighboring states.

The meeting was considered by Rev. Middaugh to be highly successful.

A banquet of the potato growers of the area is being planned for early in April.

Milk Producers To Meet

At the request of a large number of milk producers, there will be a meeting for all dairymen at Pleasant Valley Grange Hall on Tuesday, February 23, at 7:30 p. m. Production and marketing of milk will be the chief subject to be discussed, with emphasis on the marketing question, according to John H. Carter, County Agent.

Wind Turns Porch Around

What might be termed a freak windstorm took place at Freeport last Thursday afternoon, when from a row of houses in the town the wind picked the porch of one of those in the center, whirled it completely around and again placed it against the house. No other damage was reported.

TREE PLANTING CEREMONY TO BE HELD FEBRUARY 22

Civic Club to Set American Elm Near Washington Spring

At a called meeting of the Oakland Civic Club Monday afternoon at the home of Miss Lottie Loar, president of the organization, it was decided that the members of the club would plant an American Elm in Washington Spring Park at a spot near the spring at which George Washington is said to have stopped and refreshed himself in his travels through Garrett county.

The Civic Club has to its credit the planting of over 2,700 trees which have been placed in the Park and at Herrington Manor, the State forest, but this tree will be planted with a special program at three o'clock on Monday, February 22, in commemoration of the birthday of George Washington.

This tree and the history of its planting will be registered with the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission in Washington, D. C., and later on an appropriate marker will be placed at its base. The members of the Civic Club are anxious that everyone interested make an effort to be present at the exercisc.

The regular monthly meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. B. Brock on Alder street.

LEGION TO HONOR GEORGE WASHINGTON AT THEATRE

Memorial Service Arranged for Sunday Afternoon at Maryland

A memorial service in commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, will be held in the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Sunday afternoon, February 21, at 2:00 o'clock. The service is being sponsored by Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion.

This service will be a part of the celebrations to continue throughout the year, in keeping with the motive expressed by Congress, "That future generations of American citizens may live according to the example and precepts of his exalted life and character and thus perpetuate the American Republic."

Citizens from all over the county are urged to attend this meeting. All ex-service men are requested to meet at Legion headquarters at 1:45 p. m. to join in the processional to the theatre. The parade will be made up of the band, Legion drum corps, boys' drum corps, ex-service men and the Legion auxiliary.

There will be a five-minute talk by former State Commander George Henderson, of Cumberland on "Our Country," and an address, "Washington with Braddock at Fort Necessity," by Prof. Charles H. Ambler, professor of history, West Virginia University, Morgantown.

Mrs. Gordon Mealy will sing a solo and there will be patriotic numbers by the band, a one-minute silence for the deceased comrades of the Legionnaires and "taps" by trumpeters.

The program will conclude with the Star Spangled Banner.

CASSELMAN AND PEERLESS LEAD SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

Tie for First Place in One-Teacher Schools With 99.3 Percent

Casselman and Peerless, with 99.3 percent, led the one-teacher schools of the county in attendance for January, 1932, according to a bulletin just issued from the office of the Board of Education. Bloomington, with 98.1 percent, led the two-teacher schools; Kempton led the graded schools with 96.8, while Kitzmiller, with 94.8, led the high schools.

One-teacher schools making 97 per cent or better, included Casselman, 99.3; Peerless, 99.3; Bowser, 99.2; Dorscy, 99.2; Pleasant Valley, 98.5; Mason, 98.2; Corunna, 98.1; Sand Spring, 97.1; Bond, 97.9; Fairview, 97. Twenty-two of the 74 one-teacher schools were below the county standard of 93 percent.

In the two-teacher schools those above the county standard of 94 were Bloomington, 98.1; Swanton, 96.8; Strawberry Hill, 99.3; Jennings, 96.5; Loch Lynn, 96.3. Graded schools above the county standard of 94 were Kempton, Kitzmiller, Accident, Crellin, Shallmar, respectively.

None of the six high schools of the county were above the county standard of 95 percent.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD ON MARCH 14TH

To Ballot For Mayor, Three Members of City Council and For Town Treasurer

TO HOLD MEETING SOON

One person to be Mayor of Oakland, three persons to be members of the City Council and one person to be City Treasurer, will be voted upon at the annual municipal election to be held this year on Monday, March 14, when the polls will be open in the City Council chamber on Third street.

The mayor and members of council will be chosen for terms of two years and the treasurer for one year. The retiring members of the council will be R. C. McComas, Ralph Thayer and H. P. Stuck. Grover C. Stemple is the retiring mayor, and Miss Frances Hamill, who was elected last year without opposition, is the retiring treasurer. Mr. Stuck was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Jesse J. Ashby, who resigned following his election to the position of County Treasurer.

Thus far there have been no open candidates, but it is understood that Mayor Grover Stemple will be a candidate for reelction, and that some of the retiring councilmen will aspire for another term.

The hold-over members of the council are George Kerins, J. W. Whorton and Cheston H. Browning, they having been elected last year for terms of two years each.

A public meeting will probably be arranged in the near future when candidates will be selected and their names placed on the ticket.

KNIGHTS COMPLETE PLANS FOR ANNIVERSARY NIGHT

To Celebrate Founding of Order and of Local Lodge Friday

Final arrangements have been made for the celebration of the forty-second anniversary of the founding of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, of Oakland, and the sixty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the order, which will take place in Castle Hall, Oakland, on Friday evening, February 19.

Invitations have been sent to the approximately 350 members of the lodge, and a large attendance is anticipated, and this night has also been set aside as Ladies' Night.

In order that all details may be taken care of a number of committees have been appointed including entertainment committee, Wade H. Hinebaugh, William Gibson, Grover C. Stemple; refreshment committee, Earl Shartzer, George Fulk, Luke Harvey; arrangements, Milburn W. Mann, Edward P. Kahl, Singleton Townshend, A. W. Kahl and Olin Hardesty, reception, Henry Lauer, Lawrence Fraley and Grover Stemple.

A. Elwood Martak, Baltimore, grand keeper of records and seal; Nelson W. Russler, Cumberland, supreme representative; and A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, grand master-at-arms, have accepted invitations to be present and take part in the program.

A short lodge session will be held at 7:30 promptly and the program will begin at 8 o'clock. The program will consist of instrumental numbers, singing, talks and refreshments.

The Knights of Pythias lodge was founded in Washington, D. C., February 19, 1864. The order is purely American and is the first fraternal society to be chartered by the Congress of the United States, and its jurisdiction is confined to the North American continent.

Two Injured in Truck Crash Near Frostburg

James Burdock, aged 50, a farmer of Garrett county, residing near Finzel, and R. L. Leonard, of Uniontown, Pa., were injured Sunday evening when the truck in which they were riding got out of control while descending Big Savage Mountain, just west of Frostburg, and crashed into a number of guard posts at Sand Spring.

Both of the injured men were taken to the Miners' Hospital at Frostburg where they received treatment. Leonard was dismissed after his cuts and bruises were dressed, but Burdock, who was painfully hurt, remained at the institution pending an examination of his injuries, which were considered serious.

DEATH OVERTAKES WOMAN IN PHYSICIAN'S OFFICE

Mrs. John I. O'Brien Succumbs Following Sudden Attack

While seated in the reception room adjoining the office of Dr. Henry W. McComas and following an examination by the physician and the prescribing of medicine to relieve an ailment with which Mrs. O'Brien had been suffering for several weeks, she suffered a cerebral embolism and died almost instantly. Mrs. O'Brien was aged 65 years and eight days.

Funeral services were conducted yesterday afternoon from the North Glade M. E. church, Rev. J. B. Rupert, of Corinth, officiating. Interment was made in North Glade cemetery.

Besides her husband, Mrs. O'Brien is survived by three children: Mrs. Iva Sisk, of Loch Lynn, and Anna May and Joseph H., at home; also by six sisters and two brothers: Mrs. Anna Junkins, Elk Garden, W. Va.; Mrs. Martha Junkins, Emoryville, W. Va.; Mrs. Stella Paugh, Mrs. Ada Fitzwater and Mrs. Elsie Beckman, Swanton; Mrs. Etta Brenneman, Bittinger; Josephus Howell, Swanton, and John Howell, Barnum, W. Va.

BICENTENNIAL SONG WILL BE HEARD THRUOUT LAND

Song Writer Donates Piece as Contribution to Celebration of Washington's Birthday

COPY IN TODAY'S PAPER

Among the great contributions to the Bicentennial Celebration of George Washington's birth, one of the most outstanding is the song, "Father of the Land we Love," written especially for the occasion by George M. Cohan, composer, theatrical producer and musical comedy star.

The new song, a tribute to the first President, will be played and sung throughout the nation during the celebration. Music critics have already approved it as one of Mr. Cohan's finest efforts, and it is expected to be one of his most popular.

This patriotic ballad was written for the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission and in presenting the song, Mr. Cohan said:

"This new song was written for the American people, and I have donated it to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission as my contribution to the two hundredth anniversary of his birth."

One million copies of the song are being distributed throughout the United States by the Commission both in song and orchestration form.

The song with music appears in The Republican today, page two.

Deluge of Valentines Covers Oakland on February 14

The colorful, sanguine deluge of hearts covered Oakland for the celebration of St. Valentine's day carrying the yearly plea of "Won't You Be My Valentine?"

There were many more sent out this year than in 1931, according to Miss Frances Hamill, of the Hamill book store. "Even the comic valentines seemed more popular than in previous years and disappeared in large quantities," Miss Hamill said.

This practice of carrying love messages is an old custom that has always had romantic significance. In olden days the young man and young woman chose their valentine and in England, from which country we get our observance of the custom, they exchanged gifts also. With the present or gift went a verse and later just the verse of poetry was sent.

One English writer has expressed the regret that the practice of sending valentines has decreased, saying that the telephone is the chief cause. But even with that competition the romantic valentine has still held favor.

Mid-Week Services Held

The second of the series of mid-week union Lenten services was held in Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church last evening when Rev. J. W. Dawson of the M. E. church gave the address on Peter, one of the personalities around the Cross.

The triple-trio, directed by Dr. J. G. Robinson, sang two special numbers. The third of the series will be held next Wednesday evening in St. Mark's Lutheran church at 7:30 when Rev. W. B. Brock will preach the sermon on "Pilate".

FOUR MEMBERS OF LOCAL FIRE COMPANY HURT WHEN APPARATUS OVERTURNS ON MOUNTAIN LAKE ROAD

Robert L. Wolfe Most Seriously Injured and Is Now in Allegany Hospital, Cumberland, In Critical Condition; Farm Dwelling Burns Because of Unavoidable Delay of Fire Equipment Because of Wreck.

Robert L. Wolfe, volunteer fireman of the Oakland Department, was injured seriously yesterday afternoon when in answering a fire alarm calling the department to a farm house east of Loch Lynn Heights, the truck upon which Wolfe and eleven other members of the crew were riding, skidded on a curve on the Mountain Lake road and turned over, pinning him beneath it.

Three other firemen, Howard P. Stuck, Wilbur Davis and Ralph T. Thayer, sustained severe cuts and bruises, while the remaining eight men were badly shaken.

Wolfe, who is 42 years old, and a barber by trade, suffered a fractured right leg and arm, severe injuries about his head and face and multiple lacerations and bruises on all parts of his body. He was given first aid by Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh and was then taken to Allegany Hospital, Cumberland, by Lawrence Dixon where he is now under the care of Dr. W. A. Gracie and where he is resting as comfortably as conditions will permit is the message from that institution this morning. Mr. Dixon and the injured fireman were accompanied to Cumberland by W. R. Browning and James F. Hart.

A second fire truck continued to the scene of the blaze, the home of Vernon Conner, about a mile and a half east of Loch Lynn and near the Gorman road. The house was completely destroyed, the only things saved from the blaze being a few pieces of furniture which were on the lower floor of the structure. The fire started in the attic of the house and had the apparatus been at the scene a few minutes sooner spectators said the building could have been saved, but on account of the wrecking of the front truck and the consequent blocking of the road, the delay could not be avoided.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson, driver of the truck, said he pulled to the side of the road to avoid a car which had turned around in the road at the East End Service station after the fire apparatus had come into sight, and being confused as to what the driver of the car might do, Mr. Dawson atempted to give him a large portion of the road. After pulling to the side of the road, Mr. Dawson stated he was unable to keep the machine in the road when the back of the truck started to weave.

At the first turn east of the service station the fire truck climbed the bank of soft earth and then headed across the road, turning on its side and throwing the occupants in all directions. Unfortuately Wolfe was riding the running-board and when the apparatus toppled it caught his leg beneath it.

A check-up this morning made by Fire Chief George Kerins showed that both fenders of the truck and the suction hose rack were smashed, otherwise the machine was apparently not damaged. It was estimated that repairs could be made for not more than $200.

Those on the truck when it turned over were A. T. Shaw, Ralph Thayer, Lawrence M. Fraley, Wilbur Davis, James Lewis, William Gauer, Robert Wolfe, Grover Stemple, Howard P. Stuck, James F. Hart, Ernest Townshend, Jr., and Walter W. Dawson.

Immediately following the unfortunate accident a large crowd collected and righted the truck, extracting Wolfe who was pinned to the roadway. After being given first aid treatment he was taken to Cumberland.

Stuck, Thayer and Davis were also given first aid. Mr. Stuck received cuts on both knees; Wilbur Davis was cut on the hands and face and Mr. Thayer had a badly wrenched shoulder in addition to cuts and bruises. All were taken to their homes in Oakland.

Boys' Band to Broadcast From Pittsburgh and Fairmont

That the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band would broadcast over stations KDKA, Pittsburgh, and station WMMN, Fairmont, was announced by Mayor G. C. Stemple, who recently received a favorable reply following some correspondence on the subject.

The band will broadcast from the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, on Sunday, March 6, from 3:00 until 3:30 p. m., and from the Fairmont studio on Sunday, February 28, from 12 until 1:00 o'clock p. m.

Russell H. Brown will direct. The trips will be made in private cars.

RELIEF COMMITTEES CALL FOR DONATIONS AND HELP

160 Families or 800 Citizens Being Cared for at Present

The Relief Committee is making an urgent appeal to every citizen of Garrett county for aid. At the present time 180 families are being cared for. This represents approximately 800 individuals.

The committee deeply appreciates the aid already given, but urges that every citizen stop and realize that the winter is only half over and these people must be fed until some kind of work can be provided. Most of the men whose families are represented here will work if it is available. Many of them are working at odd jobs provided by the local committees. In return for this work they are given food and clothing. In order that this food and clothing may be given, the local committee must have donations. Even though you only have a peck of potatoes, give it to your local committee. In order for this relief work to continue, all must give regularly for the next two or three months.

Garrett county is fifteenth in population, first in area and last in density of population, hence it is extremely difficult to investigate each family, but your local committee has given freely of their time for this purpose.

Each and every family over the county which has been aided has been investigated by your local committeeman and relief has been given only if in his opinion they are worthy. In some instances it has been necessary to limit the relief to only the children of the family. This has been done by providing clothing and feeding them at school.

Through funds available from an outside source, your Central Committee is now giving hot lunches to 300 school children. This fund, unfortunately, is limited to the children. Through this same fund 84 pre-school children, nursing mothers, expectant mothers and tuberculosis cases are receiving milk each day. These cases are also investigated to determine whether or not they are worthy of aid.

Any contributions should be given to your local committeeman, listed below:

Harry Edwards, Grantsville; J. W. Friend, Friendsville; B. O. Aiken, Accident; John A. Shore, Kitzmiller; Asa Lewis, Kempton; Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Oakland; Wm. Pendergast, Crellin; H. V. Leighton, Mountain Lake Park; Mrs. E. E. Sollars, Deer Park; Mrs. George Warnick, Bloomington.

Charles A. Ashby In Hospital

Mr. Charles A. Ashby, Deer Park, was taken to Memorial Hospital, in Cumberland, yesterday afternoon by Dr. N. I. Broadwater where Mr. Ashby submitted to an operation for acute appendicitis upon arrival there, the operation being performed by Dr. A. H. Hawkins. Mr. Ashby's condition this morning is satisfactory and a speedy recovery is anticipated.

Seed Loan Collector Here Friday, February 12

J. A. Latimer, government field agent in charge of collecting farm seed loans, was in Garrett county on Friday, February 12.

These loans were due on October 1, but owing to unusual conditions the Government has been willing to cooperate with those who have made an attempt to pay their loans. There were 48 loans made in the county and all but four or five have made an effort to pay, several having paid the money secured in full.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 21

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:1-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Our Good Shepherd.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Our Good Shepherd.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Following the Good Shepherd.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus the Good Shepherd.

The occasion for the parable of the Good Shepherd was the excommualcatloa by the Pharisees of the blind man who had beea healed by Christ.

I. The Good Shepherd (vv. 1-18).

1. Jesus is the true shepherd (vv. 1-6). He came by the divinely appointed way. John the Baptist aad others of the prophets had performed the function of the porter aad opeaed the door to the sheepfold (vv. 2, 3). The power exercised by the Pharisees in casting out this maa was aot obtained by lawful means. It was stolea by them aad exercised ia the bold spirit of robbers. The reasoa the man suffered excommualcatioa was that he recognized Jesus as the true shepherd and turned from the Pharisees, not only as strangers, but as thieves and robbers. Despite the deceit, audacity, theft, and robbery of these Pharisees, those who were Christ's sheep were declared to be forming a new flock aad following him as the true shepherd (v. 4).

2. Jesus is the door of the sheep (vv. 7-10). The way to fellowship with God is through Christ. He is not only a door, but the only door (Acts 4:12). There is absolutely no way into the fold of the redeemed but by and through him. All who attempt to gain access to God except through Jesus Christ are thieves and robbers (v. 8.) Those who become members of the flock of God through Jesus Christ enjoy marvelous privileges and gifts (vv. 9, 10).

a. Salvatioa—"shall be saved" (v. 9). They aot oaly enjoyed present salvation, but are eternally saved (vv. 27, 28).

b. Liberty—"shall go in and out" (v. 9). Only those who accept salvation ia Christ kaow what freedom is.

c. Conteatment—"shall go in aad out aad find pasture" (v. 9.) The one who really enters the fold by Christ, the door, receives that which is all-satisfying to the soul.

3. Jesus is the good shepherd (vv. 11-18).

a. He giveth his life for the sheep (vv. 11-13). The hireling abaadoas his sheep in time of daager. The hireling, represented by the Pharisee, takes up his work and coatinues it for his owa sake, for the profit that is in it. Jesus was so devoted to his sheep that he willingly laid down his life for them.

b. He has perfect knowledge of his sheep and they know him (vv. 14, 15). Kaowing his sheep so well, he looks after their welfare. He eajoys such personal intimacy with his sheep that he knows them by name, goes before them to lead the way and defead them from every danger.

c. His sympathy is world-wide (v. 16). He declared, "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold." This suggests that the Gentiles have a place ia his fold.

d. He eajoys the love of the heavenly Father (vv. 17, 18).

II. The Sheep (vv. 19-30).

1. Unbelievers are not Christ's sheep (vv. 19-26). Christ's assertion that he was the good shepherd caused a division amoag the people. Some accused him of being mad, others that he had a devil. To their request that he would tell them plainly if he were the Christ, he responded by referring them to the testimony of his works, declaring that the secret of their inability to recognize him was their unbelief.

2. His sheep recognize his voice (v. 27.) There are many voices in the world: the voice of the hireling, the voice of the thief, and the voice of the straager; but none of these will the sheep hear. The voice of the true shepherd is recognized by his sheep even amidst the babble of voices in the world today.

3. He knows his sheep (v. 27). Regardless of how helpless aad ignorant the sheep may be, he knows every one aad he looks after them.

4. His sheep follow him (v. 27). This is the proof that they are his. The true sheep will flee from strangers (v. 5). This should he a solemn warning to all such as are following strangers.

5. His sheep are eternally secure (vv. 28, 29). The sheep are entirely dependent upon the shepherd. It is the shepherd's business to look after aad care for the sheep.

TWENTY-FIVE MARRIAGES PERFORMED DURING WEEK

February Total Thus Far Is 47; Five Marked "Don't Publish."

Twenty-five marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland, thus bringing the total for the month of February thus far to 47. There were 89 licenses issued during February, 1931.

Saturday of the past week did not seem as popular as other days, even though St. Valentine's day followed it. There were only five licenses issued on Saturday, while seven were issued on Monday, the 15th, and six on Tuesday, the 9th. Five permits issued were marked "don't publish," while three applicants were refused licenses.

FRIENDSVILLE

Band Box Social

The box social, which was held by members of the local band last Saturday evening, was considered quite a success notwithstanding the short notice given the affair. The net proceeds amounted to a little more than forty dollars.

The recently elected Mayor and members of the town council were serenaded at the home of Mayor Speelman last Monday evening, who gave the band a financial donation.

Prof. W. J. Glenn and family have removed from the D. A. Friend property to the house of August Neil on Main street, Charles Guthrie and family moving into the house vacated by Mr. Glenn and family.

Mr. O. C. Friend, who suffered a stroke of paralysis a few weeks ago, is still confined to his bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shields, Washington, D. C., are visiting Mrs. Shields' parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Fox. Mr. Shields is suffering with an injured hand.

Mrs. Mabel Rumbaugh entertained her Sunday school class at her home with a party on last Thursday evening.

The class in nursing met at the home of Mrs. William Dunham on February 9th. Those present were Mrs. J. E. Statler, Mrs. A. F. Neil, Mrs. L. L. Friend, Mrs. Effie Chisholm, Mrs. J. W. Holman, Mrs. F. C. McCullough. The subject taken up and demonstrated was bed-making. The next meeting will be held on February 23 and the subject will be bathing a patient in bed. All women, whether members or not, are invited

The P.-T. Association met in the high school auditorium on February 9th when the following program was rendered, which was entertaingly given: Playlet, Colonial games, by the first and second grade children; piano selection, Helen Savage; address, Washington and Lincoln, Mr. W. SCOOP'S COLUMN

Our pet Russian is In town again. Lizzie Tish, the girl in the front office, and I, see him every once in awhile and he looks like a regular Vodka Orinski. Put him alongside the Volga boatman and you couldn't tell them apart, that is, if the Volga boatman has whiskers. And that isn't all we see from our front window. Can't we make you window conscious?

The Bachelor's Defense Club's security was seriously threatened when the president of the organization invited a friend to the Lutheran Brotherhood supper last Thursday evening.

And then Jim Kerins was also among those present. Somebody tried to get Jim into trouble. He ate his supper with delight and when he arose from the table somebody called his attention to the fact that his coat pockets were bulging and from them there was extracted several pieces of silverware, some salt shakers, a quantity of rolls, etc. It's a good thing Jim had a friend present because it is probable he would have been searched by Alvie Martin, the ticket taker, before he was permitted to pass out.

When Officer Currie stopped Bill Browning along the highway last week-end, Bill thought of all the violations of the automobile laws he had ever committed, and wondered what chance he had of keeping out of a visit to the magistrate's office, but after excusing himself Officer Currie only wanted to know if Bill had an application blank for the Bachelor's Club. It seems the Corporal wants to join too.

Now Has It In Sling

From the Cumberland Daily News last Friday: "Duane Bittinger, 8, had his left EAR fractured when he fell over a dog chain."

And from the Democrat: "Mrs. McClelland, wife of former pastor here, was renewing acquaintances made here during her husband's PASTORAGE."

Fan Mail Heavy

My fan mail was actually heavy this week, letters coming from Kingwood, Crellin, Gainesville, Florida, and other points. Until the time I received them I was quite discouraged, feeling that nobody was interested in reading the column any more. Since getting all this mail I am still discouraged, because after reading the letters I feel that the writers could do a much better job than I. Anyhow, you can judge for yourself:

From Crellin

Dear Scoop:—I borrow my neighbor's Republican every week for the sole purpose of reading your column. Meant to send my subscription with this, but lacked $1.49, so will send you one of my home made ones. Be sure the "he" is someone you can whip, and the "she" someone other than your wife.

He: Are you really a very, very good girl?

She: Sir, make no mistake; I am.

He: Do you believe in and practice the Golden Rule?

She: I do, and I always try to.

He: Do you suppose I could practice it and get by?

She: Get by? Just try it. Make the start, and see how much brighter life becomes.

He: All right; I start now. Here goes: S-M-A-C-K!

(Signed) POET PENDING.

From Kingwood.

Dear Scoop: I agree with you; your corner is good. Now don't get swell head—hats cost money. If you could have seen the Legion play, College Flappers, here last week, you could fill the whole space of Scoop talking about it.

Men such as George A. Herring, Foster Hartman, Bob Hardesty, Ben Brady and a lot of other "big" men were dressed in their wives' or some other man's wife's clothes.

But what seems strange, they looked better in dresses than in—I started to say trousers, but I'll say sults, for they would persist in showing their pretty pink—oh, what's this coming to? I'd best close, but I needn't worry; you don't know me, even if I do know you. so I'll not take your dare. My name is M. G. (She signed it, too).

P. S.—For heaven's sake, don't publish this.

And From Florida

Dear Scoop: Just a line from the Sunny South to show you how widespread your influence is. I am going to take your dare and write you a letter with my name signed. You see, I'm a brave man, a good man, in fact, all the way 'round with only two dark spots in my life: One is that I subscribe to The Republican and the other that I read your column. (I call it a "column", because a column is a thing for support, and I understand that the paper would fall without your support).

I am of the opinion that you merit an immortal place along with Shakespeare and the Wickersham Committee for your modern "Much Ado About Nothing." Aside from that your column isn't any good nohow, but I read it to relax my mind, so that when our paper was late last week (see the Boss Editor about that, won't you?) I was inspired to the following panegyric. If it is imperfect in rhyme and meter, consider the subject and forgive:

I sit alone by the fireside,
It's ninety-nine in the shade,
And fluffy white flakes of snow fall
Into my lemonade.

It seems that all has gone wrong,
And going, comes my way—
I guess it's because our paper
From home came not today.

I can't smile a smile; be happy,
Or sing poop-poop-a-doop,
'Cause my day's been torn and ruined;
I missed my copy of Scoop.

And if it's not here tomorrow
Just lay me on the shelf,
'Cause life is not worth living
Sans Scoop by Scoop, himself.

And scoops of what I'll leave to your imagination.

His FRANK * RATHBUN.
Mark

(Not F. E. "Restless feet" Rathbun, of the School Board.)

The first person I showed this to didn't know what "sans" was in the last line, so just to show you I know French, it means "without."

Getting up this week's column was a softie. Send in some more letters and see if I care.

BITTINGER

There is an old shop down on Indolent Street
That's kept by Big Lazy Luck,
And there isn't a thing that is decent or sweet
In his jumble of mythical muck.

But there is a place up on Center and Main
That is managed by plain Peter Pluck—
He keeps everything that is solid and sane;
There you'll get a square deal for your "buck."

Rev. Charles A. Shilke, of the Oakland Lutheran church, conducted services in the Lutheran church in this village last Sunday afternoon and will again supply the same pulplt two weeks later.

Mrs. Shilke and son accompanied Rev. Shilke to Bittinger last Sunday afternoon.

Charles J. Sechler, of St. Paul, Pa., was a caller in this village one day last week.

Howard Metz, of New Germany, was greeting his friends here on last Tuesday evening.

Clarence Glotfelty, of near Addison, Pa., was in this community for a brief time last Friday afternoon.

Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville, is attending Merchant C. E. Ellithorp, who is quite ill at his home here.

Messrs. Edward and Harry Swauger, of Jennings, were among last week's out-of-town callers.

Gideon Gnagey, of the National Hotel, Grantsville, was a very pleasant caller here last Friday afternoon.

The local Women's Missionary Society held its regular meeting at the Lutheran parsonage last Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Lucille Glotfelty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Glotfelty, of near Bittinger, is quite ill at her home, and is under the care of Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, of Accident.

Merchant Arthur Resh, of Casselman, was in Bittinger one day last week.

O. C. Buckle made a business trip to Oakland on Thursday of last week.

C. R. Broadwater motored to Grantsville on business last Saturday morning.

Owners of maple sugar camps in this community began operations last week, but not much water was gathered and the outlook is not promising for a crop of sweets this year, according to current reports.

Roy Kinsinger, the genial plumber of Grantsville, was doing some work in his line in this village last Saturday afternoon.

Arthur Bowser made a business trip to Salisbury, Pa., one day last week.

Mrs. Gustavus Stanton left her home here last Saturday afternoon for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Howard Resh, at Akron, Ohio.

FAIRVIEW

Farmers in this community are taking advantage of this fine weather by doing some plowing.

Howard Cosner and family visited at the home of A. G. Cullers on Sunday.

Misses Nellie and Ruby Harvey and Malinda Smith, of Bayard, and Hugh Harvey, of Vindex, visited at the home of Miss Mary Harvey on Sunday.

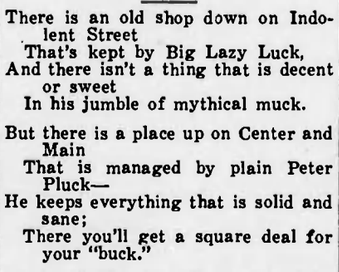
Herbert Ritchie went to Pittsburgh Monday where he will learn the barbering business.

Charles Smith was visiting his father, D. J. Smith, at Bayard, Saturday evening.

Earl and I. G. Harvey were guests at Mr. H. F. Nine's Saturday night.

Elmer Nine and Misses Gladys and Elsie Nine visited at the home of Mrs. E. L. Ritchie on Sunday.

Your Service Must Go On



A STORM strikes during the night . . . possibly overtaxed wires are broken by sleet . . . poles blown over . . . YOU sleep on, with never a thought of your electric service. It will be there in the morning for your lights, to make your coffee, to clean your house.

Even while you sleep, our service, and those responsible for maintaining it, are at work all night insuring that electricity's every convenience will be available to you during all your waking hours.

At the snap of a switch, electricity performs a thousand and one tasks, making life easier and fuller—leaving you free to do the things you want to do.

STILL WORSE THAN WAR!—

About a year ago the fact that more persons were killed in automobile accidents during an 18-month period than were killed in the A. E. F. in the World War, was extensively commented upon. Now, according to a booklet issued by the Travelers Insurance Company, automobile accidnts are still worse than war. During 18 months of the World War, 50,510 American soldiers were killed in action or died of wounds, and 182,674 were wounded, not mortally. In the 18 months ending December 31, 1931, 53,650 people were killed in automobile accidents and 1,576,840 were injured.

The Travelers' booklet emphasizes some information that every motorist and pedestrian should know. During 1931 deaths increased 3.3 per cent over 1930, in spite of a reduction in the total number of accidents. Severe injuries likewise increased, despite a reduction in the total number of persons injured. This apparent contradiction is laid to the increasing speed with which we drive. Cutting in, violation of the right-of-way laws, driving on the wrong side of the road, skidding and driving off the roadway were likewise responsible for many deaths.

More than 42 per cent of deaths were caused when a car struck a pedestrian. Collisions with fixed objects accounted for 12.1 per cent and collision with other cars, 24.9 per cent. In the case of injuries, 53.1 per cent occurred when cars struck each other, and 29.8 per cent when they struck pedestrians.

These facts are of immense value to the thoughful motorist. They show the primary causes of accidents, and, consequently, suggest means of eliminating them. Drastic steps must be taken if we are to lower the horrible and steadily increasing toll of traffic deaths and injuries.

IS PEACE TOO EXPENSIVE?

The longer one thinks about it, the more one becomes aware of the fact that there is a good deal more to establishment of international peace than the signing of peace treaties or even the will to co-operate. In his autoblography, Lincoln Steffens tells the story of the peace conference after the World War. He depicts Clemenceau of France challenging the other delegates as follows:

"We can make this a permanent peace; we can remove all the causes of war and set up no new causes of war. We have now the opportunity to make a peace that shall last forever. We must give up our empires, and all hope of empire. You, Mr. Lloyd George, you English will have to come out of India, for example; we French shall have to come out of North Africa; and you Americans, Mr. President, you must get out of the Philippines and Porto Rico and leave Cuba alone and—Mexico.

"Oh, we can all go to them and other countries, but as tourists, traders, travelers; we cannot any more govern them or exploit or have the inside track of them. We cannot possess the keys to trade routes and sphere of influence. And, yes, we shall have to tear down our tariff walls and open the whole world to free trade and traffic. Those are some of the costs of permanent peace; they are the sacrifices we, the dominant powers, would have to make. It is very expensive, peace!"

The price was more, apparently, than that famous gathering cared to pay. It is more than the nations are willing to pay even now, with the diseases of world-wide economic depression and the threat of war pulling them down. They want health—peace—but they want the doctor to prescribe a simple medicine for it. When he says cut down on swetstuffs, take more exercise every day, get to bed earlier at night, the patients turn away in disgust. They can't take the trouble. It would cost too much in thought and self-control and self-denial to carry out that program.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A snow storm which lasted thirty-six hours was the most severe that had visited Oakland and Garrett county since the great snow storm of January, 1886. During the heavy snow fall the wind blew a gale and the thermometer was below zero. The snow was drifted so that the county roads in many places were impassable.

A branch of the Epworth League with forty-eight members was organized in St. Paul's M. E. church with F. A. Thayer, president; Arthur Townshend, A. D. Naylor and Chas. S. Davis, vice-president; Miss Mollie R. Peddicord, secretary, and Miss Kate C. Spedden, treasurer.

The local Lutherans decided to erect a new church at the corner of Third and Alder streets, the frame structure to cost not less than $4,000. Rev. Wm. L. Leicher was pastor.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

By the terms of the last will and testament of the late Mrs. Sarah A. Broadwater, Grantsville, the Lutheran church of her native town was benefitted to the extent of $1,500, the fund to be used toward the building of a new church.

Allen Butler, fireman at the Crellin mill, was painfully scalded when a steam pipe in the boiler house burst.

Neil C. Fraley, employed in The Republican office, beame a law student in the office of A. T. Matthews.

An Interesting Fact

THE FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES:
JOHN HANSON

The supreme question that arose as a result of the success of the Colonists in the Revolutionary War was whether a republic of united states should be formed or whether thirteen independent states should exist in America.

On this issue, Maryland, through her representatives, John Hanson and Daniel Carroll, took a decided stand, and refused to ratify the Articles of Confederation until the other Colonies agreed to surrender their claims to the Great Northwest Territory (out of which the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio were carved) and that vast domain placed under the dominion and control of the then forming Federal Government.

The issue involved was momentous and came dangerously near wrecking the formation of the American Union. But even so, and in the face of information received by the Congress that France, an ally of America in her war against Britain, looked with disfavor on any division upon the question involved, John Hanson refused to yield his position until pledges had been secured from many members of Congress that the question in issue would be settled to the satisfactinn of Maryland. As is well known, this was subseqently done.

History agrees that it was the leadership of John Hanson that divorced the Colonies from the Northwest Territory and thus made secure the perpetual union of the states.

Hanson took his rightful place among the nation builders.

In recognition of his leadership and of his valuable services to the Union in many ways, the Continental Congress, on November 5, 1781, elected him the first President of the "United States of America in Congress assembled"—that is, the first President under the Articles of Confederation.

Subsequently on the 6th of April, 1789, the Congress of the United States counted the votes cast by the electors of the several states, as provided by the new Constitution, and declared George Washington duly elected President of the United States.

IF DOLLARS ARE SCARCE, DON'T CUT DOWN ON MILK

State Health Director Suggests Division for Food Dollar

"When dollars are scarce, as they are with most people at present, and every penny has to be used to advantage, cut down on other things, but don't cut down on milk, in planning your expenditures for food," is the advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, to mothers of young children and to housekeepers in general.

"Remember," Dr. Riley said, "that milk is the one indispensable food for young and old, in fact for all ages. This does not mean that it contains all essential food clements. Tt have a diet that contains all elements necessary for growth, energy, maintenance and repair of body tissues and structure, other foods have to be used as well as milk. But by itself, milk contains more of the necessary food clements than any other single article of diet. Accordingly, it is good economy to spend a large share of the dail allowance for food, on milk.

"The reason health officers advise the use of generous quantities of milk in the diet, is because milk is what is known as 'protective' food. More than any other article of diet, milk helps to build resistance against disease. It is an absolute necessity in the diet of young children because it supplies in easily digestible form every element the growing child needs—lime for the bones and teeth, carbohydrates and fat for bodily warmth and energy, body building material for building and repairing the child's flesh and muscles, and also because it contains certain vitamens—those substances which have a growth promoting or protecting effect upon the whole system.

"A diet that is adequate for all the needs of the body must inelude in addition to milk, certain vegetables and fruits which also belong to the 'protective' class and which supply in addition to other essential elements certain necessary mineral salts; energy producing foods such as breads, cererals, sugars and fats; body building foods—such as cereals, beans, peas, eggs, cheese, meat or fish.

"Every growing child should have a quart of milk a day, and the adult a pint or more daily, supplemented by the necessary quantities of the other essential foods. If it is not possible to buy the full amount of milk, at least one pint of milk should be provided for each child and at least half a pint daily for each adult.

"Nutrition workers who have made a special study of food values, advise the following division of every dollar spent for food:

"One-fourth, 25 cents, for milk, either fresh, unskimmed or evaporated; condensed milk will not answer the purpose. One-fifth, 20 cents, for vegetables, such as canned tomatoes, cabbage, potatoes, greens or other vegetables or fruits; one-fifth, 20 cents, for cereals—oatmeal, wheat cereal, corn meal, flour, rice or macaroni, bread, dried beans or peas; one-fifth, 20 cents, for fats and sugars—lard, salt pork, butter, margarine, vegetable oil, cane molasses, sorgo syrups, sugar, corn syrup; the rest, 15 cents, for other foods—eggs, meat, fish, cheese, salt, baking powder, tea, coffee, cocoa."

LONACONING TRIMS A. A. IN OVER-TIME STRUGGLE

Failure of Oakland to Make Foul Shot Causes Downfall

Inability of the Oakland Independent basketball team to make good its foul shots caused defeat on Tuesday night at the hands of the Goodwill Firemen of Lonaconing in an extra period battle at the Oakland High gym, 34 to 30. Lonaconing made 6 out of 9 throws, while the best Oakland could gather was 2 out of 12. Each team made 14 double deckers.

The affair was nip and tuck thruout, the score at the end of the first half being 13 to 13, and at the end of the game the count was knotted at 28 to 28, requiring an extra five-minute period to decide the result.

Raymond Eichorn led the visitors' attack on the basket with five field goals and two fouls for a total of 12 points, while Wilson was close behind with five field goals and one foul for a total of 11.

Hanst, with four field goals and one foul, led the Oakland scoring, while McComas with four field goals, was close behind. B. O. Aiken refereed the contest.

The line-up and summary:

Oakland—30		Lonaconing—34
Polloek	F	R. Eichorn
Hanst	F	Turnbull
McComas	C	Dannley
Nally	G	J. Eichorn
Lee	G	Wilson

Substitutions—Oakland, Glotfelty; Lonaconing, McKenzie. Field goals—Oakland, Polloek 3, Hanst 4, McComas 4, Nally 1, Lee 2. Lonaconing, R. Eichorn 5, Turnbull 2, McKenzie 1, Dannley 1, Wilson 5.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 1-5, Hanst 1-3, McComas 0-2, Nally 0-1, Lee 0-1. Lonaconing, R. Eichorn 2-2, Turnbull 2-2, J. Eichorn 1-1, Wilson 1-4.

In the preliminary contest, East Oakland defeated the Scouts 24 to 10.

MARRIED

Kitzmiiler—Hardesty—Miss Estella Olive Hardesty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hardesty, of near Oakland, and Mr. Carl Martin Kitzmiller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Kitzmiller, also of near Oakland, were quietly married in the Lutheran parsonage on Saturday afternoon, February 13, at 4:30 o'clock. Rev. C. A. Shilke performed the ceremony. After the ceremony the couple returned to the home of the bride, where they will reside for the present.

Legionaires to Distribute List of Suggestions for Jobs

A committee composed of members of the American Legion have had mimeographed a number of suggestions for work which might be done by citizens of Garrett county at the present time, to help in relieving the unemployment situation, and these will be passed out by legionaires within the next few days, it has been announced.

This list covers work for carpenters, painters, gardeners, electricians, brick masons, plumbers, plasterers, ordinary laborers, etc., and those wanting work done will check the job which applies and return the blank to the Central Relief Committee. Then when an applicant for food or clothing comes to the relief committee, they will be told where they may work to earn it.

Regular Meeting of Brotherhood Held Tuesday Night

The regular monthly meeting of St. Mark's Brotherhood was held on Tuesday evening, the principal feature being the round table discussion and open forum on the Brothrhood topic for the month.

Short talks were made by Messrs. Bert Welch, Wellington Yutzy, Donald R. Sincell and T. C. Bittinger. Prof. E. S. Smith led the round table discussion. Following the business session, refreshments were served.

The committee in charge of the next meeting, which will be held on March 30, will be Ernest Townshend, Carlton Bowser, Donald R. Sincell and Lester Bittinger. Sunday, March 13, was the date set as the day for the Brotherhood to attend church services as an organization.

NIGHT COUGHING QUICKLY STOPPED

In a few minutes after taking Thoxine, a doctor's famous prescription, your cough stops. It acts on a new principle—relieves throat irritation and goes direct to the internal cause not reached by ordinary cough remedies.

Most coughs are caused by an irritated throat. Thoxine stops these at once. Safe for the whole family—guaranteed no dope. Money back if not satisfied. 35c. Gonder's Drug Store and all other good drug stores. —Advertisement 47, 1.

Tower, was one of the new first-class officers.

THE REPUBLICAN BEGINS ITS FIFTY-SIXTH VOLUME

Today's Issue Marks Start On Another Milestone

With today's issue, The Republican enters upon its fifty-sixth year, having been founded on February 28, 1877, the first number appearing the following Saturday, March 4, 1877. At that time the Garrett County Herald, published by the late Hiram P. Tasker, was still in existence, but it ceased publication some time afterward. The Herald was a Democratic organ and was succeeded later by the present Democratic publication here.

The Republican is not only the oldest newspaper in Garrett county but is likewise the earliest established business enterprise in the county that has gone on through the years uninterruptedly. The paper ha shad but two owners since it was established—the founder and the present proprietor.

The late Capt. James A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, was its founder and was editor until July 4, 1890, when the present publisher took over the plant.

Six persons are kept busy in the office and printing plant in the publication of the paper and varied branches of printing operations in connection therewith. The office equipment, with two linotypes, a Kelly automatic press in addition to the regular newspaper and job presses, is the best and most up-to-date in this section of the country.

The subscription list of The Republican, conceded to be Garrett county's leading newspaper, is approximately 500 more than any other newspaper published in Garrett county and is steadily gaining new patrons.

Extra Game To Decide Garrett County H. S. Basketball Champs

With both Oakland and Friendsville high school basketball teams winning from Kitzmiller and winning one game from each other, the championship of Garrett county will have to be decided in an extra game which will probably be staged at Frostburg or on some other neutral court.

Friendsville defeated Kitzmiller 44 to 24 in its final league game, while Oakland won 31 to 11 in its last county league game Both Friendsville and Oakland have won three out of four of their league games.

The winner of the county league will meet Allegany county champs in the first game of the state-wide tournament.

The Friendsville high girls completed a perfect record for the season by taking the Kitzmiller girls into camp by the score of 45 to 17. The Oakland girls defeated Kitzmiller 35 to 6 in their final league game.

GRANTSVILLE RELIEF UNIT REPORTS ON ACTIVITIES

Twenty Families Are Aided; Work Is Given In Return

The Grantsvilie unit of the County Relief Committee, of which Mr. Harry C. Edwards, Grantsville, is chairman, met in the high school building on Tuesday evening at which time Mr. Edwards reported that twenty families had received aid and in each case work of a constructive nature was done in payment for the food and clothing furnished. There were four cases in which aid was refused because the applicants declined to work.

Considerable work has been done by those receiving aid which has reflected itself in a number of ways, such as repairs on streets, especially in places which have been neglected; work on the road leading to the cemetery, cleaning of lots in the burying ground which have been allowed to become unsightly, chopping of wood for churches and other things.

The committee, the report states, finds itself in the middle of the task with supplies of food and clothing running low and the treasury nearly empty. Plans were discussed whereby help may be secured to carry the work forward until such time as the various parties aided can again help themselves. Among the suggestions for help was an appeal to the various churches of the community, Sunday schools and other organizations. Sunday evening Rev. A. C. Bell, pastor of the M. E. church, preached a sermon, his theme being "The spirit of helpfulness," following which a collection was taken and the money thus contributed was turned over to the relief committee.

The committee invites the public to its meetings so that all may know the details of the work; also inquiries, which it will be glad to explain in order that the public may understand the scope and nature of the work necessary to keep a large number of children properly nourished, clothed and in school.

Mercury Reaches New High Mark for February on 11th

The thermometer reached a new high mark for the month of February when the mercury registered 74 degrees F. last Thursday, February 11, in Oakland.

The reading was taken at the Government weather station at Weber's, one mile east of town, where records have been kept for twenty-five years. The thermometer registered 70 degrees in February of 1904 and 1930, but 74 is the highest mark on record for this month.

Mountain Top Ministers Hold Regular Monthly Meeting

The regular meeting of the Mt. Top Ministers' Association was held on Monday, with Rev. W. B. Brock, president, presiding.

Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of Mt. Lake Institute, was present and outlined the plan for the coming Standard Teacher Training school, scheduled as one of the activities at Mt. Lake this summer. He sought the coperation of the ministers and invited all to be present at a general meeting on February 27, when religious educational leaders from both Maryland and West Virginia will be present. The meeting will be held on Saturday afternoon, February 27, in the Masonic clubroom, First National Bank building.

Rev. C. A. Shilke, of St. Mark's Lutheran, Oakland, read the paper of the day on "The meaning, purpose and challenge of Lent", which was discussed by those present.

The March meeting will be held on March 21, when Easter will be the general theme for discussion. Rev. Frank B. Herzel, pastor of Calvary Lutheran church, Westernport, was a visitor at the meeting.

To Present Washington Pageant at St. Peter's School Tonight

A George Washington pageant will be presented this evening at St. Peter's hall, depicting scenes from the life of the Father of our Country.

The scenes will include the story of Washington and the colt, his school life at Master Hobby's, where games of that day as well as of today will be played; his early drilling, his conference with Benjamin Franklin and Major Lynch concerning the formation of a flag, Betsy Ross and the flag, the presentation of the flag to Washington, Washington at Valley Forge as he is about to give up and representatives of the thirteen colonies come to plead and show him why he should not give up; the presentation of Lafayette to Washington's mother, the social life of the times in which the minuet will be danced, and the taking of the oath of office as president of the United States.

The Washington Bicentennial song will be sung and the pageant will close with "taps".

Someone Unknown Cuts Down Trees In Washington Spring Park

During recent days someone unknown has thoughtlessly or maliciously cut down two of the trees which were planted in Washington Spring Park at the tree planting ceremony, it has just been learned. The trees were those planted by the workmen and were chopped off close to the ground.

In hopes that those who are inclined to tree cutting might think twice before they act, Miss Lottie Loar, president of the local Civic Club, has forwarded to this office a poem with a word of explanation, as follows:

HARM NOT THE TREE

Sometime ago, in one of the parks of old Seville, Spain, was found a most unusual "notice" that might well be an appropriate plea to use in connection with trees we are planting in our park:

To the Wayfarer

Ye who pass by and would raise your hand against me
Hearken ere you harm me!
I am the heat of your hearth on cold winter nights,
The friendly shade screening you from the summer sun.
My fruits are refreshing draughts,
Quenching your thirst as you journey on.
I am the beam that holds your house,
The board of your table,
And the timber that builds your boat;
I am the handle of your hoe,
The door of your homestead,
The bed on which you lie,
The wood of your cradle,
And the shell of your coffin.
I am the bread of kindness and the flower of beauty.
Ye who pass by, listen to my prayer:
harm me not!

Scout Anniversary Week Ends With Overnight Hike

Boy Scout Anniversary Week was concluded on Saturday when nineteen scouts and their scoutmaster journeyed to the permanent camping quarters on Deep Creek Lake for their first winter overnight hike.

The sleping quarters are open to the weather on one side and provision against the cold and wind was made by erecting canvass and enclosing one-half of the barracks. Cooking was done individually by those present in the camp.

Scouts on the camping trip included Robert Utterback, Schell Hoye, Richard Gonder, John Baird, John McIntire, Robert Browning, Laural Whipkey, Joseph Rush, Irving Broadwater, Jr., George Stuck, Walter W. Dawson, Jr., George Browning, Eugene Nordeck, Paul Kemphfer, Robert Altstetter, Lewis Jones, Carroll Casteel, Hopwood Woddell, Percy Thayer and George Hanst, scoutmaster.

At the regular meting of the troop on Friday evening, John Edward Baird, Hopwood Woddell and J. Billie Yutzy asked to join the troop. Hopwood Woddell passed all of the tenderfoot requirements.

Definite plans for the scout public meeting, which was to have been held during Anniversary Week, will be made in the near future, according to the scoutmaster.

DIED.

Mrs. Theresa May Everetts, of Bayard, W. Va., aged 48 years and 28 days, died in Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, last Saturday, February 13. Brief funeral services were held at the home and formal services in the Lutheran church at Red House, Rev. C. A. Shilke officiating, assisted by Rev. W. E. Waybright, on Tuesday, February 16.

Mrs. Everetts is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Melvin Miller, of near Red House; and Mrs. Harold Miller, at home; also her mother, one brother, one sister, and three grandchildren.

Mrs. Everetts was a member of the M. E. church at Bayard.

New Food Circulars Released By "U" Extension Service

Three recently printed circulars on milk, vegetables and meat were written by Miss Margaret McPheeters, nutrition specialist of College Park, and may now be secured from the Extension Service of the University, according to Miss Burtis, home demonstration agent for this county. The publications are entitled "Milk for Health," "Vegetable Dishes," and "Meat in the Diet," and their numbers are 90, 91 and 92, respectively.

In speaking of milk and its value as a food Miss McPheeters says, "It is the duty of every homemaker to put forth her best effort to meet the nutritional needs of her family, and milk is the basis of these nutritional needs. However, it is not necessary, nor always wise, to take all of our milk as a drink. It lends itself well to many combinations with a variety of foods, and can be served equally well for breakfast, lunch, supper or dinner."

With regard to meat in the diet the author states, "Every thrifty housewife on the farm should know the food value of meat, the cost and amount to be used by her family, how to select meat and how to use all parts, including the various organs."

Concerning vegetables, Miss McPheeters also points out that a family, to be happy, healthy and contented, according to present day knowledge, must recognize the importance of this item in the daily diet, since it is through vegetables that we get the majority of vitamens and bone and muscle building materials.

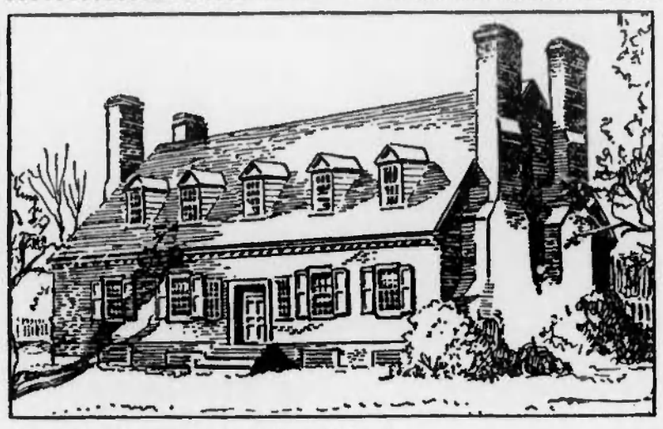
WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE

Wakefield, as Rebuilt by the Wakefield National Memorial Association.



Wakefield Made Shrine Worthy Its Memory

The birthplace of Washington long remained a desolate and deserted spot on the banks of the Potomac, set in the most beautiful environment of nature, but with no one there, save a few simple negro folk and ghosts of the past, to tell its significance. In the past the site has not been easy to find. Lying some 100 miles south of the National Capital, Wakefield was not shown on the maps. There was little or no information available about this historic spot where Washington was born and where he spent the greater part of his boyhood. Known by few, it was difficult to get to except by water. In the colonial era, civilization followed the waterways, and the homes of the plantation owners along the Potomac were built upon some inviting spot close to its shores. The broad river was their artery of commerce. Wakefield burned before railroads and highways supplanted the river. It was never rebuilt, so when highways came they passed Wakefield by.

So the birthplace remained, neglected and forlorn, until only a few years ago when the Wakefield National Memorial association was formed with the purpose of building on the original site as exact a replica of the house in which Washington was born as painstaking research and tedious study would enable it, and to restore the vast acres of the plantation to something more of its size of Washington's boyhood.

House a Mansion.

To reconstruct the home was a task of no easy proportion. For many years very little reliable information was obtainable as to the size and character of the old structure. There were a variety of opinions extant. Some contended it had been a cabin; others, a mansion. Some thought it was made of wood; others that it was of brick, and still others that it was a structure of combined wood and brick construction. After considerable study, however, experts of the association arrived at what they believe to be the truth—that the structure was built of Colonial brick of home manufacture. Excavations on the site established the nature of the construction and the type of brick used. The bricks for the new Wakefield are being produced from the original clay pit on the Wakefield estate. Research also established that the house was a mansion of considerable proportions, after the style of the big Virginia plantation homes of that period.

Old Colonial Family.

Many of the original furnishings, saved from the fire, are still in the hands of descendants of the family remaining in the neighborhood of the old mansion. These have been turned over to the association. The state of Virginia has constructed a road to the site and the federal government has been asked to dredge and improve the harbor and to reconstruct the wharf in order to accommodate visitors by boat from the Potomac.

The Washington family first settled at Wakefield in 1665, a full century before the Revolution. Col. John Washington, great-grandfather of the President, had come to Westmoreland, Va., in 1656. He died and was buried there in 1676. Maj. Lawrence Washington and Maj. John Washington, his sons, succeeded him.

After their marriages the family lived on separate parts of the Wakefield estate until the house in which George Washington was born burned. After that the Washingtons continued in other houses on the same land, and descendants still live on part of the same Wakefield estate—a continuous possession, in whole or in part, for 264 years—eight generations.

Mount Vernon Estate.

It was at Wakefield, then, that George Washington was born, February 22, 1732. Between three and four years later the family moved to their estate of 2,500 acres which embraced the present Mount Vernon. There Washington passed about four years of his boyhood. Then his parents—Augustine Washington and his second wife, Mary Ball, a member of another early Virginia family—moved to an estate in King George county, about two miles east of Fredericksburg. There his father died, in 1743. His half brother, Lawreace Washington, with whom George was a great favorite, inherited Mount Vernon; another half brother, Augustine, Jr., received Wakefield as his patrimony and George was to have still another farm when he grew up. Mrs. Washington retained the King George county estate.

As there was a good school near Wakefield, and none near his mother's estate, George spent much of his time at Wakefield until he was sixteen years old, when he returned to Mount Vernon, Lawrence, upon his death, having left him the estate.

Incidental to the restoration of Wakefield there has been a better appreciation gained of the circumstances of Washington's family. Much of our own American story has grown out of the old Weems biography, published shortly after Washington's death. That gave us the cherry tree story and other incidents of his life, many of which were doubtlessly true. It pictured Washington as springing from a lowly lineage and having that sort of a cultural background well calculated to produce a man who would lead the revolt against monarchial oppression.

Family of Aristocrats.

The truth of the matter as these researches show, is that Washington's forbears were intense royalists and closely allied to the house of Stuart.

AT HIS BIRTHPLACE

Pedestal of Monument Erected in the Grounds at Wakefield, to Mark Sacred Spot.

In fact, it was their close adherence to the royal household and the consequent oppression of the Cromwell followers that forced Col. John Washington to leave his rich estates in England and flee to the shores of Virginia.

Thomas Washington, an uncle of the founder of the American family, was attached to the court of Charles I, which gave the family a secure social standing in England. He accompanied his sovereign to Spain, where he died and was buried on the grounds of the British embassy. A brother of Thomas, and father of the man who fled to America, was Rev. Lawrence Washington, proctor of Oxford university, one of the chief royalist strongholds in England. As far back as the family history goes in England, the Washingtons belonged to the aristocratic landed gentry and were fervent supporters of the throne. So, too, with the American branch. At Wakefield, in Washington's youth, the stables held upward of thirty riding horses.

The restoration of Wakefield gives the nation another Washington shrine second only to the beautiful home to which he retired after his years of honorable service both in war and peace had won for him the title, "Father of His Country."—Kansas City Times.

Standard of Excellence

Washington was born a Virginian and died an American. The last public address he made to his countrymen contained an appeal to exalt, "American," which belonged to them in their national capacity, above all appellations derived from local discriminations. The name that he left is not only incomparably the greatest to which all classes and sections of his own country can as yet pay equal tribute; but for a century and a half it has been to the whole world a byword for liberty and unselfish public service and self-abnegation.—Detroit Free Press.

When another speaks be attentive yourself and disturb not the audience.—George Washington.

The Mother of George Washington

LIKE other mothers of great men, Mary Ball Washington sought divine guidance through prayer and through her Bible and other deeply religious writings. Her associations from early childhood were of a deeply religious nature, for the early settlers stanchly adhered to church doctrine and to the established custom of family prayers.

Mary Ball was imbued with reverence and religious fervor. This, supplemented by adequate training in domestic routine and her sense of responsibility for the duties of home life, admirably fitted her for the role of motherhood.

It was in 1730 that she came as a bride to the Washington home at Bridges Creek, later known as Wakefield, which had been without a mistress since the death of Jane Butler, Captain Washington's first wife and mother of his three children.

The greatest joy and pride of Mary Washington's life came on February 22, 1732, when her first born was placed in her arms. She chose for her child the name of George in loving regard for her guardian, George Eskridge, an eminent lawyer of Virginia. George was only eleven when his father died but upon him she placed the old patriarchal duty of saying grace at table and prayers at night and morning. From this early age his mother expected him to assume and carry such responsibility as the circumstances of life brought to him. Under her pious guidance he could not have evaded any service that she deemed his duty.

She was a wise and loving mother who set her face against every diversion in life to devote herself entirely to her children. Her entire interest was centered in and revolved around the care and development of the best that was in them.

The steady rise of her first born from one position of responsibility to another of leadership was accepted by the "Spartan" mother as a matter of course, as a part of his duty. She is never recorded as praising him. She took his superb valor under fire, his unfailing patriotism, all in his day's work. Her fear for his safety was put aside in the challenge she gave herself—"The mothers of brave men must themselves be brave."

General Washington's election to the Presidency, the first Executive of the young Republic, brought no added elation to his mother. It was his duty. She saw nothing else for him to do. When he came to tell her of it, all his future honors were shadowed by her realization that this was her last meeting with the child of her heart. Her mother love sought to enfold him in all the love, protection, and security that her prayers and blessings could invoke.

Mary Ball Washington typifies the highest example of American motherhood and is a most illustrious prototype of Colonial home maker. Like Martha of old, she attended well to the ways of her household.

LACK OF EMPLOYMENT AS CAUSE OF JUVENILE DELINQUENCY AND HUMAN HAVOC

Hunger and Neglect of Child in Impoverished Home Shown by Court Records to Be Incentive to Crime, Says Jurist

By JOSEPH SEIGLER
Judge, Essex County Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, N. J.
(From The United States Daily)

As well leave unsaid any statement about juvenile delinquency which ignores its relation to unemployment. The real victims of the economic depression are children.

Every welfare worker, every teacher, every juvenile court judge, can bear witness to the human havoc wrought by unemployment. It has created a new, and perhaps the most complex problem of social control that has ever confronted us. Only in so far as that problem is solved will the task of coping with juvenile delinquency become effective and our anxieties decreased.

Society's greatest liability is the delinquent child. Countless such children yearly enter our juvenile courts. As many more never reach these courts, but as adults are brought before the criminal bench.

How often this is the outcome of unchecked delinquent trends is too tragically illustrated each time a robbery or some more violent crime is committed. The real origin of that crime is to be found deep rooted in the delinquent's childhood.

Twice within less than one year two boys, both 15 years old, appeared in the courts of New York on charges of murder committed during robberies. These perhaps are unusual examples, but they strikingly portray the extreme in which juvenile delinquency can culminate. More strikingly do they emphasize the need for intensification of our preventive programs, if such tragedies are to be averted.

Central position in these programs must be given to mental hygiene. On the social side, provision must be made to insure employment for every wage earner in the family. As well attack delinquency with paper quills as to ignore either provision.

The scientific attack on delinquency must center on these three phases of the child's life—the physical, the mental and the social. It is in its reaction upon each phase that unemployment must also be analyzed. Most children, it is true, are not of occupational age. Many, however, are on the threshold of industrial life. The fact that all are dependent upon their parents, and that today the heads of so many families are idle, constitutes the crux of the unemployment problem. The home demoralized by idleness and want is the home against which so many pathetic dramas of delinquency are enacted.

Consider in the first place how the physical life of the child is affected by deprivation. It is denied adequate food, thereby impairing its health and weakening its resistance to pernicious influences. Any behavior clinic has abundant case histories to illustrate the susceptibility of the physically handicapped child to delinquency. Hunger, destitution, neglect—all direct effect of unemployment, have increased the physical hazards to the child.

Read the records of a juvenile court and you will readily perceive how often hunger and neglect impells a child to steal. Better still, view the procession of children which passes through the court, noting the number of undernourished, the physically defective, and the children in ill health. They are the human wreckage of the present economic situation.

Between the child and such wastage a sound mind in a sound body is the first line of defense. Fortunately, we are today socially conscious enough and too well provided with the proper agencies to permit starvation to stalk unchecked among our children. Are we well prepared to protect them against the psychological effects of unemployment? Considered judgment demands a negative answer. Greater than the physical is the psychological toll which unemployment is levying upon the family group. Greater because the phychological effects are more enduring and because there is no organized effort to remedy them, as there are agencies to relieve physical distress. In countless homes today the economic situation has created a mental attitude which is of incaluculable harm to the parent, to the child, and ultimately to society.

Against the impact of that attitude upon the child, we must at all costs erect the staunchest barrier. Failing, we will be confronted by the most potent agency in delinquency—improper mental and emotional attitudes. Who but the most inexperienced can fail to visualize the effect upon a child of the parents' attitude? Who either is more sensitive to such attitudes than the child? Few, indeed, have been the delinquency problems among those children whose outlook has been conditioned by healthy, normal parental attitudes. It is no mere platitude to assert that the last place to seek the roots of delinquency is a happy home.

Today the converse is repeatedly the picture. Idle parents, curtailments, increasing want are combinations with explosive qualities. Often the highest irritations will set them in action. Always, too, there is a mental tension to be relieved only by emotional outbursts. No ideal setting, indeed, for the child. In the child's reaction to such an atmosphere, more often than otherwise is the delinquent integer.

The child craves recognition. It requires affection. It is eager for adventure. These are too frequently denied it in the home blighted by poverty. The parents, worried by want, depressed by unemployment, becomes surly. He has no thought, no time to spare on the child's whims. Concern for food and rent is more urgent than control of the child. From these hard realities, the child recoils according to his temperament. What it is denied in the home it seeks elsewhere. Outside influences come into play. The street, the gang, the movies—the last probably attended on stolen money—afford compensation for the denied recognition within the home. Only the school is left to exercise any control. But the new freedom makes school irksome. Truancy becomes a two-fold outlet. It is an escape from control and an adventure. Another delinquent is in the making. All because of parental attitudes endangered by unemployment.

Here, then, is the paramount problem. We must combat the reactions upon the child of parental demoralization. We must counterbalance the defeatist attitude, the despondent outlook, the emotional tension, which are the psychological forces loosened by idleness and want. To the children of the unemployed we must bring more than food, more than raiment, more than shelter. We must implant in their minds healthy, cheerful attitudes. They must be given the recognition they crave, the affection they need and interests to divert their attention from hardship and destitution within the home. It is largely a psychological task to which, in this hour of distress, the mental hygiene movement must dedicate itself with unremitting vigor. Working through the child, it can reach the parent. Fortified mentally, both are mutually helpful. Family solidarity is the most impregnable weapon against delinquency.

The destruction of social values in the child's life is the third result of unemployment. Harmony in the home is a social asset. Recreation is another. Suitable housing is still another. None can be had where there is the pinch of poverty. The companionship of parents and child is weakened. Amusement in the home is relegated to the background under the pressure of the struggle to live. Again, the child seeks recreational outlets beyond the home and equally beyond parental supervision.

Recreations that involve and financial expenditures, such as atheletic equipment, are denied the child. The intensity of the desire for a football, or a baseball glove sometimes culminates in theft. Relaxed supervision entails questionable amusements and undesirable associates. Invariable accompaniments, these of delinquency! Never more so than today when deprivation rules the home and any escape is welcomed by the child. Add, then, another to the sinister consequences of unemployment.

From the necssarily limited aspects presented it is evident, therefore, that the present economic situation has a direct bearing on juvenile delinquency. Without deeper insight into the forces which is has brought into the life of the child, no constructive solution is possible. Any organized plan for the social control of unemployment must therefore commence with the child. To protect it from want is not enough. Its physical impairments must be remedied. Its mental and emotional attitudes must be shaped to normal, healthy patterns. Its character must be strengthened against the devastating shock of need and despair. It must be more delicately adjusted to the home, to the school to recreation and above all to a disordered industrial world. About it there must be closely drawn every protective influence which society can bring to bear.

Gospel Truths Brought to Guatemalan Indians

Addlag to the long list of over 900 languages nnd dialects in which the Scriptures appear, the American Bible society has issued a translation of the Gospel of St. John la Mam, the most primitive language of 200,000 Indians in Gautemala. Mam is the most archaic language of the Mayans, and it is the eleventh of the numerous Indian languages spokea in Central America lato which any part of the Bible has been transinted. To accomplish the almost impossible task of translating the gutturnl, explosive dialect, the translators, Rev. and Mrs. H. Dudley Peck of the Guatemnla mission of the Presbyterian church, had to rely upon humaa dictionaries and grammars—Indians selected for their general intelligeace, linguistic ability nnd knowledge of Spanish. One of these, Aniceto Velasquez, had three years at the Bible school, during which he walked 940 miles per year, to and from school. In Mam, John 3:16, appears thus: "Kun ietsunju ulakjtanmi Dios quij xjal, tun tsunju tsajtgkon ocxcujun Tkual, tuatsun jinlju intxontanmi tij, mial cubxitj, tuntsun titea angkbll jumajx." Which being translated lato English reads that well loved verse: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should aot perish, but have everlasting life." A translation of the entire 27 books of the New Testament is under way.

Wonders of Universe Revealed by Stars

Sir James Jenns, the famous astronomer, has told us that if Adam had been a wireless operator and had dispatched an SOS message to the nearest globular cluster of stars, it would still have n long way to travel before it reached them. When you consider that light moves at the speed of 186,000 miles a second, you may realize to some extent what this means.

Even the sun, on whom we rely for heat and light, is so far away that we see him not as he is but as he was rather more than eight minutes ago.

Look up into the sky and you cannot see a single fixed star more recently than four and a half years ago. And there are very few whose light reaches us as quickly as this. For all we know some of the stars we see may have ceased to exist thousands of years ago. There may have been in the dim ages of the past collisions which our remote great-great-grandchildren will live to see.—Washington Star.

Locksmith's Art Old

The history of the locksmith's art is probably as old as civilization, and references to it are found in the early literature of every nation. Wood was undoubtedly the first material used in the construction of locks, but the Egyptians at an early date employed brass and iron. The Hebrews and Grecks used crooked keys with ivory or wooden handles. The similarity of primitive locks made access to the house easy and led to the improvement of methods, resulting in the so-called Lacedaemonian lock. Among the ancient nations lockmaking made little progress in advance of what had been done by the Egyptians. Even the Romans used very simple locks. The tumblers lock was probably first invented and used by the Chinese.

Natural Currents

The Gulf stream and other ocean currents are not freaks of nature, but result from natural causes. Wind blowing steadily for a considerable time from the same direction is able to start surface currents. This is demonstrated in the currents of the Great lakes, where there are no differences of temperature or saltiness, and also by the currents of the Indian ocean north of the equator, where the errants reverse their direction after changes in the monsoon winds. It has been calculated that the force of the trade winds is sufficient in 100,000 years to set water in motion to the depth of 12,000 feet.

Work of Old Sculptors

A marble column hearing the head of Hermes, similar to the columns used to mark the entrances to Athenian streets in ancient times, was discovered by a group of American archeologists excavating in ruins at Athens. At the head of the column was the hand of a woman holding an infant whose head is missing. The body of the woman also missing. The group represents Peace holding the hands of the infant Ploutos, god of riches. Excavations by the British school in Athens near Lontraki revealed remains of the ancient temple of Juno and vases of the proto-Corinthian epoch.

Father Not to Blame

The baby was being displayed to admiring callers.

"Dear me," exclaimed one visitor, who seemed to find it difficult to know what to say. "How much he looks like his father."

"Oh, that's only the weather," replied the young mother, crossly. "As a rule he's quite cheerful-looking."

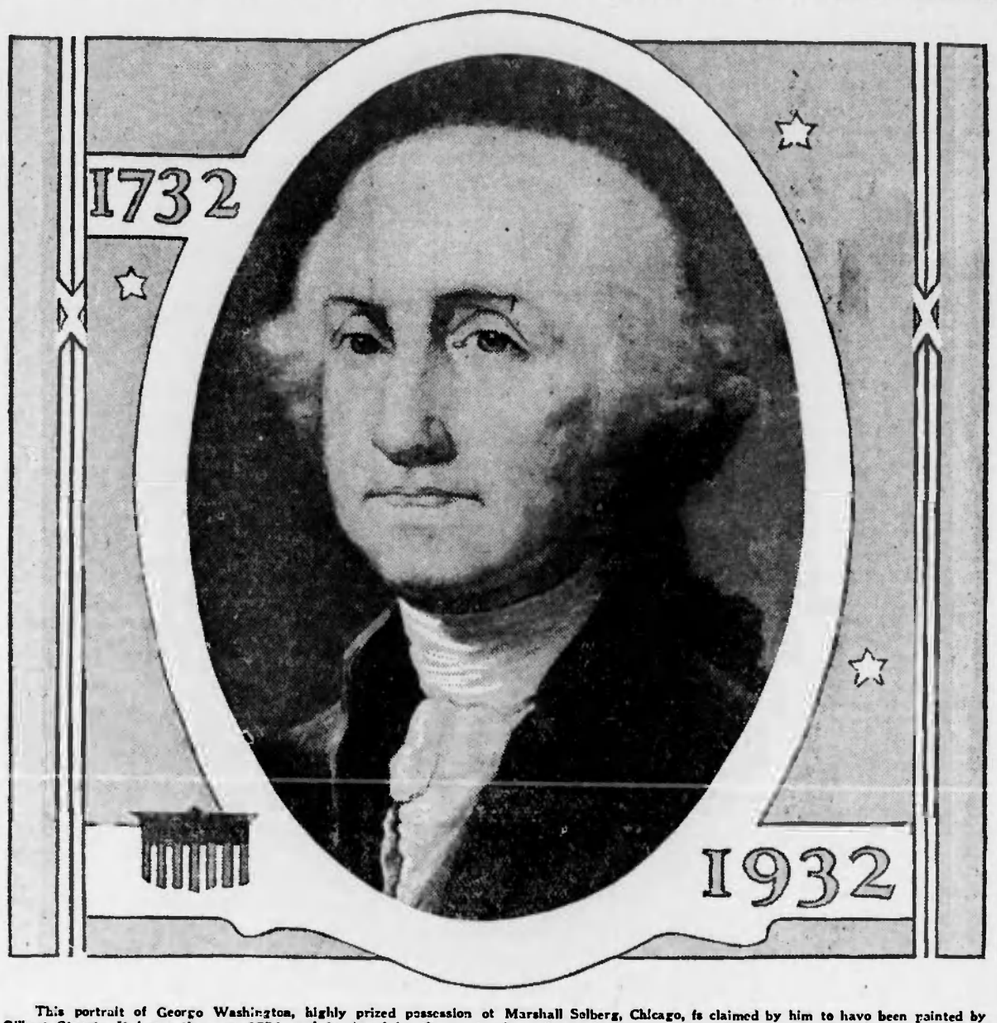
Because

Billy hurried into the house to report a fight.

"And why," said his mother, "did Horace slap Bobbie?"

"Because," replied Billy, looking at his mother seriously, "Bobbie slapped him."

The Nation's Greatest Son



This portrait of George Washington, highly prized possession of Marshall Solberg, Chicago, is claimed by him to have been painted by Gilbert Stuart. It bears the year 1794, and is signed by the master in an inconspicuous way. Some have thought that the earliest "Stuart Washington" was painted in 1795, but such is not the case, for John Jay gave Gilbert Stuart a letter to Washington which Stuart delivered while congress was in session in the year 1794 and Stuart refers to this in correspondence with relatives. It was then that one of the three sittings occurred. There were many portraits of George Washington painted by Gilbert Stuart, but there were only three sittings, so that many of the portraits were copied by Stuart from either completed pictures or sketches. It was, of course, not entirely unusual for great painters to make preliminary sketches of their subjects, although they did on many occasions entirely complete their paintings at sittings. This latter procedure was followed, it is thought, by Gilbert Stuart in this portrait. If this is so, it stands unique among the "Stuart Washingtons."

According to a volume in Mr. Solberg's library, Gilbert Stuart admired this picture so much that he retained it himself and would not part with it for many years thereafter. When it landed in the hands of Congressman Gilbert of western New York he loved it so much that he asked that it might be the last object for him to gaze upon in this life.

Washington, Man, Patriot, Statesman

COURAGE, physical and moral, was a part of his nature; and, whether in battle or in the midst of popular excitement, he was fearless of danger and regardless of consequences to himself. (Sparks, Jared—The Life of George Washington, p. 458.)

At all times and amid all conditions Washington rang true to the note of a splendid manhood. Hypocrisy and a trafficking in expedients for popular applause no more match with his life than the crime of murder. He had little of the captivating style of speech or manner but regard for the nobility of his character, rather than any rhetorical art or charm of personal address on his part, kept wavering lines from retreat in battle and from mutiny amid privation and suffering to which our neglect had exposed the soldiers of the Revolution. (Underwood, Oscar—The Career and the Words of Washington, p. 12.) (State Society of Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Pa., February 22, 1912.)

His Personal Triumph

Then came the horrors of Valley Forge and of the winters in Morris county. Those were the days when desertions were many and enlistments were few, when Washington dared not give open battle nad there was hardly left to him a place for retreat. Then came the Conway conspiracy, and the ambition of Gates, and the cowardice of Lee and the treason of Arnold, and a series of persecutions so petty, so bitter, so malignant, that it is amazing how Washington survived them. Then, too, came defeats like that at Brandywine, and battles of uncertain meaning like that at Monmouth. . . .

It is easy for us as we read these events in the light of the issue to keep up our courage and understand the triumph that finally came, but it was a very different thing for Washington. Congress was weak, meddlesome, and vacillating. The soldiers were raw, undisciplined and sometimes mutinous. There were jealousies and libels and forgeries and slanders almost beyond our present ability to believe. . . . When I recall Washington's calmness in the midst of exasperating annoyances, his unselfish loyalty when surrounded by cupidity and jealousy and hatred, his faith that put courage into the hearts of men who marched hungry and left bloody footprints in the snow; when I remember how after eight years of this and more he emerged victorious, as calm in victory as he had been serene in defeat, I do not wonder that Frederick the Great is said to have pronounced George Washington's campaign in the Jerseys the most brilliant in military annals. . . . (Barton, William E.—George Washington.)

Shared Men's Sufferings

Washington did not leave his men and go home to live in luxury, but stayed to endure privation with them. Only he who reads his letters written during these trying times can appreciate his troubles and anxieties. (McLaughlin, Andrew C.—History of the American Nation, p. 168.)

Behold him (George Washington) in 1775 taking leave of his family and his home, and hastening to the relief of a distant and then unknown part of America. See him transforming and cementing a band of rustics into an army. Follow him to the field of battle, and see him first in danger and last out of it. Go with him into Valley Forge, and see him sharing the hunger, the cold, the fatigue of every soldier in the camp. Was there ever such fortitude in adversity? Was there ever such moderation in the hour of victory? (McMaster, John B.—History of the People of the United States, Vol. I, p. 465.)

Washington's Victory

On only one point did there seem to be unanimity and accord. That was that the dogged prosecution of the war and the ultimate victory must be credited to George Washington. Others had fought valiantly and endured hardships and fatigues and gnawing suspense, but without him, who never wavered, they could not have gone on. (Thayer, William R.—George Washington, p. 128.)

The American revolution from a military point of view was a group of little wars rather than a single war. The one integrating force was the person of the great commander, but George Washington held the army and the cause together by his exhaustless patience and courage rather than by any comprehensive plan of war. (Muzzey, David S.—History of the American People, p. 130.)

WASHINGTON'S ARMS

To Washington no duty, however obscure, was unimportant, and no deviation from duty, however trifling, was possible. (Hoar, George F.—Washington, p. 31.) (Chicago, February 23, 1903.)

Put Patriotism First

Washington was an incorruptible patriot. He was one of the few rich men who was not a Tory. A very large proportion of men of large means sided with the British crown; nor must we too hastily condemn them. But Washington, who had more to lose than almost any other man in the thirteen colonies, was not blinded by vested interests, nor bound to conservative action by his wealth and station.

For the sake of the country which he loved he suffered innumerable hardships, was stung by ingratitude and hurt by slander, but he stood firm in his loyalty to the cause he had espoused, and was faithful to the end. (Barton, William E.—George Washington.)

There is a life that is worth living now, as it was worth living in the former days, and that is the honest life, the useful life, the unselfish life, cleansed by devotion to an ideal. There is a battle that is worth fighting now, as it was worth fighting then, and that is the battle for justice and equality. To make our city and our state free in fact as well as in name; to break the rings that strangle real liberty, and to keep them broken; to cleanse, so far as in our power lies, the foundations of our national life from political, commercial, and social corruption; to teach our sons and daughters, by precept and example, the honor of serving such a country as America—that is work worthy of the finest manhood and womanhood. . . . The well educated are those who see deepest into the meaning and the necessity of that work. Nor shall their labor be for naught, nor the reward of their sacrifice fall them. For high in the firmament of human destiny are set the stars of faith in mankind, and unselfish courage, and loyalty to the ideal; and while they shine, the Americanism of Washington and the men who stood with him shall never, never die. (Van Dyke, Henry—The Americanism of Washington, pp. 70-72.)

Man of Firm Friendships

The chief thought that runs through all the sayings is to practice self-control, and no man ever displayed that most difficult of virtues to such a degree as George Washington. (Lodge, Henry C.—George Washington (American Statesmen), Vol. I, p. 51.)

Solitude, indeed, is the last quality that an intelligent student of his career would ascribe to him. Dignified and reserved he was, undoubtedly; and as this manner was natural to him, he won more true friends by using it than if he had disguised himself in a forced familiarity and worn his heart upon his sleeve. But from first to last he was a man who did his work in the bonds of companionship, who trusted his comrades in the great enterprise even though they were not his intimates, and who neither sought nor occupied a lonely eminence of unshared glory. (Van Dyke, Henry—The Americanism of Washington, pp. 4-5.)

His passions were strong, and sometimes they broke out with vehemence, but he had the power of checking them in an instant. Perhaps self-control was the most remarkable trait of his character. It was in part the effect of his discipline; yet he seems by nature to have possessed the power to a degree which has been denied to other men. (Sparks, Jared—The Life of George Washington, p. 460.)

MT. LAKE PARK

There is Hope

The past week at the Park has been unusually quiet with the result that there is a dearth of news for this column. There never is much, but generally we can dig up something. However, we are hopeful that since stocks and bonds have begun to move upward some who are on the verge may decide to take the fatal step, or build a new house, or something.

Washington's Anniversary

Next Monday being the day we celebrate as the natal day of the Father of Our Country, it may be well to remind you that that celebration reverses the saying that right can never be wrong. In fact it proves that what is right is wrong and what is wrong is right. In other words, George Washington was not born on the 22nd of February, the day we celebrate, and yet it is entirely proper that that day be set aside in honor of his birth. That sounds as though we were getting in a hole as to our English, but the explanation, as you probably know, is simple. George was born on February 11, 1732. Then, how come?

Well, the Gregorian calender was introduced into England and her Colonies in 1752, twenty years after the birth of Washington. At the time it was introduced, it was figured by the wise boys that the equinox had retrograded 11 days since the Council of Nice in A. D. 325, when the rule for Easter Day was established and the Equinox occurred on March 21. Hence September 3, 1752, was called September 14, and at the same time the commencement of the legal year was changed from March 25 to January 1, so that the year 1751 lost the months of January and February and the first 24 days of March. From this, one can readily see that the calendar was stepped up 11 days in 1752, so that February 11 became February 22. So we are right, even if we are wrong.

No, this is not an original idea, for we looked it up in the World Almanac.

Entertainments at Loch Lynn

While it is true that it is hard to think of anything but the depression, yet the good folks of Loch Lynn seem to find things to do to occupy nearly every evening. For instance, early last week about thirty ladies of the Ladies' Adult Bible class of the U. B. Sunday school got together in the Aid Hall and threw a party, with a fine program and everything. Then the Young Men's and Women's Bible class of the same church pulled a fast one. About twenty were present. Not to be outdone, the Intermediate girls' and boys' class, followed by the beginners' and primary classes, got together for a good time.

Incidentally we think we ought to note that out of a total population of about 250 souls, Loch Lynn had approximately 170 in the Sunday schools of the two churches last Sunday. That's better than 65 percent. John Ream is superintendent.

And then if you read the attendance report of the Loch Lynn school you will find they are well up in the list of perfect attendance.

This seems to have resolved itself into a Loch Lynn letter.

New Minister Arrives

But we must record that Reverend Bailey, who moved into the Baptist parsonage in Loch Lynn one day last week, and will preach in that church, got what was coming to him last Saturday evening.

The good people of that congregation went to his home and gave him a good "pounding." Any wolf that may have been snooping around his door (not that there was) slunk away in disguest, thoroughly satisfied that there was nothing doing in that section for the balance of the winter.

More Old Letters

Since we noted in this column about the old letters in the possession of Mr. Enlow, there have been a number dug up around this community. It may be they contain much valuable historical data. The earliest date we have noticed is 1828. In that year John Quincy Adams was President; John C. Calhoun was vice-president; Henry Clay was Secretary of State, and William Wirt, a Marylander, afterwards anti-Masonic candidate for President, was Attorney General. The first rail of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was laid in July of that year.

We hope these old letters may be gotten together and examined for interesting facts.

Spring Flowers Blooming

The Boss Editor of The Republican is evidently not satisfied with the brand of weather we have been having here at the Park and is consequently attempting to produce a more seasonable condition as evidenced by the fact that this (Wednesday) afternoon he brought to his office a most beautiful, perfect specimen of a snow-drop bloom, picked from a plant on the lawn of his home. The sight of this delicate flower indeed lends hope to the wish that spring is just around the corner.

Washington's Anniversary

The bicentennial of George Washington will be observed with appropriate services in the Mountain Lake Park M. E. church on Sunday evening, February 21, at 7:30 o'clock.

Personal Mention

Mrs. John Brenneman is in Cumberland visiting her daughters.

Funeral of Mrs. Mary I. Getty

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Mary I. Getty, who died of heart failure at Beverly Hills, California, on Wednesday, February 3, were held in Stein's Chapel, Cumberland, on Sunday afternoon with Rev. Paul Evaul, pastor of the Methodist church, in charge. The body was then brought to Grantsville and interment was made by the side of her late husband Alvin F. Getty, who for many years was employed in a Cumberland bank. The pallbearers, nephews of the deceased, were C. O. Keller, J. F. Fahey, W. D. Getty, F. J. Getty, Earl Townshend and Prentiss Porter. Rev. A. C. Bell, local pastor, conducted the ceremony at the cemetery.

Mrs. Getty was a native of Oakland, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Enos D. Kepner, where she resided until her marriage in 1887. She and her husband resided in Cumberland until a few years before her husband's death when they went to California where Mr. Getty's death occurred two years ago. Mrs. Getty returned to Beverly Hills where she remained in seemingly good health until a few hours before her death.

Basketball Games

The Grantsville Town Trouncers were again victorious in a game of basketball with the Cumberland team last Wednesday evening. The score at the close of the game was 23 to 19 in favor of Grantsville.

Grantsville and Salisbury played a very interesting and a very close game in the National Garage hall on Monday evening in which Grantsville won—almost. They lost by only four points, the score being 29 to 25 in favor of the visitors.

Home Hygiene Class Meets

The Home Hygiene Class met at the home of Mrs. Fred. Livengood on Wednesday afternoon, February 11. Four new members were present. Mrs. Cole, county health nurse, was also present and led the discussion and the demonstration, "Bathing a Patient." All the meetings, in the future, will be held in the home of Mrs. Livengood. The class will meet again on Wednesday afternoon, February 24, from two until four o'clock.

First Aid Instructions

The Grantsville Fire Department is conducting a first aid class with Dr. N. R. Davis as instuctor. Any person interested may attend. Lessons will be given at each meeting of the department, which is every second Thursday evening. When the course has been completed, certificates will be awarded to those who have completed the required work.

Glee Club Will Present Operetta

The Glee Club of Grantsville High School, directed by Miss Ruth Conley, will present "Dream Girl," an operetta in three acts, in W. O. W. Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, February 26 and 27. The cast of characters is as follows: Betty Lou, Margaret Mary Blocher; Mrs. Anthony Pendleton, Olive Vangilder; Tony Pendleton, Raymond Loechel; Lola Pendleton, Lena Custer; Bee, Pauline Patton; Bab, Mary Bevans; Jack, Elwood Klotz; Joe, Lewis Walls; Robert Sherwood, Joseph Knepp; Worthington Brooks, George Murphy; Annie, Anna Fresh; Dale Patton as Mr. Lane, and a chorus, members of the Glee Club.

TREE PLANTING ATTENDED BY SIXTY DESPITE COLD

Ceremony Is Held Under Auspices of Civic Club Monday—Native American Elm Planted

PROGRAM IS RENDERED

Desplte the cold wind of the afternoon, approximately 60 persons were in attendance at the tree planting ceremony of the Oakland Civic club, which was held in the vicinity of Washington spring on Monday at 3 o'clock.

The tree was a native American Elm, obtained from the Swallow Falls region by A. L. Sines and Harry Loar, and was presented to the Washington Spring Park committee of the Oakland Civic club by its president, Miss Lottie Loar, during the program.

Mrs. C. Milton Sincell opened the program with a short address which was followed by the invocation and scripture reading by Rev. Walter B. Brock. After singing "America," Rev. D. C. Trimble made a short address, discussing Washington's love of trees and living things and showing how appropriate it was to plant trees on his birthday anniversary.

Lois VanCleve Sincell, a direct descendent of one of Washington's Revolutionary officers, Capt. William Van Cleve, recited the poem, "Trees," which was followed by the presentation of the tree by Miss Lottie Loar. The tree was accepted for the committee by Mrs. E. H. Sincell, Mrs. Paul Naylor and Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, members. Delbert M. Davis gave a reading, "Salute to the Trees," and those present sang one verse of "The Star Spangled Banner," led by Dr. Robinson, accompanied on coronets by John McIntire, Jack Treacy, and Irving Broadwater. Mrs. Paul Naylor gave a reading, "The Planting," and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. W. Dawson.

Mrs. Sincell, in her opening address, gave the keynote of the celebration in the following words:

"Today all over this broad land of ours we as a people are celebrating the 200th birthday of George Washington, the first president of our United States. Everyone has been urged to take a part in the Bicentennial celebration.

"What more important and far-reaching method than planting trees could be employed, monuments, not of bronze or copper or stone but of growing things, alive with life, emblems of that living nation which our first president guided into being. There is no greater need in the United States today in the matter of self strengthening than that of trees.

"Washington undoubtedly would be the first to desire as memorials to him trees that will make his country a stronger and better one, and so today we, the Civic club, are planting on this birthday, a tree.

"Under the auspices of the Civic club there have been 71 trees planted in Washington Spring Park and about 2,500 trees in the county. We in reality are a second continental army mobolized in peace for the planting of trees, a lasting tribute to the Father of Our Country."

Miss Loar Presents Tree

In presenting the tree to the Park committee Miss Loar said:

"It is my privilege and pleasure as the president of the Oakland Civic club to present to the Park committee this American Elm to be planted by you on the 200th birthday of the Father of our ountry, on this spot where tradition tells us Washington himself once paused to drink from the waters of this nearby spring.

"It is interesting to know that groups in every community of the land are now or soon will be during this Bicentennial celebration, planting trees of all kinds which together will form a monument of 10,000,000 living trees to his memory.

"May this tree and the others similarly dedicated, serve to keep green the memory of the Father of our Country and keep alive in our hearts and in the hearts of those who follow, his faith in the Providence of God and the future of our land, his courage in meeting the dangers and perils of life undismayed, his patience and perseverance in overcoming difficulties and obstacles, his spirit of obedience to authority and his self-sacrificial devotion to the welfare of his country and mankind."

DAVID J. LEWIS TO SEEK REELECTION TO CONGRESS

6th District Representative Preparing to Enter Campaign

Representative David J. Lewis, of the Sixth Maryland District, said on Friday in Washington that he was preparing his papers to file in the Democratic primary, seeking renomination.

The sixth district embraces Frederick, Montgomery, Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties and the incumbent is serving his fourth term, not consecutive, however.

He was returned to the House in 1930 by defeating Frederick N. Zihlman, Republican, and had previously served three terms.

Play Rowlesburg Tonight

Oakland A. A. will meet the Rowlesburg independent team at the Oakland High gym tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Rowlesburg will have Barrett, a former D. and E. college star and other ex-high school players. They have been defeating the best teams in Preston county. A good game is expected. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents and there will be a preliminary game at 7:30 o'clock.

Defeat High School Tuesday

Oakland A. A. defeated the high school team on Tuesday night 36 to 19, while in the preliminary game Oakland High school girls won from Rowlesburg High school girls 26 to 23.

Oakland High boys showed up well in spots but were unable to keep up the pace throughout the contest. The independents led 16 to 2 until shortly before the first half ended when the High boys spurted and made four field goals in rapid succession to bring their total to 10 points.

In the third quarter they continued their spurt and while holding the independents scoreless they crept up within one point, and the fourth quarter started 18-17. Then the inedependents cut loose at the basket and before the final whistle blew they had run up the score to 36 while holding the High school boys to one field goal which was made just before the game ended.

OVER 300 IN ATTENDANCE AT PYTHIAN ANNIVERSARY

Grand Lodge Officers Make Main Addresses;Twenty-one Receive 25-Year Veteran Jewels

SIXTY-EIGHTH BIRTHDAY

One of the largest crowds ever to gather for an occasion of its kind, attended the program held in observance of the 68th anniversary of the founding of the Order of Knights of Pythias, in the lodge rooms of Garrett Lodge No. 113, last Friday evening. Approximately 300 persons were present. The occasion was also in celebration of the 42nd anniversary of the founding of the local lodge.

With the singing of "America," and invocation by Rev. C. A. Shilke, the evening's entertainment was begun.

First on the program were musical numbers by Forman and Jordan, rendered on their stringed instruments. Following this the Oakland Quartet, composed of Wade H. Hinebaugh, J. J. Ashby, George Hanst, Cecil Smith, and accompanied by Wm. L. Gibson, sang some numbers.

The address of welcome was given by E. Ray Jones. Following his talk, Col. Nelson W. Russler, Supreme Representative, of Cumberland, addressed the crowd, his remarks centering upon "Pythianism" from its founding up to the present time and the part this fraternity plays in the lives of people today.

The main feature of the evening was the presentation of jewels to members of the lodge who have had twenty-five years continuous membership. A. Elwood Martake, Grand Keeper of Records and Seal, of Maryland, presented the jewels to the members, and gave a talk in behalf of Garrett Lodge, expressing appreciation for the service those members had given the lodge during the past twenty-five years. In response, Dr. W. W. Grant, one of the veterans, offered brief remarks, in behalf of the other members, and thanked the lodge for the tokens of friendship and service.

Besides Dr. Grant others who received jewels were: W. S. Friend, Roy O. Winters, J. G. Enlow, S. F. Hamill, Arthur Lawton, W. H. Smouse, Arthur Townshend, Ernest Townshend, G. A. Fraley, Arnett Gauer, E. E. Friend, A. L. Lee, W. H. Hinebaugh, W. D. Dixon, F. J. Shroeder, J. W. Davis, S. A. Moon, S. B. Aronhalt, W. H. Ravenscroft, and G. D. Browning.

After the presentation of jewels, A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, Grand Master at Arms, and L. G. Chorpening, of Uniontown, Pa., Past Grand Chancellor, and present Supreme Representative, gave brief talks in keeping with the observance of the anniversary of Pythiniasm.

The program throughout was interspersed with musical numbers and group singing.

Following the program refreshments were served by the refreshment committee.

Abandoned Chevrolet Coupe Is Found Minus Identification Marks

A comparatively new Chevrolet coupe, with all marks of identification removed, was found abandoned along the McHenry-Sang Run road on Tuesday and was brought to Oakland on Tuesday night by Deputy Sheriff C. W. Spear. The car was reported by Mr. Schlossnagle, of Friendsville.

Various marks that would trace the ownership of the car had been removed, the motor number having been obliterated and the body number of the car carried away. A red bead was found in the car and is the only thing authorities have that might lead to the discovery of those who had abandoned the car. The machine is at the garage of Kerins Brothers in Oakland.

Tentative Date Announced for Annual Track and Field Meet

The sixteenth annual county-wide track and field championship meet for elementary and high schools will be held on Tuesday, May 31, according to an announcement made by the Playground Athletic League of Maryland, under whose auspices the competition is held each year.

Although the announcement did not state, the meet will in all probability be held at the Fair Grounds in Oakland, as has been the custom in previous years.

Relief Committee to Hold Card Party on March 10th

In order to raise necessary additional funds for the purchase of foodstuffs the Local Relief Committee of Oakland is planning to hold a large card party in The Knights of Pythias Hall on the night of Thursday, March 10, at 8 p. m.

Tickets are fifty cents apiece, and will be distributed through the local churches and by individuals. Citizens are heartily urged to buy at least one ticket even though they do not plan to attend the party. Only with their generous support can the committee continue to accomplish its valuable service.

Wherever possible it is the policy of the Relief organization to dispense foodstuffs only in return for labor rendered. This plan is meeting with the coopcration of the citizens of the community.

D'BERRY FARM DWELLING IS DESTROYED BY BLAZE

Efforts to Save Building Are Futile Due to Lack of Water

Fire which caught from an overheated flue, entirely destroyed the home of Mrs. Clark DeBerry, about two miles north of Oakland, at 1:45 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The Oakland Fire department was called but due to lack of water all efforts to save the building were futile. Firemen and volunteer workmen succeeded in getting out practically all of the downstairs furniture and canned goods and potatoes from the cellar, but were unable to save anything from upstairs.

The fire caught on the northeast corner of the house and quickly spread to the rear where the blaze seemed to be hottest. The roof was ablaze when the fire department arrived and a bucket brigade was formed which kept the booster tank full, enabling the outbuildings and lumber and wood pile to be saved.

Mrs. DeBerry and her two sons, Preston and Walter, lived in the dwelling. They are now residing with Mrs. DeBerry's daughter, Mrs. Truman Casteel, until arrangements for the rebuilding of the home are made. There was some insurance on the building but not enough to cover the loss, it was stated.

The home was one of the best farmhouses in this community, large and substantially built. It is not known whether they will rebuild.

Found Guilty of Disturbing Public Worship

Following a verdict of guilty for acting in a disorderly manner and disturbing public worship at a church at McHenry, Hubert Foy and Harvey Knox, both of McHenry, were each fined $1 and costs by Justie A. S. Teats last Saturday after a large number of witnesses had been examined.

A third party implicated in the disturbance, Walter Smith, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $5 and costs by the magistrate.

Due to the fact that nearly the entire country side was summoned as witnesses, the costs in the ease were high, all three of the offenders being required to pay approximately $15.00 in addition to the fines imposed.

The arrests were made on February 10 by Constable Silas O. Wiley, following information before the Justice made by members of the Church of God in which edifice the disturbance was committed.

Legion Holds Service Honoring George Washington

A memorial service commemorating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, was held last Sunday afternoon in the Maryland theatre under the auspices of the American Legion.

Prior to the program a parade was held. Prof. Charles H. Ambler, professor of history, West Virginia University, Morgantown, gave the main address on "Washington with Braddock at Fort Necessity."

Mrs. W. W. Grant gave a reading, "The Spirit of 1776," and Mrs. Gordon Mealy sang a solo. The band played a number of patriotic numbers.

Dr. W. W. Davis Speaks to Ministers of Community

Dr. W. W. Davis, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland, met with ministers of Oakland and the surrounding community on Saturday afternoon in the M. E. church and outlined for them the book, "The Day of Worship," just off the press, which was compiled by the speaker.

The chapters of the book were written by ministers and laymen of the nation, setting forth the value of the Lord's Day.

Mr. Davis also made an appeal for an interest in fighting the proposed new Sunday laws for Baltimore, stating that if Baltimore is given the right of an open Sunday other cities and towns of Maryland will follow.

Band to Broadcast on Sunday

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland will broadcast over station WMMN, Fairmont, on Sunday, from 12 o'clock noon until 1 o'clock.The trip will be made in private cars.

On Sunday, March 6, the band will also broadcast from station KDKA, Pittsburgh, from 3 until 3:30 o'clock.

MT. LAKE PARK PROGRAM IS NOW BEING ARRANGED

Dates for Gatherings Listed—Miss Sara Huff to Begin Work in County March 1st

HOMECOMING IS BIG DAY

Miss Sara B. Huff, music leader, who has already met many Garrett county people, and who is remembered as having charge of the music festival of the Allegheny Tableland, at Somerset, Pa., last fall, will begin her work with the Mt. Lake Institute the first of March, it has been announced. This will mark the beginning of a definite program of community work with the whole Allegheny Tableland area within its scope and with Mountain Lake Park as a center.

Dates have already been arranged for a meeting with the Sunnyside Grange on March 3, and the Stony Creek community club of Somerset county, Pa., on March 11. Other communities of Garrett county may arrange to have Miss Huff and Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director, to meet with them by making arrangements for a date with John H. Carter, county agent of Garrett county.

Anti-Saloon League

Arrangements are being made with the Anti-Saloon League of America through its national headquarters for a two-day program at Mt. Lake Park, probably the second week in August, when such men of national fame as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, Dr. Scott McBride, Colonel Frank B. Ebert, of Los Angeles, and Dr. G. W. Morrow, of Detroit, will make addresses.

Lord's Day Alliance

Dr. W. W. Davis, superintendent of the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland, was in Oakland Saturday during which time plans were made for their meetings here on August 7. Dr. Davis expects to have a United States Senator as a speaker.

Mt. Lake Homecoming

Saturday and Sunday, August 20 and 21, have been set apart as Homecoming Day for Mt. Lake Park, These two days are expected to bring the greatest crowds of the summer to the Park.

"There are thousands of people scattered throughout many states who have a warm spot in their hearts for Mt. Lake Park, "Rev. Middaugh states, "great preachers, lecturers, and musicians who have spoken in its auditoriums, summer residents who have been coming throughout the years. These we want to welcome back for a day of good fellowship, great singing and some inspirational addresses.

Other Dates

The following organizations have accepted dates for the summer; Interdenominational Holiness Camp Meeting, June 30 to July 10, with their fiftieth anniversary program; the Baltimore Epworth League, July 18 to 25; the summer school of ministerial training, July 25 to August 4; the Summer School of Missions, July 30 to August 5.

Injured Fireman Is Still in Critical Condition in Hospital

Robert L. Wolfe, volunteer fireman of the Oakland department, who was seriously injured over a week ago when the fire truck overturned, pinning him beneath it, is still in a critical condition at Allegany hospital, Cumberland, according to recent reports.

Wolfe is suffering from a fractured right leg, a broken right arm and severe head injurics. He was said to be resting as comfortably as possible but seemed extremely weak. Hospital officials believe that it will not be necessary to amputate his right foot.

Howard Stuck, who received a bruised knee and torn ligaments around his ankles, is confined to his bed at his home in Oakland. Ralph Thayer and Wilbur Davis, the two other firemen who were injured, are able to be out.

Pomona Grange To Meet

The regular meeting of Pomona Grange will be held next Thursday, March 3, at Sunnyside Grange Hall. There will be a short business meeting at 7:30, which will be followed by a program open to everyone.

Rev. Walter B. Brock will speak on "Washington," and Miss Sara Huff, music leader of the Mountain Lake Institute, will be present. There will be special music. A large attendance is urged.

Lesson for February 28

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 11:1-57.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes a Dead Man Live Again.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives Life to His Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Giver of Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Assurance of Immortality.

I. Lazarus Sick (vv. 1, 2).

Even those who are in close fellowship with the Lord are not immune from sickness.

II. Martha and Mary Send for Jesus (v. 3).

Because they had come to know Jesus as more thaa a mere man, they instlactlvely turned to him when the shadow of death fell across their home. Those who receive Jesus into their homc when all are well and happy can be sure of his love and sympathy when sickness and deatb overtake them.

III. Jesus' Strange Delay (vv. 4-6).

Martha and Mary sent for Jesus because he loved Lazarus. They said, "He whom thou lovest is sick." Observe that when Jesus heard that Lazarus was sick be "abode in the same place" because he loved Lazarus and his sisters (v. 5). This mystery is to be explained by the fact that Jesus was divine and knew all things.

IV. Jesus Goes to the Bethany Home (vv. 7-17).

Jesus knew, and apparently the disciples knew, that going into Judea at that time meant his own death. He told his disciples that his purpose in going was to awnken Lazarus out of his sleep to the intent tbnt they might believe (vv. 11-15). Jesus fearlessly discharged his duty even though his life had been threatcned.

V. Jesus Teaching Martha (vv. 18-27).

As he was nearing the village, Martha met him with a complaint because of his delay. He ignored her complaint and taught her concerning the resurrection and life.

1. "Thy brother shall rise again" (v. 23). Most blessed words are these to fall upon the cars of a sister sorrowing for a dead brother.

2. "I am the resurrection and the life" (vv. 25, 26). He is the source of life and all who are joined to him by a living faith experience such a vital fellowship as to be nnnffcctcd by any bodily change, death being but an incident la the course of an endless life.

VI. Jesus Weeping With Mary (vv. 28-35).

Mary fell at Jesus' feet uttering the same words used by Martha but no donbt with a different tone of voice and attitude. She had been sitting at his feet in the days of sunshiac, therefore, she knew where to go in time of sorrow. Being a real man, he suffered with these bcrenved sisters, and though he knew the joy thnt was so soon to come in the restoration of life to Lnzarus, he wept.

VII. Jesus Raising Lazarus (vv. 38-44.)

In this stupendous miracle we sce nn illustration of the quickening into life of those dead in trespasses and sins. Observe:

1. Luznrus was dead (v. 39). This is a type of the sinner dead in trespasses and sins, even morally corrupt (Eph. 2:1).

2. The stone must bc rolled away (v. 39). As Christian workers we shonld remove every obstacle from between a dead sinner and a life-giving Saviour.

3. Mnrtha's protest of unbelief (v. 39). She insisted that Lazarus had already undergone putrifaction. Christ is ahle to save the sinner regardless of the degree of his sins.

4. Christ's intimncy and fellowship with the father (v. 42). In his prayer he declared that it was not for his sake that he prayed but for those who stood by.

5. Christ's manner of dealing with Lazarus (v. 43). It was by a call. He is calling men and women today by his Spirit, Word, and providcnce.

6. The response of Lazarus (v. 44). This shows that the call of Jesus is with authority aud power.

7. The command to tbe people (v. 44). They were to remove the grave clothes and set him free. They could not make Lazarus live, but they could remove the grave clothes which bonud the man whom Christ made alive.

VIII. The Effect of This Miracle (vv. 45-57).

1. Some believed (v. 45).

2. His enemies sought to put him to death (vv. 46-53).

3. His withdrawal (v. 54).

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Where is my fan mail this week? My one week's receipts spoiled me so much that I expected to be swamped every day. But the bombardment has quieted down and now I'll either have to write this without thinking (as usual) or eat a little more brain food. Since some of the doctors have discovered that little fishies are not brain food, it is going to be hard on Archibaldson and me to keep up with the common people. By eating a lot of filet de sole we kept fooling ourselves into believeing that we were increasing our brain. Well, maybe we are in size, but I guess not in power.

Every day in every way, more people are becoming window conscious, and are casting both shy and bold glances at Lizzie Tish and me, perched on a stool and in front of the typewriter in our office. We are quite well, thank you, and how are your folks?

Ever since Mrs. Archibaldson has put son Bobbie in my bed to sleep he's getting all of it, because I haven't had any, and since it now looks like a permanent arrangement, I have been trying to find a cure for snoritis and teethgritltis, or lose my mind. (You are probably thinking that I already reached that stage years ago, but I assure you that the mind is still there. It just lacks something in it.)

Every night at 9:30 (California time) when I get ready for slumber he is the most quiet and peaceful sleeper one could imagine, but just let me even get one foot in the bed and he is over on his back and rarin' with both diseases, sometimes both together, and sometimes, for diversion, singly.

In desperate need of advice I brought the question up before the meeting of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work, whose members continuously study how to get more sleep. Knowing as I do the success which they achieve with themselves, I entreated for a sure-fire remedy.

Doc Clarke, a new member of the Amalgamates, said tickling his wife's feet with a turkey feather produced the desired result, but this would never do for Bobbie, because of the dreadful tradition that tickling of the feet causes one to stutter.

Slim Shaw offered an electrical device that would cause a bright light to be turned on right before his eyes the minute he started to snore, the bright light causes his eyelids to flutter, thereby awakening him. He said he used this successfully at home.

Ed Kahl presented a figure four box trap idea. The rumble from the snore would scare a cat which would be tied near the bed and he would pull the figure four, thus bringing down a 2x4 on the snorer's head. Ed claimed this was a permanent cure.

Prof. Bittle suggested a hood with nose attachment so adjusted that the hose would hang out the bedroom window, thus wafting the musical notes over to the homes of Walter Hardesty, Bet Dawson and Rev. Shilke.

Neil Cusser Fraley said the simple remedy of stuffing the corner of a sheet in the offender's mouth succeeded for a time, but to obtain a lasting silence it was necessary for the party of the first part to remain awake all night. "I speak from experience," he said, with feeling.

Doc Grant said he had heard grinding teeth all his life and that it didn't worry him, but was open to suggestions for snore cure.

Wade Hinebaugh, Frank Rathbun, Jim Kerins, Emroy Bolden, Ikey Sincell, Andalusia, Bill Frazee, Pop Hammond, other members of the club, listened intently to the discourse. They had tried all other remedies and they had failed, they said, and were delighted with any new suggestions, all of which they agreed to try out immediately.

I am still undecided. Suggestions would be gladly received in care of Scoop.

I got in late for dinner at the Boss Editor's house the other night and from some big chickens the only parts left were the neck and the rumble seat.

The W. A. Smith household was delayed the otber day when Bill himself lost some jar gums as he was returning home. They jarred out of the car.

From a suburb comes the philosophy, "Cast not your stones, that they may be recast upon you."

The fire truck hurried to the fire on Tuesday, but it wasn't such a hurried hurry. People have been calling the firemen "the thrill seekers who have had their thrill."

In all respect to Prof. Ambler, who no doubt had a fine paper written on Washington for Sunday's program he is now known around here as Prof. Rambler. He must have crowded the entire first year course in American history.

The average American citizen won't stay interested in a speech more than 25 minutes unless the speaker is an exceptional one, and I for one, can't blame him.

I have attended only one banquet where the waitresses provided me with enough water, butter and rolls. It happened that at the last one two people near me didn't drink water with their meals and one didn't eat butter so I was well supplied anyway.

A worm motorist is one who never indicates which way he will turn.

Having need of some small change, the mistress of the house stepped to the top of the back stairs. "Bessie," she called to the maid below, "have you any coppers down there?"

"Yes'm; two," faltered Bessie, "but they're both my cousins, please, ma'am."

Use a Rolling Pin

A teacher asked her class to draw a picture of what they wanted to be when they grew up. All went diligently to work except one little girl, who only chewed her pencil.

"Don't you know what you want to be when you grow up, Anna?" asked the teacher.

"Yes, I know," replied the little girl, "but I don't know how to draw it; I want to be married."

Another Bank Failure

Willie: "I know what it is—big bruvver is back from his vacation."

Mother: "How did you know?"

Willie: "My bank won't rattle any more."

Quite True

The president of the university had dark circles under his eyes. His cheek was pallid; his lips were trembling; he wore a hunted expression. Every now and then he turned and glanced apprehensively behind him.

"You look ill," said his wife. "What is wrong, dear?"

"Nothing much," he replied. "But I—I—had a fearful dream last night and I feel this morning as if I—I—as—if—I—" he hesitated and stammered. It was evident that his nervous system was shattered.

"What was the dream?" asked his wife.

"I—I—dreamed the trustees required that—that I should—that I should pass the freshman examination for admission," sighed the president.

Meeting of the Ladies' Aid

Members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Lutheran church were entertained at the home of Mrs. James Speicher on Thursday night with Miss Nina B. Peck as hostess. Following the business meeting refreshments were served. The March meeting of the society will be held at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Alexander.

Special Program at Brethren Church

A number of students from Blue Ridge College and their instructor, Prof. Marshall H. Wolfe, presented a program in the Church of the Brethren last Sunday. The program consisted of several addresses and musical numbers by the mixed quartet, along with several solos. The service was largely attended.

School News and Notes

A special Washington program was presented in the school auditorium on Monday afternoon, which consisted of patriotic songs and several short plays. Quite a number of guests of the school were in attendance.

The pupils of the school are planning to attend the show at Oakland on Thursday afternoon when the picture entitled George Washington, His Life and Times, will be presented.

The F. F. A. department of the school held its regular bi-monthly program on Friday. Prof. B. O. Aiken and County Agent J. H. Carter were present, when the latter addressed the assembly regarding the organization of a 4-H club.

The Home Economics club members are busy preparing for the play Miss Fearless and Company, which will be presented on Saturday, March 5th.

WHY THE POTOMAC RIVER IS IN STATE OF MARYLAND

An Interesting Story of Early Land Grants in America Is Recounted

By Prof. J. C. Sanders, Superintendent Keyser (W. Va.) Schools

At the beginning of the seventeenth century the kings of England, King James I and King Charles I, had a careless habit of borrowing money from their subjects and forgetting to pay either the principal or interest. Since England had just started colonies in America, these kings fell on the happy thought of paying these debts by giving their creditors lands in this America. The kings didn't know where this land was and their creditors were just adventurous enough to go and hunt for it.

In the spring of 1606 King James I granted to the Virginia Company and the Plymouth Company of London a charter to settle land in America lying between the 34th and 45th parallels of north latitude.

This included all the territory from the Atlantic Ocean lying between the middle of Maine and Northern North Carolina and as far west as anyone knew anything about. The king made this provision, however, that these colonies must keep at least 100 miles apart.

In about 1680 William Penn began to press King Charles II for a debt of 16,000 pounds that he had been owing his father for about half the century. True to the habits of his ancestry, Charles II offered to pay off the debt by giving to Penn all the land from the Delaware River 5 degrees west and lying between the parallels of 40 and 43 degrees north latitude. Fifty years previous to this, however, the king's father had paid a debt to Lord Baltimore by giving him all the land from the Plymouth colony to the South bank of the Potomac River and running as far west as the meridian running through the western source of this river.

The western extremity of Maryland is marked by the meridian passing through what is now known as the Fairfax Stone and the limit being on the south side of the river, places the Potomac in Maryland.

Pennsylvania and Maryland, however, quarreled over their boundary line for over half a century and was not finally settled until 1675 when Mason and Dixon completed their survey by agreement of the States. At about this time Maryland mysteriously discovered that the river considered by Lord Baltimore to be the Potomac was not the real Potomac but that Charles I had really intended to give them the land to the south bank of a river about 40 miles southwest of this one, and the river now known as the South Branch of the Potomac. The State of Maryland brought suit in the United States Supreme Court against Virginia and claimed all the land lying between these two rivers which includes all of Mineral and a part of Grant, Tucker, Hardy and Hampshire counties. Maryland also found out that the Fairfax Stone did not mark the westernmost source of even this Potomac River and that the source of the river had, on account of erosion, moved west. This state also asked the court, even if they found this North Branch to be the true Potomac River, to give that state that strip of land lying between the meridian of the Fairfax Stone and the meridian running though the newly discovered source.

This suit afterwards being transferred to West Virginia as a defendant, was not decided till within the memory of the present generation in which decision medium water mark on the south bank of the North Branch of the Potomac and the meridian passing through Fairfax Stone was made the boundary between Maryland and West Virginia.

Centuries Old Custom Modernized in England

When the mayor of King's Lynn, England, proclaimed the mart, or pleasure fair, open recently, he continued a tradition stretching back more than 800 years—but by modern methods.

He broadcast through a microphone to a dense crowd the quaintly worded proclamation authorizing the holding of the mart under the charter granted to the borough by King Henry VIII in 1537. The charter confirmed by royal prescription rights and privileges enjoyed by the burgesses for 400 years previously.

It makes King's Lynn one of the few towns where waaderlag showmen are not harassed by municipal restrictions.

The mayor, in his scarlet robe and gold-braided cocked hat, came from the old hall of the Trinity guild, accompanied by aldermen, councillors, officials and representatives of the Showmen's guild.

The beadle and sword-bearer, carrying the famous sword of King John, led the procession, which passed through winding streets, by houses formerly occupied by merchant princes, to the market place. The town crier clanged his bell and shouts of "Oyez!" were heard.

Shades of Pepper (of "ghost" fame) and of Mrs. Varley seemed to hover round the old market square as the mayor, in welcoming the showmen, recalled the fair-time sensations of his youthful days. The "wild man of Borneo," he said, became even wilder if his takings fell below expectations, so he wished the caterers of popular amusement a prosperous season.

Northcliffe's Idea of Newspaper Shop Window

Speaking of sermons, or anything: The late Lord Northcliffe, it is related, one day rang up the editor of one of his weekly papers who was new to the editorial chair, and said to him: "Mr. Jones, will you please go round at once to Mr. Isaacs, the fruiterer. In Convent Garden, and ask him what he does with his best apples?"

The editor thought it wise to obey his eccentric chief. When he returned, Lord Northcliffe again rang him up: "What did Mr. Isaacs tell you about where he puts his best apples?"

"He told me," answered the editor, "that he puts them in his shop window."

"Yes, my boy," said Northcliffe, "that's what you have to do. You put your best apples in your shop window—put your best news in your shop window: and your shop window is your front page."—Christian Century.

Domestic Fowl's Ancestor

All domestic fowl are supposed to be descended from the red jungle fowl (Gallus Bankiva) which very much resemble the Black Breasted Red Game Bantam. This fowl is found in the jungles of India, Burmah, Philippine Islands and Malay peninsula. Besides the red jungle fowl, there are three other species: the gray jungle fowl of India, the Ceylon jungle fowl and the green or fork-tailed jungle fowl of the island of Java. The latter is said to rival the Vulturine Guinea fowl in the beauty of its plumage. The crow of the jungle cock is short and broken but the cackling and clucking of the jungle hen is very similar to that of domestic poultry. The jungle hen will lay from four to eleven eggs before incubating, a fair cry to the 300-egger produced under the hand of man.

Mariner's Compass

The mariner's compass, which the Chinese call "the south pointing chariot," is of great antiquity. The idea, it is said, was born during the reign of Chong Wang, that is to say, a little before 1079 B. C. But in a few centuries the discovery of the principle was forgotten. A philosopher named Chang Hong revived it. He died in 139 B. C. and during the succeeding troublous times his model was neglected. It was in the Third century A. D. that the Chinese interest in the south pointing chariot was revived. Old writings were eagerly studied, trial after trial was perseveringly made, and in writings of the Eleventh century we read of the compass being used by mariners. Before that time it seems to have been used for guidance in traveling by land.

French Company Failed

The Company of the Hundred Associates was a trading corporation given a charter by France under which it was to settle 4,000 colonists in America in 15 years. But in the 35 years of its existence it sent out less than a thousand. When the company's charter was annulled in 1663 the European population in New France was scarcely two thousand. All the company did was to send out a few vessels each year to trade with the Indians for furs, and thus ended one of the many unsuccessful colonization efforts to populate French or British Canada.

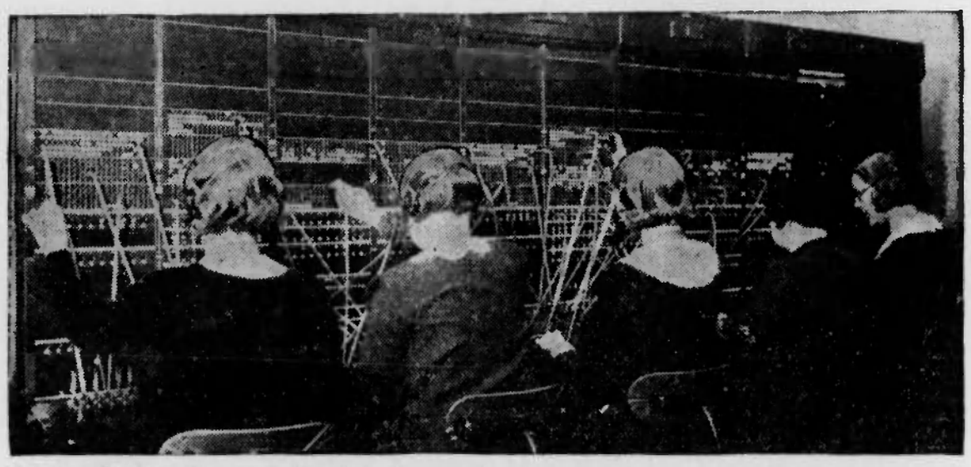
25-Acre Commerce Department Building Has More Telephones Than Many Towns

Combination Dial-Manual Switchboard Serves 1,600 Stations From Which More than 500 Calls Are Made Hourly. This is 20 Times the Number Made 30 Years Ago.



NEW SWITCHBOARD BUSY—Miss S. L. Simpson, Miss Georgebelle Loops, Mrs. Pauline Thompson, and Mrs. Isabelle Burton establishing connections for the Department of Commerce officials and clerks who make 10,500 calls daily. Miss Edith M. Sherwood, supervisor, observes the work.

Telephone service in the new $17,500,000 Department of Commerce Building at Washington, which is said to cover more ground than any office building in the world, is supplied from a combination manual and dial switchboard.

This immense building contains about twenty-five acres of usable floor space and the 10,500 employees of the Commerce Department in Washington are served by 1,600 telephones. The switchboard is connected with city central offices by 80 trunk lines, while other government departments are reached by 40 tie lines.

The switchboard equipment serving this building, according to engineers of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, has an ultimate capacity of 2,500 telephones, and 240 trunk and tie lines.

Since the Department of Commerce, formerly known as the Commerce and Labor Department, was established March 16, 1903, telephones serving the personnel have increased 133 times. In the same length of time, the number of employees, according to Edward W. Libbey, chief clerk and superintendent of the department, has only increased eight times.

When the Department of Commerce was first established, it was served by a single-position switchboard with twelve telephones connected with it. There were two trunk lines to the Main central office. Early in 1905 telephone facilities were increased to twenty-six stations and eight trunks. At that time there were about 500 calls made daily.

Telephone users served by the Department of Commerce switchboard today make more than 500 calls each hour, which is twenty times as many as were made during the average day in 1905, according to Miss Anna M. Hook, chief operator, who was the second young woman employed on the telephone switchboard in this department.

The operators serving this switchboard must know who's who in the various departments and divisions, for while the officials and employees of the department are expected to call by number, it is only natural that a great many calls are made by name, which necessitates alertness on the part of operators.

STATE VERSUS COUNTY SUPPORT OF THE SCHOOLS

Economics and Higher Efficiency Achieved by Taking over Responsibility for Education from Local Authorities Reviewed.

By A. T. ALLEN,
Superintendent of Public Instruction,
State of North Carolina
(United States Daily)

The General Assembly's agreement in 1931 to proceed along the line of complete State support for the six months' school terms required in North Carolina's Constitution served as a complete reversal of the old doctrine of primary financial responsibility on the part of the county. The clear implication of this new doctrine is that the State itself, not only assumes the primary financial responsibility, but also agrees to pay the whole bill of cost on State standards for the six months' term out of its own revenue. This is a new philosophy in school maintenance and support.

This decision, of course, was hastened by the financial and taxing situation which confronted the General Assembly in 1931. Although our basic principle of constitutional authorization leads logically and inevitably to the doctrine of complete support, it probably would not have come at this time except for the tremendous pressure exerted by the extremely high ad valorem tax rate made necessary under the old system of school support.

The taxing situation which confronted the General Assembly of 1931 was a very difficult one to handle. Land taxes were so high that property was robbed of its sales value. Taxes in many counties could not be collected; the counties could not meet their obligations or were running on borrowed money; and some of them were forced to pay their teachers in script which even at this date has not yet been redeemed. Some means had to be devised to reduce the taxes on land by a very considerable amount. Since the schools were the largest spenders from ad valorem taxes they came in for the first consideration. Educational costs had been rapidly and steadily rising for ten years.

In order to meet the problems arising out of the increasing costs and the shrinking values, some drastic action, both in the field of costs and in the field of revenue, were necessary. It was not any longer a question of fixing the responsibility for effectuating a State purpose. It was a question of finding enough money to keep the schools open and running. It seemed a very inappropriate time to increase taxes on any source of revenue on account of the financial stringency. If the burden of taxes were to be shifted and lightened on some sources, however, they had, of course, to be increased on others or new sources of revenue had to be discovered.

In the light of all this, the General Assembly moved along two lines: (a) It increased by many millions of dollars the State's revenues from indirect sources and applied these funds to the support of the schools. (b) With a reluctant hand it cut the operating costs of the six months' term by an amount sufficient to provide, theoretically at least, a balanced budget.

For the previous year, the State had put into the six months' school term $5,250,000. All of it was derived from indirect sources of revenue. An effort was made to increase the taxes on these sources and to levy sufficient additional taxes on other and new indirect sources to enable the State to operate the six months' term without the levy of any ad valorem taxes. At the last, however, this was found impossible, and some ad valorem taxes were levied. The funds provided annually for the six-months terms are the following:

State funds from indirect sources, $11,500,000.

State funds from ad valorem taxes, $4,350,000.

County funds, fines, forfeitures, etc., $1,320,000.

Total, $17,171,000.

These were all the taxes for which the proponents of the State support could get legislative assent. This was obtained only after a momentous struggle lasting for five months. They afterwards appropriated out of the State treasury all the money they had thus collected for the support of the public schools. These measures were, of course, primarily for the relief of land taxes, but the Assembly was not unmindful of the needs of the schools. They went as far as they could go in order to carry into effect the principle of complete State support without the levy of an ad valorem tax.

Further action, however, was necessary to balance the budget according to the estimated revenue. The school budget had to be cut. They did not try to make all the savings at one place, but, after canvassing the whole field, they cut the cost in many places. This was done reluctantly. The teaching load was increased, and authorization was given for the reduction of salaries on the uniform percentage basis by an amount not exceeding 10 per cent. Many other economies were necessary.

These two measures represent North Carolina's effort to keep the public schools open in the face of, and in spite of, the financial depression.

For many years we had accepted without question the doctrine that public education is a State function. The General Assembly of 1931, however, went much further. It said that public education is not only a State function, but that its support is a solemn State obligation which must be met by revenue levied in the name of the State.

This view makes the whole bill of cost, on such standards as the State may from time to time set up, directly chargeable to the State itself. This, of course, is revolutionary in conception. It is a complete reversal of legislative thinking which had been dominant for 50 years. The acceptance of the doctrine of complete State support places the consideration of educational procedure at the center of all State policies, and makes it a part of every general scheme of State taxation and revenue. It can no longer be shunted, segregated, or isolated.

In undertaking to pay the whole bill of cost, it was necessary for the State to reserve the right to fix and maintain its own standards of cost. It does not agree to pay the bill on county standards. Such an agreement would lead to bankruptcy. The law does provide, however, in section 15, that the counties, with the approval of the Board of Commissioners and of the State Board of Equalization, map supplement each object and item of expenditure, to bring the schools of the county up to county standards. This is not a part of the State support scheme, but is supplementry. Thus, the priciple of local autonomy and the power to exercise local initiative, a principle dear to all school people, is preserved and extended.

The doctrine of complete- support necessitates a different kind of budget from the one we formerly made for State participation. An equalization budget is horizontal in conception. We take one unit of cost such as the salaries of teachers and to that unit add certain percentages. This gives a budget that it put down in layers. It is a stratified budget that is spread over the State. The county must pay any increased cost that may be brought about by conditions peculiar to it. No consideration is given to differences that may exist. A part of the necessary cost may in this way be left to the individual county. Furthermore, a participating budget must be made on the basis of the business for last year. This throws all the cost added on account of growth on the county. This serves in poor counties to retard school development, and to increase tax rates.

A complete support budget is set up on the verticle principle. All the necessary costs from top to bottom must be considered if the State is to pay the whole bill on the basis of State standards. There are listed in the State budget all the necessary cost items, from janitorial supplies to the salary of the superintendent. There is $150,000 for instructional supplies. The clerical help in the office of the county superintendent is paid. We also pay the postage, express, telegraph and telephone bills in this office. The whole field of necessary cost is covered. Moreover, the very idea of complete support turns the attention from last year's business to the business of the current year. The State is putting up money to run the schools and not to participate in this year's business on last year's cost. It must, therefore, look at the situation as it is and provide money to run the schools as they are and under the conditions that actually exist and not under some theoretical notion of what ought to be.

The guaranty that the teachers will be paid promptly and in full for the six months' term is as strong as the State itself. If this law fails, then the State has failed before all the world.

The extended term (beyond the six months) still rests upon the principle of dual support. The State goes by the county and into the district and participates in the cost of two months of school in addition to the 6 months. Many of the rural high school districts could not possible operate except for this aid. The State makes an appropriation of $1,500,000 as a tax-reduction fund, which is distributed to the districts on the basis of (a) their ability to pay and (b) their educational costs according to State standards. Many of these districts receive more than half of their costs from the State. The rising cost of education and the decrease in the value of rural property for taxation, on which this extended term formerly was wholly dependent, would long ago have forced the suspension of these schools but for the timely aid of the State. The whole program of rural high school education would otherwise have been wrecked.

How will the adoption of the principle of complete State support affect the development of public education in the future? No one, of course, can foretell at this time the possible effects. The principle of complete support is accomplished by a large train of ideas which are certain to relate themselves to the total school situation throughout the years.

Roast Stuffed Cured Pork Shoulder

Have a cured pork shoulder skinned and boned. Wash the shoulded and soak it overnight in cold water to cover. On removing the piece from the water wipe it dry. Lay the shoulder fat side down, pile in some of the hot stuffing, begin to sew the edges of the shoulder together to form a pocket, and gradually work in the rest of the stuffing. The receipt for stuffing given below makes the right quantity for a 4 or 5 pound shoulder. Lay the stuffed shoulder, fat side up, on a rack in an open roasting pan without water. Roast the meat at a very moderate heat 325 F. until it is tender when pierced with a skewer or a fork. A 4 to 5 pound shoulder will require about 3½ hours to cook at this oven temperature.

Raisin Stuffing

Two tablespoons butter or other fat, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 cup finely cut celery and tops, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 2½ cups fine, dry bread crumbs, ½ pound seeded chopped raisins, grated rind of one-half lemon, ½ teaspoon salt.

Cook the onion, celery, and parsley in the fat for a few minutes. Mix the raisins thoroughly with the bread crumbs, stir in the cooked vegetables, and add the lemon rind and salt.

Italian Baked Rice

Four cups boiled rice, ¾ cup grated cheese, ½ cup chopped pimento, 1½ cups tomato juice, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Mix the ingredients well together pour into a baking dish. Cover the top of the dish with the pulp left from straining the tomatoes. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven and serve hot. This dish will make 10 average servings.

Household Helps

If soup or broth is too salty, add a sliced carrot or potato; boil a few minutes and remove slices. Repeat if necessary. The vegetables may be used.

To separate fat from soups and gravy, thoroughly wet a clean, white cloth in very cold water, pour soup or gravy through it; the fat will remain in the cloth. Repeat if necessary.

In adding eggs to custards, soups, sauces, etc., add a few spoonfuls of the boiling liquid to the eggs before stirring them into the mixture. If this is done carefully, the eggs will not curdle. When used for thickening, as in custards, eggs must be beaten only till smooth, not frothy.

It takes less bacon to flavor baked beans if the bacon is put through the food chopper.

To keep bacon, eggs, etc., from popping or spattering grease while frying, sprinkle a bit of flour into the grease, it takes up the moisture which causes popping. A tiny drop of water clinging to the food or falling from wet hands or a lid might cause severe burns from spattering grease.

When grease drops on the floor dash cold water on it immediately, and it will harden before it can soak into the wood.

Scientists Develop Whisper Telephones

Impairment of speech may no longer be a handicap in the use of the telephone. Scientists of the Bell Telephone Laboratories have developed a special transmitter to serve subscribers, who, because of the impairment of their vocal organs, must speak in a whisper.

J. F. Dalton, transmitter development engineer, demonstrates use of the "whispering telephone."

This transmitter, which was originally developed for use in radio telephone systems and in aircraft, coast guard, and fire boat communication, has been found suitable for this purpose.

The equipment, as described in the Bell Laboratories Record, differs in appearance from the regular desk stand transmitter in having instead of a regular mouthpiece, a rather wide opening covered by a protective grating. The diaphragm is formed of duralumin, which is a metal used in other telephone equipment, notably the handset type of instrument.

Laboratory scientists also developed the artificial larynx, another instrument now being used extensively by persons who have been deprived of their vocal cords as a result of surgical operations.

"Dog Days" Given Name by Early Astronomers

With the ancient Romans the month of July and the first part of August, as with us, were days of extreme heat. The people suffered. For a lack of proper sanitation, many of them fell ill and died during that time. And, as in all countries, those hot days brought extreme discomfort to dogs. They fell ill of rabies, ran maddened through the streets.

Looking to the stars for an explanation of these conditions, the astronomers found what the Greeks and the Babylonians before them had found—the star known to them as Canicula, or the Little Dog, rose in the heavens at the same time as the sun. With logic of a sort, they decided that this coincidence of the sun and a major star both beaming down on the earth together generated the extreme heat, which diminished as Canicula's time of rising receded from that of the sun, only to return a year later when they both rose together again. That settled, they called the period dies caniculares, or dog days.

But had they taken their astronomical knowledge and their mythology from the Egyptians, dog days would have been known perhaps by another name; certainly they would have had another significance. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Ancestral Worry Over the Rising Generation

Owner of some valuable old books, books whose intrinsic value is enhanced to him because they belonged to his great-grandfather or his great-great-grandfather, is Ashton G. Stevenson, says a Chicago dispatch.

That the generations change little is proved, he believes, by quotations from some of the old almanacs he owns. Back in 1824 the younger generation, it seems, was worrying the older generation and the golden age was in the past.

In 1824 the Western Almanack was sorrowful because "40 years ago literature meant learning and was supported by common sense; the ladies of the first respectability learned music, but it was the humming of the wheel and learned the necessary dance steps in following it; their pianoforte was a loom and their novels the Bible; some respect was paid to old age, to pious ministers of the gospel and to Sunday."

Mythological

In Greek mythology, Daedalus was an artist, sculptor and architect of Crete who lived three generations before the Trojan war. He built the famous labyrinth on that island and to him are attributed the inventions of the ax, the saw, the auger, etc. Being imprisoned with his son Icarus, he invented wings for flying to Sicily. These were fastened on with wax, and according to the legend Icarus flew so high that the sun's heat melted the wax and he fell into the sea. Daedalus himself reached Sicily. Philologists suppose that Daedalus is not really a proper name but is the common appellation of all the first architects, metallurgists and sculptors in Grecian antiquity, being derived from the Greek word meaning "to work with skill."

Altitudinous Birds

When it comes to high flyers some birds really go up in the air. T. H. Harrison of Pembroke college, Cambridge, reports in Nature, the British Journal of Science, a flock of wild geese flying at an altitude of approximately 25,000 feet—nearly five miles up. These high flyers were accidentally "shot" in a photograph of the sun. Mt. Everett climbers, Professor Harrison says, have reported lammergeiers, curlews and choughs (Old world genus of the crow family) flying higher than 20,000 feet. The highest airplanes have encountered birds, however, is 15,000 feet up, while the average migratory birds do their traveling flights below the 3,000-foot level.

Different

Undoubtedly the story about dividing the apple will be with us as long as the mother-in-law gags, but of course, little Elmer Blane of San Bernardino doesn't know this and, being only six, must be exonerated of plagiarism.

But this time the story is bigger and better, for there were two apples instead of one—a big one and a little one.

"And tell me, Elmer," cooed aunty, "if I asked you to give an apple to your brother, which one would you give him?"

"Do you mean to my big brother or my little one," asked Elmer anxiously.

Discovery

Billy had a new suit which he wanted to wear on Sunday for the first time. He begged to go to church instead of staying with the other small children.

Although with misgivings, mother said he could, but that he would have to be very quiet. For a time, all went well, but during the prayer, every one was startled to hear an excited voice: "Oh, mother, here's another pocket!"

Equipment

A great philosopher once said that he could move even the earth, providing he had certain tools. And he spoke the truth. Virtually nothing should be called impossible. No job is too big for anyone, if the proper equipment is at hand.—Grit.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1932.

WELL ORGANIZED—

Last Sunday a memorial celebration called for a parade. The parade was held and was made up of local organizations, people taking it as a matter of course.

But a bystander, from another town, was amazed at the extent to which Oakland had become organized. "There is not another town this size or twice as large that has the command of so many organizations," he said.

And that's a fact. Having the organizations with us all the time, we do not realize that Oakland is unusual in that respect. But just stop to consider. Oakland has an active American Legion drum and bugle corps of about 30 members; a Boys' band of about 50 members; a junior drum and bugle corps of 25 members; a boy scout troop of 40 members; and a Legion auxiliary, a Band auxiliary, a Scout auxiliary, to keep the organizations on the move; a volunteer fire department of 35 members; a Rotary club of 30 members, besides a number of social orders and other organizations that are ready at any time to do their part for Oakland.

Try and find another town like it.

PROTECTION FROM FIRE—

No matter how efficient a fire department is, or how valiant are its members, they must have water to fight a blaze effectively. This has been demonstrated again and again at such places beyond the reach of the city. This was most recently demonstrated at the fire on Tuesday.

Had there been a supply of water handy, it is certain that the building could have been saved. With a spring on every farm, what better form of protection than to build a small dam, creating a body of water that might be used in an emergency.

This foresight might save your home in the future. With the Oakland Fire department within call, and a water reserve on the farm, almost any fire could be fought successfully.

WAR ON DEPRESSION

The first forty-eight hours of the American Legion's campaign to secure jobs for the unemployed was very productive. It was reported at national headquarters at noon of the second day that 16,857 persons had been given positions. Wisconsin led all the other states in the number of those who were placed. New York City made a poor showing—thirty-two jobs the first day—but it was explained that the complete organization is not yet functioning and that when it is the results will be much more satisfactory. But the most gratifying feature of the drive is the way in which it is being received by employers. Even where they are unable to take on any men they commend the spirit back of the movement and predict that it will do much good. Some concerns giving jobs asked that publicity be withheld on the ground that it would create a run of the jobless on them which they would be unable to satisfy.

The reports received thus far are from sixty-nine communities in twenty-nine states. It is obvious that, when the movements gets into full swing in all parts of the country we may look for more cheering news. The American Legion is being assisted in its work by the American Federation of Labor, the American Legion Auxiliary and the Association of National Advertisers.

Executive Director McKee said on Friday: "The initial results show that it is not beyond the power of the American people to put 1,000,000 wage earners or more back on payrolls. Some of the smallest communities have shown that by complete organization and united action each town can solve its own unemployment problem. The larger cities of the country present a more difficult problem in organization and are starting slowly, but we are confident that complete organization will be eventually effected and that good results will be achieved."

This spirit of optimism is contagious, and that in itself is highly desirable at this time. If it does nothing else it will break down the pessimism which prevails in some quarters. In the bright lexicon of America there is no such word as fail. It is easy enough to say no jobs are to be had, but the fact that over 16,000 have already been found is proof that the most difficult of handicaps can be overcome with industry and enthusiasm.

The fine manner in which local relief is being administered to the needy is an example of what may be accomplished in securing local jobs for the jobless.

The President points to the success which is attending the movement to bring hoarded money from hiding. Every dollar thus extracted from dark places will help in the movement to create work.

An Interesting Fact

Garrett county, as is well known to readers of The Republican, is not one of the counties of Maryland formed at a time "when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," but is the youngest county of the State, erected in 1872—just sixty years ago.

There are men and women living in the county at the present day who can well remember the events following. It may be well, however, for the younger generation to have called to their attention that:—

The first session of the Circuit Court held in Garrett county convened May 19, 1873, at which Judges William Motter and George A. Pearre presided. The session was held in either the old school house on the site now occupied by the Oakland grammar school building or in the dining room of the original Glades Hotel, of which John Dailey was the proprietor.

The first jury trial was the suit of William Lipscomb against Samuel Rodehcaver. The court remained in session three days and thirty-three witnesses were examined before the grand jury.

No doubt some are still living to whom marriage licenses were issued in the year 1873. Among them were Charles H. Liston and Lucretia A. Lowdermilk; George Spoerlein and Abigail Beeghley; D. A. Friend and Phoebe M. Rush; Albion Coles and Antoinette Barnes; Simon Matthews and Elizabeth A. Totten; J. F. Trehern and Cyrena Edwards; James W. White and Flora McCrum; John W. Harvey and Sarah E. Davis; W. H. Frazee and Felecia Frantz; Henry Jordan and Justina Cope; J. W. Kisner and Mary M. Wable.

The first mortgage was recorded February 12, 1873, from Harmon W. Hesen and Helen Hesen to Humbird and Long for $230, and the first deed was recorded on March 4 from Ezekiel Totten to Adelia M. Merrill for a lot in Oakland; consideration $125. The second deed was recorded the same day and was from H. G. Davis to James Casey for a lot in Deer Park.

The first session of the Orphans' Court was held on February 11, 1873, with Judges D. Harrison Friend, William Harvey and Joseph DeWitt on the bench.

The first nominating convention for political offices was held at the old Glades Hotel in Oakland on December 14, 1872. This convention was made up men of all political parties with William A. Brydon, of Bloomington, chairman, and Ralph Thayer and Gilmor S. Hamill, secretaries.

According to a writer of that day the convention was not without its objectors who were probably 'sore" because some of the men of their choice were not nominated. The delegates to the convention from the Grantsville community withdrew from the hall and declined to take part in further proceedings. Notwithstanding, the convention presented the following county ticket:

Clerk of the Circuit Court, R. T. Browning, Democrat; Register of Wills, Ralph Thayer, Republican; for Sheriff, Solomon Turner, Democrat; State's Attorney, Gilmor S. Hamill, Democrat; Judges of the Orphans' Court, Joseph B. Davis, Republican; J. McC. Mason, Democrat; D. Harrison Friend, Republican; County Commissioners, D. E. Offutt, Democrat; Jacob Boyer, Republican; W. H. Barnard, Democrat.

Political brethren do not now dwell together in such harmony.

In the Congressional election of 1876, Louis E. McComas, the Republican candidate, received a majority of 20 over his Democratic opponent, William Walsh.

4-H Radio Broadcast to be Heard on Saturday

The national 4-H broadcast will continue on Saturday, March 5, from 12:30 to 1:30, with the general subject, "4-H Club Work has Economic Values."

The U. S. Marine Band will furnish the music and a number of America's best known hymns and religious songs will be played. Talks on 4-H work will be given.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

United States Commissioner Henderson, of Cumberland, was in Oakland taking testimony in the suit of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company vs. the town of Oakland. The question involved in the action was the town's right to limit the speed of railroad trains within the town limits to a maximum of six miles an hour following the arrest and imposition of a fine upon an engineer for violating the speed ordinance when entering Oakland with his train some time before.

A bill was introduced in Congress aiming to do away with cigaret smoking by making the revenue on the weed almost prohibitive except to the very rich. The theory advanced by the sponsors of the bill was that cigaret smoking was one of the very worst habits indulged in by the people of the nation and the statement was made that many thousands of young men died each year from the effects of smoking tobacco in this form.

Marriage licenses were issued in the local court to Nathan R. Selby and Mary L. Collins and to Henry W. Kahl and Mary Schmidt.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The Republican carried a story stating that a masked bandit had entered a Pullman car of the Baltimore and Ohio train No. 1 as it was ascending the Seventeen-Mile Grade east of Oakland and robbed eight passengers and the conductor. A suspect was arrested after search around Altamont and lodged in the Garrett County Jail at Oakland.

The story that Mountain Lake Park had been sold to a syndicate of capitalists was denied. Negotiations for the transfer of the property had not progressed any since early in the fall.

Clyde Shipley, fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was accidentally knocked off his engine near Terra Alta and sustained a fractured arm and other less serious injuries.

Two hundred sixty carloads of ice had been shipped from the lake at the Park and the ice harvest was still going strong with a large number of men employed in the work. About two thousand tons of ice had been stored in the Park ice house.

The home of Joseph A. Lewis, near Swallow Falls, was destroyed by fire and his daughter Mathilda, aged 9, burned to death. Two other daughters were burned to death.

Fire, discovered in the liquor store of Truman West, Railroad street, almost totally destroyed it and damaged the Litzinger, Ravenscroft and Offutt properties adjoining.

A second fire about three hours later, damaged the home of the late D. M. Dixon.

Returning home from near Deer Park, S. A. Nally, Harper Bartlett, John Sweeney and James Howell lost their way in a snow storm and became unconscious from the cold. Two of the party had their feet frozen.

Miss Josephine K. Hart, Oakland, was one of five to take the white veil at the convent chapel of Mount St. Agnes' College.

TWENTY-NINE MARRIAGES PERFORMED DURING WEEK

February Record of 89, Made in 1931, May Be Surpassed

Twenty-nine marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland, bringing the total for the month of February thus far to 76. With another week remaining, it is highly probable that the record of 89, established in 1931, will be surpassed, according to Court House officials. The average number for the month of February is fifty.

Saturday was the busiest day for the clerk, eight permits being issued on that day, while the 17th, with 7, and the 19th, wih 6, were not far behind. Four of the licenses issued were marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a permit.

ALLEGHENY TABLELAND IS DISCUSSED IN RADIO TALK

J. T. Miller, Pittsburgh, Tells of Advantages Here

A radio talk concerning the Tableland area, of which Garrett county is a part, was delivered over station KDKA on February 3, by J. T. Miller, a member of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, who is interested in developing this area. The entire address and an editorial appeared in Pittsburgh newspapers. Parts of his speech are printed below:

"My part today is to bring to the many who are listening tidings of what to them may be a new land, near and yet unknown. It is a beautiful land, a land of wonderful vistas, of far-reaching fields, of lovely woods, of magnificent mountains and of sunsets, glorious and gorgeous. It is a land where kindly people dwell in hospitable homes."

He continues telling of its area, climate, population, temperature, sunshine, and rainfall, topography, highways, hotels, etc., and then:

"It is cut by innumerable streams and lying within its mountain valleys are two great artificial lakes.

"It is said that today is the time for planning, for plotting our course for the future, for looking far-sightedly ahead, for readjusting ourselves, shaping new movements and planning constructively. Pittsburgh needs foods. Pittsburgh has goods to exchange for food. Commercially these people of the Tableland can benefit us and we benefit them.

"They can provide in the winter season the proper sports if and when the need be shown. And in the summer their lakes call us, their mountain streams entice us and in the shades of their forests can we enjoy nature at its best. This land would furnish us innumerable summer camps and homes if we sought them. Their staple crops could bring us much.

"The music festival will be repeated this year. They are talking of splendid things to come to pass at Mt. Lake Park and Oakland, and at Fort Necessity on July 4.

"The Tableland association has been trying to set up a working plan based upon practical things that will develop rural and urban relationships between Metropolitan Pittsburgh and this mountain country.

"It has three immediate objects: to stimulate among its own people regional consciousness forgetting county and state lines; to develop in Pittsburgh an understanding of this project and its effort toward this rural-urban relationship; to develop a cooperative, workable plan, whereby the Tableland may draw on the cultural, social, industrial and commercial possibilities of Pittsburgh, and Pittsburgh may in turn make use of the commercial, recreational, cultural and social possibilities of this Fairyland and of its products.

"Their forests produce large quantities of Maple Sugar which Pittsburgh could well buy, and their potatoes likewise. This relationship between Pittsburgh and the Tableland appeals to me. Let us think about the Tableland. Let us go and see. If you go once, I am sure you will return there many times."

To Address State Meeting at Baltimore on March 18

At a meeting of county superintendents and attendance officers of the State of Maryland, to be held in Baltimore on March 18, Miss Katherine T. Kirwan, secretary of the Maryland Children's Aid Society, who has been assisting in the welfare activities in Garrett county for the past few months, will discuss "How Garrett county has come to see the need for a social case worker."

Mr. John L. Fitzwater, shool attendance officer for Garrett county, has been assigned the following topic for discussion at the same meeting: "What is the advantage in finding out the assets as well as the liabilities of children who are attendance problems?"

OAKLAND HIGH NEWS

An educational program was rendered in the commercial room on the afternoon of February 19. Talks were given by Oma DeBerry, Mary Murphy, Margy Junkins, Hazel Reall, Joseph Sollars and Mary Merrill. The program was centered about the life of George Washington and at its conclusion a short talk was given by Mr. E. S. Smith.

Both the boys' and girls' basketball teams motored to Davis last Thursday night and were defeated by the scores of 36 to 24; girls, 34 to 8. Rice with seven field goals and seven out of eleven fouls led the scorers. Butler also made two field goals for Oakland.

On Saturday night the teams went to Thomas and were again defeated, the boys losing 32-21 and the girls 22 to 14. Peddicord, Ray, Rice and Maroney each made two field goals, while Butler contributed one.

Tuesday night the O. H. S. team met the Oakland A. A. and were defeated by the score of 36 to 19. In the preliminary game the O. H. S. girls met the Rowlesburg girls and defeated them 26 to 23.

Last Thursday night a good will game was played at O. H. S. between the Friendsville F. F. A. club and the Oakland F. F. A. club. The Oakland boys led until the last quarter when a spurt by the visitors gave them a nine-point margin. The final score was 30 to 21.

The Phi Alpha Chi geometry club will hold a dance in the auditorium on Wednesday, March 2.

A Martha Washington party was given by the members of the Mothers' Circle last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Ralph Weber. The members came dressed in colonial costume, danced the minuet, played games and had a number of contests. Refreshments were served.

On each Friday evening during Lent a short service of Evening Prayer is held at 7:30 p. m. in St. Matthew's church, Oakland. In place of an address, the Rector, Rev. D. C. Trimble, is lectiring on the book of Acts, and the life of St. Paul. Everyone is welcome at these services.

The Maryland State Employment Commission gives notice by advertisement in The Republican today that a test for resident State forest wardens for Garrett county will be held at Frostburg on Thursday, March 3, 1932. One person to be appointed must reside in the vicinity of Kitzmiller and the other in the New Germany community.

Mr. Joe H. Ervin, field leader of Playground Athletic League of Maryland, was in Garrett county Friday where he inspected the various athletic courts connected with the public schools and will make his report to the chief office in Baltimore. At none of the schools inspected were the halls for basketball games of sufficient size and proportion.

Mrs. Frank E. Rathbun entertained with a bridge dinner at her home on Tuesday evening. Six tables were in play. Those present included Mrs. E. R. Jones, Mrs. Harold Harned, Mrs. J. Gordon Mealy, Mrs. C. M. Sincell, Mrs. Neil Fraley, Mrs. C. A. Fleegle, Mrs. Byron Besse, Mrs. Donald R. Sincell, Mrs. Frederick Thayer, Mrs. Cecil Smith, Mrs. Albert Lee, Mrs. L. K. Edward Offutt, Mrs. Fred Peddicord, Mrs. Emroy Bolden, Mrs. Julius Littman, Mrs. Paul Naylor, Mrs. Ernest Liller, Miss Edith Bolden, Miss Helen Townshend and Miss Campbell. High honors were won by Mrs. Harold Harned, with Mrs. Thayer second and Mrs. Naylor consolation.

Masonic and Eastern Star Banquet Attended by Eighty-three

Addresses on Martha Washington and George Washington, by Mrs. Paul B. Naylor and Delbert Davis respectively, were the features of the Masonic and Eastern Star banquet held on Monday evening in the William-James hotel in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birth of the first President. Eighty-three were in attendance.

Solos were rendered by Miss Helen Jones and Mrs. Harold H. Harned, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. D. R. Sincell, and there was group singing throughout the program. Walter W. Dawson acted as toastmaster, and the invocation was given by Rev. W. B. Brock.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Davis, Mr. and Mrs Cecil Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fleegle, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Leighton, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ray Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Shirer, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Naylor, Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Harned, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton D. Whipkey, Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Milburn Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse J. Ashby, Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Shilke.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Graser, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Sincell, Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Selby, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McComas, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sincell, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Bittle, Mr. and Mrs. C. Morris Sincell, Rev. and Mrs. Walter B. Brock, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin S. Smith, Miss Martha Engle, Mr. Robert Hoffman, Mrs. Olivia Mitchell, Mr. S. Townshend Naylor, Miss Geraldine Nordeck, Mr. Edwin Elias, Miss Betty Broadwater, Dr. N. I. Browning, and Benj. H. Sincell.

Mr. E. E. Kessel, of Petersburg, W. Va., is now employed as salesman by the Sharps Motor Company.

Mr. J. M. Falkenstein went to Myersville yesterday for a visit of a few weeks with his son and daughter.

Orphans' Court Judge Homer C. Friend, of Friendsville, was a business caller at The Republican office on Tuesday.

Mr. Guy Yutzy spent Saturday and Sunday with his daughter Hasaleah, who is a student nurse in Passavant hospital, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Miss Margaret Kahl, who spent the past few days at the home of her father, H. W. Kahl, just north of town, returned to Cumberland on Wednesday.

Mrs. Frederick Thayer and Dr. J. G. Robinson, directors of the union choir, will meet the members in the M. E. church for practice sessions, instead of in the Lutheran church, as previously announced. Sir John Stainer's Crucifixion will be presented on Good Friday.

Floyd and Russell Leighton and their mother, Mrs. Oliver Leighton, returned to Oakland Sunday evening from Baltimore where they had been to visit Clarence Leighton, who was operated upon Saturday at Hopkins Hospital for acute appendicitis, he having suffered an attack while at the hospital with his wife, who is receiving treatment in that instituion.

Arrangements are being made for a community sing to be conducted each Monday evening at Loch Lynn. Mr. Charles E. Hardesty is at the head of the movement and committees from each of the churches of the towns of Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn, as well as organizations of the community will be represented and carry the matter through.

Rev. C. A. Shilke will preach in the Lutheran church at Bittinger on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. E. E. Campbell, for many years pastor of the church, who recently resigned because of ill health, is somewhat improved but unable to do any work. He will reside in the parsonage until later in the spring when he will retire from the ministry.

By advertisement printed in The Republican today, notice is given to the legally qualified voters of Oakland that an election for the purpose of choosing a Mayor to serve for two years, three members of the town council for a like term and a town treasurer for one year, will be held on Monday, March 14. The polls will be open at the hour of 8:00 o'clock a. m. and will close at the hour of 6:00 o'clock p. m.

GOVERNMENT TO OPEN C. M. T. CAMPS ON JULY 6

Month of Health, Education and Patriotism Being Prepared For 4,600 Boys in This Area

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS TEN

A month of health, education and patriotism is being prepared for 4,600 boys from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and District of Columbia and is being offered to those who take the opportunity to enroll in the 1932 Citizens' Military Training camps, to be held from July 6 to August 4. Garrett county's quota is ten.

Prof. F. E. Rathbun, superintendent of schools, is chairman of the procurement agency for Garrett county with the following as members of the committee: O. P. Jones, Kitzmiller; Wilbur J. Glenn, Friendsville; B. O. Aiken, Accident; W. D. Mullinix, Grantsville; Asa Lewis, Kempton, and Foster D. Bittle, Oakland.

Applicants from Garrett county will go to Fort George G. Meade, between Baltimore and Washington, where 2,100 will be stationed. A boy must be 17 years old, and physically fit, before having his application accepted. Thus far Garrett county has never filled its quota.

The purpose of the camps is to train good healthy Americans to carry on the Nation's work and perpetuate its institutions; develop young men who will hold their heads high and take honored places in the community and who will spread the doctrine of healthy, democratic Americanism by their daily lives.

There is work to be done in these camps, a bulletin states, drills, field maneuvers, marches, organized athletics, school and indoor instruction, but there will also be wholesome and elevating recreation.

All who desire to attend camp are requested to get their blanks filled in and mailed as it is expected there will be a waiting list long before camp opens.

Rev. Brock Speaks at Mid-Week Lenten Services Last Night

Rev. Walter B. Brock was the speaker at the union mid-week Lenten service, held last night in St. Mark's Lutheran church. Rev. Brock's subject was "Pilate—the Politician."

The service next Wednesday evening will be held in St. Matthew's Episcopal church when Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor of the M. E. church, will preach the sermon on "Mary Magdalene."

The offerings at these union services are being given over to the Daily Vacation Bible School fund.

Grocery Company Elects Officers

T. C. Dye, Piedmont, was elected a director of the Piedmont Grocery Company, Tuesday at the annual meeting of the stockholders. The vacancy was caused by the death of the late Judge F. M. Reynolds. The other directors, all re-elected, are: T. D. Campbell, Piedmont; W. A. Beavers, Grafton, W. Va.; C. K. Wilson, Burlington, W. Va.; C. H. Vossler, Keyser, W. Va.; E. J. Roberts, Westernport; D. Edawrd Offutt, Oakland.

All in attendance at the meeting expressed themselves as well pleased with the condition of the company's affairs under the prevailing business conditions.

DIED.

J. FREDERICK REINHARDT

J. Frederick Reinhardt, aged 74 years, died at the home of his son, J. Howard Reinhardt, in Oakland, on Friday morning at nine o'clock, the cause of death being a heart attack which Mr. Reinhardt suffered a few minutes before his demise. His son and daughter-in-law were at Binghampton, N. Y., with relatives and friends and only the housekeeper was present at the time. Mr. Reinhardt called a physician by telephone, telling him he was ill, but he had succumbed before the physician arrived.

Mr. Reinhardt was connected with the Mount Aairy Canning Company for a number of years and was well known to the people of the county. His remains were sent to Westminster Saturday evening at which place funeral services were held on Monday afternoon. He is survived by one son, Mr. J. Howard Reinhardt. He was a member of the Westminster Lutheran church.

MRS. GEORGE W. CUSTER

Mrs. George W. Custer, aged 63 years, died at her home in Grafton, W. Va., on Wednesday, February 10, after being ill only a few hours.

Funeral services were held on Friday, February 12, from the home, Rev. Jones officiating. Interment was made in Grafton cemetery.

Mrs. Custer is survived by her husband, formerly of near Hoyes, and by four children; also by two brothers and four sisters: T. E. Bishoff, Oakland; W. E. Bishoff, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. G. W. Kemp, Princess Anne, Md.; Mrs. Henry P. Miller, Grantsville; Mrs. H. M. Castell, Grafton, and Mrs. Paul Mitchell, of Oakland.

Mrs. Custer was the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. George E. Bishoff, of Garrett county, being born in Preston county, but lived at Hoyes until about 20 years ago when with her family she removed to Grafton. She was a member of the M. E. church.

CHARLES E. WEGMAN

Charles E. Wegman, aged 69 years, native of Grantsville, and a former sheriff of Garrett county, died at his home in Frostburg, Allegany county, at 11:00 o'clock a. m., Monday, after an illness dating from June, 1931. Mr. Wegman was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wegman, Grantsville, and is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Edith Starkey, of Frostburg, and by three sisters, Mrs. Mollie McCaw, of Oswego, N. Y.; Mrs. Agnes Noakes, Springfield, Mo., and Mrs. Anna Lichty, of Grantsville.

Mr. Wegman's funeral will occur this morning from St. Michael's Catholic church, Frostburg.

Sunday Services in St. Paul's M. E. Church

The theme for the morning service will be "Kingship via the Cross," and for the evening hour the theme will be "The Sin-bearing Christ."

Rebecca Browning will have charge of the Epworth League at 6:45 p. m.

GRANTSVILLE

Traffic on National Road Increasing

Patrolmen on the various roads in this community have been making the annual check-up of traffic during the month of February. During a period of sixteen hours, J. E. Walls counted 595 vehicles as compared to 353 in February, 1931, on the National Highway. The first count on the new road between Grantsville and Jennings was 160. On route 219 the count was 589 and on the Springs road, 470.

Mr. and Mrs. Bender Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bender entertained with a chicken dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Beachy, of Zanesville, Thursday evening. The other guests were Rev. A. C. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Olen Yoder, Irvin Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Olin Miller, Miss Dorothy Younkin, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Yoder.

Bridge Club

Mrs. C. O. Keller entertained the Bridge Club at the home of her father, J. J. Bender, last Tuesday evening. Three tables of bridge were in play. Refreshments were served.

Poultry Raisers Meet

A meeting of the poultrymen of this community will be held in the school building in Grantsville on Tuesday evening, March 1. All who are interested in this project are urged to attend the meeting. Prof. Rice, poultry specialist at the University of Maryland, College Park, will be present and address the poultrymen.

Teachers' Bridge Club

Miss Delta Gantt was hostess to the Teachers' Bridge Club at her home, Thursday night. A very interesting evening was spent.

Washington Celebration

A Washington Bicentennial celebration was held in the Lutheran church here on Sunday morning, February 21. Members of the American Legion drum corps of Salisbury, Pa., were present and furnished music.

The following program was rendered: Hymn, "America"; invocation, Rev. S. D. Sigler; music by band; reading, Walter Weise; music; reading, W. D. Mullinix; duet, Mrs. Harry Bender and Earl Beachy. The offering amounted to $13 and will be devoted to the needs of the County Relief fund. Announcements; music, "The Star Spangled Banner"; benediction, Rev. Sigler.

Community Club to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Grantsville Community Club will be held at the home of Mrs. Lillie B. Younkin, Wednesday afternoon, March 2. Miss Burtis, county demonstrator, will be present and will have charge of the demonstration. All are invited to attend.

Birthday Party

Miss Rose Robeson was hostess at a birthday party at the Dixie Tavern Friday evening, the occasion being in celebration of her natal day. A large number of guests were present.

M. E. Supper A Success

The roast pork supper, which was served at the American Restaurant by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church on last Thursday evening, was counted a success, there being about 150 suppers served. The proceeds will be used for repairs on the parsonage.

Chicken Thieves Busy

It has been reported that poultry houses have been recently raided and chickens stolen from the following persons in this community: U. G. Wiley, William J. Wright, Joel A. Beachy and George Turner.

Grantsville vs. Confluence

The Grantsville and Confluence men's teams played a very interesting game of basketball in Rodamer's Hall in Grantsville, Saturday evening. The score at the close of the game was: Confluence 30, Grantsville 15.

Y. and M. Musicale

Remember the Yoder-Miller quartet's presentation of a musical program in the Lutheran social hall on Thursday evening, March 10.

Personal Mention and Minor News

Paul Livengood, who is a student in the Bliss Electrical school in Washington, D. C., spent the week-end here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Livengood.

BITTINGER

There are those who say that by reason of the unusually mild and open winter, there will be a light crop of maple sweets this season, and as yet there has been very little gathered in this community.

An orchestra from Frostburg, under the direction of Mr. Charles Engle of that city, furnished some excellent music at the regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association which was held in the village school house last Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kissner and little daughter, of Terra Alta, W. Va., spent the week-end with relatives here.

Thomas Platter, of Jennings, passed through this village one evening last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Beachy attended the banquet given for the members of the Maple Sugar Producers' Association, which was held at Mountain Lake Park one evening last week.

The Homemakers Club held its regular February meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Silas C. Beachy last Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Brenneman gave a party at their home here last Thusday evening, the honor guest being their son Cecil who celebrated his twenty-first anniversary.

Messrs. Thomas, Dennis and Poel Brenneman motored to Grantsville on business early in the week.

Messrs. W. E. and Harry Swauger, of Jennings, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Platter, of the same place, were among last week's business visitors to this village.

Both Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp, who have been confined to their rooms with attacks of the grip for some time, are now reported as being well along the road to recovery.

ADVERTISING Applies Power

Advertising puts no virtue into a product.

You can't sell anything with advertising that you can't sell without advertising.

But with advertising you can sell it a lot faster.

Advertising applies the power of a product to speed its acceptance.

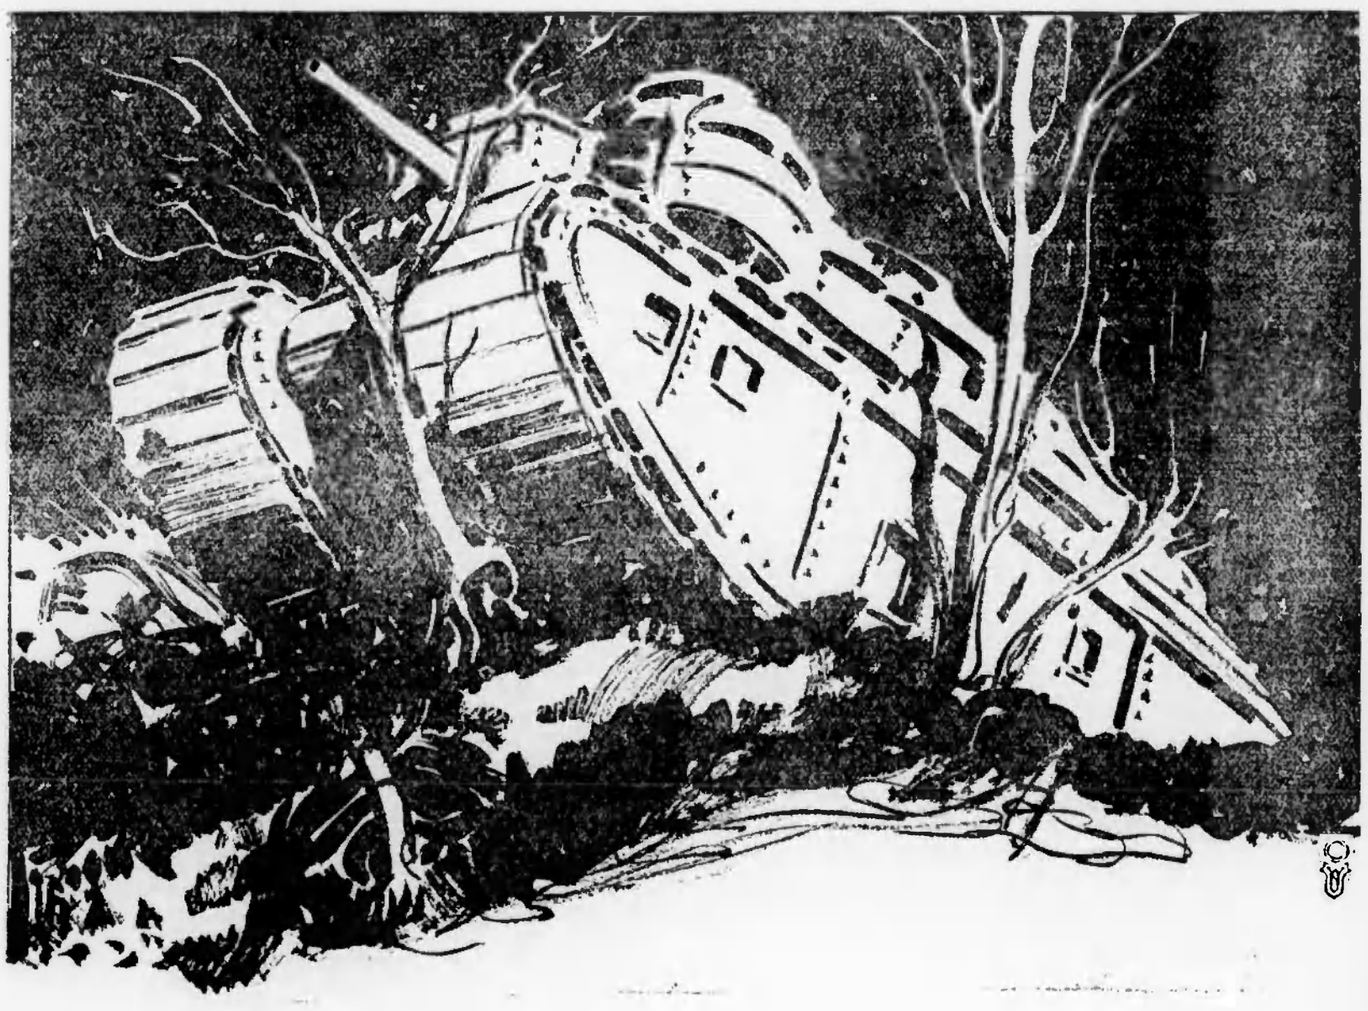
Advertising finds people and tells them quickly. They might find out sometime anyway, but in the meantime valuable machines and merchandise would be standing idle.

All business requires lots of customers. Advertising is the quickest way to get them; the most economical way.

You can put a motor car in low gear and drive across the continent. It's pretty slow. You can also make a good product and wait for it to find customers. You can also have good merchandise on your shelves and racks and wait just as long.

But second and third speeds are made to get there quicker and advertising shortens the time for business accomplishments.

The Republican has a larger circulation than any other newspaper published and circulated in Garrett County.



Consistent Advertising in The Republican Will Put Your Business in High Gear.

MT. LAKE PARK

Perhaps Mayor and Mrs. MacClellan Clayton, who are spending the dinter in California, where, we understand, the weather has not been all sunshine, may get some consolation from the fact that we are having a cold snap for a change. And while the thermometer does not register very low, yet it is some change after seeing the snow drops in the Ben Sineell yard and the flowering quince exhibited in Harned's drug store.

Well, it won't last long, and is but a gentle reminder that there is still a little pep left in Old Man Winter.

The writer, together with a host of friends, regret the passing of J. F. Reinhardt. Somewhat retiring, yet he had the rare quality of making and holding friends. He was always genial and courteous. He will be missed in this community.

There is a strong hope that the road leading from the bowling alley to Deer Park will be commenced this spring. It is a connection that is badly needed and will help not only the Park, but will be a great convenience for those citizens having business in Oakland, especially during the winter months when the dirt roads are generally hard to negotiate. If there is an opportunity to secure the building of this short stretch of road that opportunity ought not to be neglected.

We mentioned a few columns ago that Britten Martin was having his flock of Barred Rocks blood-tested by the Maryland State Poultry Association. Well, we just learned that he has received his certificate. The Association is making a drive against those who advertise blood-tested birds and eggs when in fact they are not entitled to so advertise. While a successful test means close culling of the flock and the disposal of birds that otherwise score well, yet the chances of loss by some of the diseases that chickens are heir to, are much lessened.

The celebration held in the M. E. churh last Sunday evening honoring the birthday of George Washington, was well attended and most thoroughly enjoyed. The program was carried out in a very pleasing manner.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Gay Hayden is undergoing extensive repairs.

Miss Harriet Oswell is confined to her home with a severe cold.

Harland Biggs and Edward Sebold, students at Maryland University, spent the week-end with their parents.

Map in Colors Showing Washington's Travels in Maryland

The Maryland Commission for the Celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington has prepared a map of the State of Maryland showing all the roads over which George Washington traveled through his State, and ninety separate places at which he is known to have stopped.

This map, which was prepared by Mr. J. Spence Howard, had added to it a short accoun of each of the ninety places visited by Washington with the dates of his visits and other information, compiled from his diaries and oher authentic sources by J. Alexis Shriver, of Bel Air, Md., chairman of the committee on county eclebrations, roads and houses.

The map, printed in colors, is a valuable historical record of the 127 trips made by Washington into and through the State of Maryland, which State he visited a greater number of times over a longer period of his life (50 years, from 1748 to 1798) than any other of the thirteen original States, except, of course, his home State, Virginia.

Twenty-five hundred of these maps have been taken by Professor A. S. Cook, State Superintendent of Public Schools, and will be sent to every school in the State; 1,000 have also been taken by Dr. David E. Weglein, Superintendent of Schools of Baltimore City, to be distributed among the Baltimore schools. Ten thousand of these maps have been printed and are now ready for distribution. They may be had by applying to J. Alexis Shriver, Bel Air, Md. Send 10 cents for expense of mailing.

Trees Planted at the Grammar School Dedicated on Monday

Trees which were planted last year on the grounds of the Oakland grammar school were dedicated at a ceremony held on Monday in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

A program was carried out in the school building, which was followed by a ceremony out of doors. The program included:

Song, America; history of the flag, Wilbur Altstetter; flag salute, by school; song, Old Virginia; reading, Washington, Virginia Mason; the American Creed, Betty Knepper; song, America, the Beautiful; essay, the boyhood and youth of Washington; Alice Whorton; essay, the Winter at Valley Forge, Betty Jackson; song, Father of the Land we Love; essay, Washington the Soldier, John Baird; essay, Washington the President, Edward Paugh; song, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean; essay, Boyhood of Gen. Washington, Betty Morgan; essay, George Washington, Martha Kendall; play, grade 5, Return of Martha and George, with Jane Fraley, Catherine Glotfelty, Edwin Darby and Ervin Smith as the characters; song, Star Spangled Banner.

Dedication Exercises

Rev. C. A. Shilke made the prayer at the dedication exercises held in the school grounds, which was followed by a scripture reading by Prentiss Porter. The tree-planting song was sung by the school and then Mr. H. A. Loraditch made an address.

M. L. Stier, principal, then presented the trees to the school and the school children accepted them by giving the tree the planters' pledge. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Shilke.

KEEP WELL CHILD AWAY FROM ONE HAVING COLD

Is Hard To Distinguish From Whooping Cough In Early Stage

Speaking of whooping cough, which is always prevalent at this time of the year, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said: "In its early stages, whooping cough can easily be taken for an ordinary cold. On that account, it is much safer to regard every cold as a possible danger signal and to act accordingly.

"Whooping cough is hardest on the babies and young children—any mother who has been through a spell of it with her children knows this from her own experience—therefore we should take special eare to protect the babies and all young children from exposure to the disease. One of the best ways to safeguard them is to keep them away from any persons—young or old—who have colds.

"It is a great mistake for mothers to say of whooping cough or of any of the so-called children's diseases that since they are only children's diseases all of the children may as well have them together and have them over. They don't realize the risks they are running when they let the sick and well play together, or sleep together or drink from the same cup, use the same towels, share the same handkerchief, or use the same toys. Whooping cough is a serious disease not only because of the suffering it causes but because it often leaves some after-effect that weakens the child's constitution or that damages the heart or kidneys, or other organs. It is especially fatal for babies and children under five. The records of the Maryland State Department of Health show that one out of every five babies who gets the disease is likely to die from it.

"In the last ten years over 35,000 children in Maryland have had whooping eough, and there have been 1,500 deaths from the disease in the State, 96 per cent of which have been among children under five. Last year, 4,371 eases were reported in the State with 125 deaths.

"My advice to mothers is: Don't take chances. When any of your children develops a eold with persistent sneezes and sniffles, send for your doctor and follow his advice; and at all times keep the well children away from those who are sick with 'colds' or with any other 'catching' disease."

Must Have Astonished Good Bishop's Audience

One of the leading broadeasting experts said in an interview in Cincinnati:

"Nearly everybody makes some fluke or other on first talking into a microphone. The usual fluke is to say, when your speech is over, 'There, I hope they heard me all right,' and those last words, of course, go out on the ether along with your prepared speech.

"I remember the case of a dear old bishop. He wound up a radio sermon, 'And if we obey these blessed precepts we will all meet, dearly beloved, in heaven.' And then he turned to me and said, 'I don't think I was too long-winded, do you?'

"Well, I tried to pull out the switch so that the public wouldn't hear that last question of the bishop's, but I wasn't quick enough. The words, 'I don't think,' got past me, and the result was that the bishop's radio congregation heard his eloquent sermon end like this:

"'And if we obey these blessed precepts we will all meet, dearly beloved, in heaven—I don't think.'"

Flowers Prominent in Every Age of Mankind

The love of flowers seems to be an innate thing, a mysterious power that has always had a part in the affairs of men. The Greeks were fond of flowers, especially those having a pleasant perfume. They used them in all kinds of decorations and in their religious ceremonies. The Greeks and Romans both loved roses and used them extensively, and Cleopatra was most extravagant in her use of roses, spending huge sums of money for them. Of all peoples it is said the Hindu has the most sincere love for flowers, having as well a mystic understanding of flower life. He visits his garden with reverence, talks to the flowers, and weaves fanciful stories around them.

Long, long before the Christian era poets sung the praises of flowers, the rose always occupying a prominent place in the ceremony. Dedication to the gods was one of the many honors heaped upon this popular queen of the garden.

Ingersoll's Eloquence

The following is the excerpt from Ingersoll's famous speech in which he characterized James G. Blaine as a plumed knight:

"Our country, crowned with the vast and marvelous achievements of its first century, asks for a man worthy of the past and prophetic of her future; asks for a man who has the audacity of genius; asks for a man who is the grandest combination of heart, conscience and brain beneath her flag—such a man is James G. Blaine. . . . Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor."

PLANS DEVELOP FOR MT. LAKE RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

Religious Education Will Be Tanght This Summer If Mt. Top Ministers Cooperate

MAKE PARK ATTRACTIVE

Rev. A. H. Rapking, Extension sociologist for West Virginia, and Rev. A. Coleman Brown, director of religious education in West Virginia, met with the ministers of the Mt. Top Ministerial Association on Saturday, February 27, to plan a two-day ministers' conference for August and also a summer school of religious education.

The Ministerial association decided to meet on Monday, March 14, to take up both of these plans and see what can be developed. Every minister within the area is urged to attend. "One of the greatest needs of the rural churches of this area is for better trained Sunday school teachers," Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the institute stated.

Community Singing

Already the program of community singing for Garrett county is under way. Loch Lynn has held four meetings with increasing attendance at each meeting, until now it is necessary to find another room. Miss Sara B. Huff, music leader, is expected to attend the meeting next Monday evening and use her song slides.

This week will mark the beginning of a series of community meetings throughout the Allegheny Tableland area, in preparation for the meetings to be held this summer in the amphitheatre at Mt. Lake Park.

Make Park Attractive

"Much of the success of summer resorts depends upon the attractiveness of the property there," Rev. Middaugh stated. "With many new people being brought into the area this summer through the Tableland and Institute, the celebration at Fort Necessity and Somerset, attractive homes and grounds, a civic pride and a public spirit, will do much to impress the visitors with a strong desire to return. No organization or individual can bring this about, but it must come through the voluntary efforts of all.

SON OF COL. LINDBERGH KIDNAPED TUESDAY NIGHT

Has Not Been Found In Spite of Wide Search by Police

Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., 20-months-old son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, was kidnaped Tuesday evening from his nursery in the Lindbergh country home near Hopewell, N. J., and in spite of a wide search by police, is still missing with no apparent clue as to the identity of the kidnapers or the whereabouts of the infant. It has been reported that $50,000 ransom has been demanded which Col. Lindbergh says he will pay upon delivery of the child.

The baby was spirited away in a dark green Chrysler sedan registered in the name of Herbert W. Allen, of Margate, N. J., and reported to have been stolen at Atlantic City.

The car contained two men who stopped at least two persons prior to the kidnaping and asked to be directed to the isolated Lindbergh home.

Within an hour after Colonel Lindbergh telephoned the first alarm police squad cars blocked every Jersey road for miles.

The ehild, clad in a blue sleeping robe, was put to bed at the usual hour, 7:30 Tuesday night. At about ten o'clock someone peered into the nursery. The crib was empty.

Action for Divorce Instituted

Reginald F. Livengood, of near Grantsville, and proprietor of a filling station on Route 40, has instituted an action for divorce from his wife, Nellie F. Livengood, in the Circuit Court for Garrett county. The action is based on statutory grounds. Neil C. Fraley, of Oakland, appears for the plaintiff in the matter.

COURT OF HONOR AWARDS FOURTEEN MERIT BADGES

Eight Are Examined at Regular Meeting Monday Night

Eight second and first class scouts of Oakland Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, passed fourteen merit badge tests at the regular monthly meeting of the Court of Honor, held on Monday night. Members of the court present included Harland L. Jones, chairman; H. A. Loraditch, vice-chairman; W. W. Dawson, Dr. W. W. Grant, James A. Towler, and George H. Hanst, scoutmaster.

Merit badges were awarded as follows: Bernard Gonder, architecture; Eugene Nordeck, firemanship, swimming, cooking; George Stuek, swimming, cooking; Irving Broadwater, firemanship; Carroll Casteel, public health, personal health, physical development; Kenneth Lawton, physical development; Joseph Sollars, lifesaving; Ward Hinebaugh, scholarship and photography.

Hike to Swallow Falls

A few of the scouts under the leadership of Bernard Gonder, Jr., assistant scoutmaster, hiked to Swallow Falls on Saturday. Moving pictures were taken while on their trip which will be shown later at the troop meeting.

Scouts on the hike were George Kerins, Robert Browning, Leroy Stewart, John Baird, and Bernard Gonder, Jr.

J. Billie Yutzy and Hopwood Wooddell have passed all their tenderfoot requirements while John Baird, Ralph Kahl and Paul Kemphfer have completed most of theirs, and are expected to be enrolled soon.

Home Robbed During Absence of Owner

While John McCue, who lives on Oak street, near the Manhattan Hotel, was visiting relatives near Grafton, W. Va., somebody entered his home and stole two feather beds, pillows, bed clothing and all his dishes and cooking utensils. His loss was not discovered until his return last Thursday. He had been absent from Oakland since last October and it was not know how long ago the theft was committed.

All the windows in the dwelling were securely fastened before he left on his visit, he said, and a new lock was placed on the door. According to Mr. McCue the windows were still secured and the lock in place when he returned. No furniture was missing.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER GIVES MONTHLY REPORT

Scarlet Fever Cases at Grantsville Investigated

The County Health Officer, Dr. Geo. E. Clarke, reports the following diseases for the month of February: Scarlet fever, 12; tuberculosis, 3; impetigo, 12; gonorrhoea, 9; syphilis, 4; measles, 3; typhoid fever, 2; pneumonia, 2; whooping cough, 6; undulant fever, 26 chicken pox, 5; influenza, 6; scabies, 3.

All of the scarlet fever cases reported have been around Grantsville. They are probably an extension of the epidemic from Allegany county. Scarlet fever is spread by direct eontact with children who are already affected. The quarantine period is 21 days for the case and seven additional days for each contact in the family.

It is vitally important that all children with even the slightest sore throat should be examined to determine whether or not those children are mild cases or beginning cases. In order to properly examine all children who have been exposed to this disease, the health officer or the nurse is making a daily inspection in the Grantsville school. All children who look suspicious are excluded from school for seven days and visited by the nurse. The absentees of each day are also visited to determine whether or not they have scarlet fever. Parents should not become alarmed, but should watch their children carefully for sore throat, fever, headache and rash on the chest. Call your family physician at the first sign of illness.

Lester Winters, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Winters, of Mountain Lake Park, and Miss Louise Gray, of Mannington, West Va., were marriedd at Fairmont on Friday by Rev. William P. Cline, Jr., pastor of Grace Lutheran church. The groom is a graduate of Oakland high school, class of 1929, and attended Fairmont Business College, Fairmont, W. Va.

EXPECTED TRIAL ENDS AS OFFENDERS PLEAD GUILTY

Local Man Fined $101 And Costs for Driving While Intoxicated

With Justice W. A. Gonder's office crowded to capacity with people expecting to hear an interesting trial, both offenders pleaded guilty to the charges against them Tuesday afternoon and each were fined immediately, bringing the session of court to an abrupt close.

John Hart was fined $101 and costs on the charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor and reckless driving, and Eugene Carney was fined $1 and costs for being drunk and disorderly. They were arrested Monday evening on the Sand Flat-Deer Park cement highway by Corporal Thomas Currie, after sideswiping the Ford automobile owned by W. A. Groves, which was parked along the roadside.

The two were returning to Oakland when the accident occurred. John Hart was driving a Chevrolet car owned by his brother James Hart. After striking the Groves car the Hart car was ditched and damaged to some extent, one fender being badly bent and the front axle and undergear more or less damaged.

William H. Davis, of Davis, W. Va., was fined $101 and costs on Sunday on the charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicants and of reckless driving.

Chester Steyer, of Steyer, Md., was fined $10 and costs before Justice A. S. Teats last Thursday for operating an automobile without a license.

Arrests in each case were made by Corporal Currie.

OAKLAND WILL TAKE PART IN BOYS' WEEK THIS YEAR

Annual Event Will Be Held from April 30th to May 7th

Boys' Week will again be observed in Oakland from April 30 to May 7, it has been announced by a member of the Rotary club. This is in accordance with the national celebration which is under the direction of some of the prominent men in America.

Boys' Week originated in 1920, and since that time has grown to such an extent that it is now observed generally throughout the world. The program will be somewhat similar to the one carried out in Oakland during the past two or three years.

Sunday morning will be "boys in church", with a parade in the afternoon and a program in the Maryland theatre immediately following. Mr. William Kendrick, associated with boys' 4-H club work in the West Virginia University extension service, has been invited to make the address.

Monday will be "Day in Industry;" Tuesday, "Day in School;" Wednesday, "Health Day", with Dr. George E. Clarke, health officer, delivering an address; Thursday, "Citizenship Day;" when a mayor and council will be elected to rule the city from 7 until 9 p. m.; and on Friday the boys of the county will be guests of the Rotary club at a picture of "Washington the Youth." Achievement contests for boys' hobbies will also be held.

To Observe Union Holy Week Services Again This Year

Union Holy Week services for the residents of Oakland will again be held in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, beginning at 12 o'clock noon and lasting one-half hour. The merchants are again asked by the ministers to close their places of business during this half-hour.

Services on Good Friday will be held in St. Paul's M. E. church from one until three o'clock, when a choir composed of members from each of the church choirs of town will render Sir John Stainer's "Crucifixion."

Meeting of Yough Community Boosters

The regular meeting of the Yough Community Boosters was held in the Selbysport school house with the largest attendance ever present including quite a number of ladies. Music was furnished by Kenneth Savage, Aubrey Savage and Glenn Savage, of Friendsville.

Mr. W. H. Rice, Poultry Specialist from the University of Maryland, gave the address. The county agent outlined the "Healthy Grow Chick" contest that is being started in the county. All poultrymen see him for information. The next regular meeting will be held April 6.

CIVIC CLUB TO SPONSOR YARD-GARDEN CONTEST

Local Organization Will Have Charge of Third Annual Contest for Town Beautification

ALL RESIDENTS ELIGIBLE

That the Oakland Civic Club would again sponsor the annual Yard and Garden Contest was decided at the regular meeting of that organization, held one day last week.

All residents of Oakland will be eligible to compete for prizes for the best garden and the most improvement made in their yards during the summer months, Miss Lottie Loar, president of the club, stated. No committee chairman has as yet been named by the Civic Club.

The contest is being continued for the third year in the hope that Oakland citizens will improve their properties by planting flowers and shrubbery and cleaning up their premises.

To make Oakland more attractive is the ultimate goal of the club. "Much good has been accomplished in the past two years," Miss Loar stated, "and it is hoped that the people will respond as heartily to this year's beautification program."

The announcement of the contest is being made earlier this year so that the clean-up will be made in plenty of time to plant. Judges will be selected who will visit three times the places to be improved—once before planting, once during the season and once at the end of the growing season. Entrants in the contest will be personally solicited, the same as last year. Each year there have been over 200 entrants.

MAN AND WIFE LODGED IN JAIL ON 10-DAY SENTENCE

Found Guilty of Being Drunk and Disorderly

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis, the former claiming to be a sewing machine mechanic, are spending ten days in the county jail after having failed to pay a fine of $5 and costs which was imposed upon them by Justice Gonder Monday on charges of being intoxicated and disorderly.

The couple was arrested Saturday afternoon after they had engaged a room above a local restaurant and immediately proceeded to become drunk. They refused to move out when so ordered by the restaurant proprietor and Sheriff Walter Haenftling was called. They were lodged in jail until given their hearing Monday morning.

Davis is alleged to be the same person who tried to persuade Harry Stemple to give him some tabacco and cigarets about two weeks ago and when he refused is said to have told Harry he would be "put on the spot," a favorite sport of gangsters. It is said he was apparently intoxicated at that time and his threat was not taken seriously.

Attendance Law Violated

Earl Gank, Hutton, was given a jail sentence of seven days on last Thursday evening by Justice W. A. Gonder on a charge of violating the school attendance laws.

Playford Gibbs, of Friendsville, was sentenced to serve five days in jail by Justice J. W. Holman, at Friendsville, for the same offense.

Local Pastor Extended Call

A news story from York, Pa., appearing in the Baltimore Sun on February 26, states that Rev. Walter E. Waybright, of Red House, has been elected pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church at New Bridgeville, Pa.

A call was extended to him on February 25 after unanimous congregational approval, the article states. The pastorate of St. Luke's has been vacant since the resignation of the Rev. Glenn T. Hafer, who accepted a call to the Hallam Lutheran church.

Rev. Waybright has been pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, Red House, and St. Luke's, at Texas, W. Va., for several years.

Twenty-Eight Men Get Work

Through a plan of the State Roads Commission, which went into effect on Tuesday, twenty-eight local men are receiving employment three days a week, it has been announced.

Fourteen men are used the first three days of the week, and the remaining fourteen men are used the latter three days. The men are employed in cleaning the roadsides in Garrett county.

TO RECEIVE BIDS ON TWO HIGHWAY PROJECTS HERE

Swanton-Altamont and Gorman-Loch Lynn Roads to be Built

Sealed proposals for building one and seven-tenths miles of concrete road from Gorman toward Loch Lynn Heights, will be received by the State Roads Commission, Baltimore, until 12 M., March 15, according to an advertisement appearing today.

Also proposals will be received for building two and forty-three hundredths miles of concrete road from a point on the Kitzmiller road near Altamont toward Swanton.

The distance between Loch Lynn and Gorman is about eight miles, it is estimated, and two miles of this road leading east from Loch Lynn were completed in 1930. When the second stretch is completed approximately 4.3 miles will remain to be built.

The distance from the Kitzmiller road at Altamont to Swanton is approximately four and one-half miles, none of which has been improved, other than by the county.

Bids will be publicly opened and read on March 15 and it is expected that work on both projects will begin shortly after that date.

CARD PARTY TO BE HELD TO RAISE FUNDS FOR NEEDY

Entertainment Is Being Arranged By Relief Committee

The Oakland Relief Committee is arranging to hold a benefit card party next Thursday evening, March 10, in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Oakland, at eight o'clock. The public is invited to attend. Various card games will be played and prizes awarded. Individual tickets are 50 cents. They are being sold by residents of Oakland or may be purchased at Gonder's drug store.

It is necessary for the committee to have funds with which to purchase staple supplies. The cash on hand at present is inadequate and if this important work is to continue additional funds must be raised. It is hoped that numbers of the citizens will purchase one or more tickets regardless of whether they plan to attend the card party or not. It is everyone's opportunity to aid in a good work.

Generous supplies of food and clothing have been received recently from the following: Food and clothing, Brown's Store, Mrs. DeBerry; food, Mrs. Truman Casteel, Mr. Yoder, Ernest McRobie, Mrs. Altstetter, S. D. Beachy, Mary Lichty, S. W. Slabach, Mrs. Arthur Naylor.

Independent Basketball Team to Play Benefit Game

That the Oakland Independent basketball team would play a game for the benefit of the Central Relief Committee was announced last night following a meeting of that organization. Members of the team offered their services to the Relief Committee several days ago and at the meeting of the committee last night the chairman stated he would be glad to sponsor the contest.

Tentative plans call for the game to be played next Friday evening, March 11, in the Oakland High gymnasium and the opponent of the locals will probably be the Goodwill Firemen Five of Lonaconing, who defeated Oakland here several weeks ago 34 to 30 in an extra period clash. Admission will be 15 and 35 cents.

Maryland Theatre to Install New Sound Equipment

A complete new sound equipment for the Maryland Theatre will be installed and ready for use on the evening of March 7, when the management will present Will Rogers in "Ambassador Bill."

The sound will come directly from the film instead of from a disk, as is now used. The equipment is made by the Universal people, and its approximate cost is $1,500. This change is in keeping with the policy of the Maryland Theatre to give the people of Oakland and surrounding communities the most up-to-date improvements in moving pictures, Bernard I. Gonder, manager, stated.

The remains of Mrs. Carrie Means, daughter of Mr. Truman Mosser, of Swanton, who died in Detroit, Michigan, were brought to Oakland Monday afternoon and interred after brief services conducted at the grave side by Rev. D. C. Trimble, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church. The deceased is survived by her husband, father and four brothers.

MUNICIPAL CANDIDATES TO BE NOMINATED THURSDAY

Meeting of Citizens To Be Held in City Hall March 10 To Name Candidates For Office

ELECTION IS ON MARCH 14

A meeting of citizens for the purpose of nominating candidates for the annual municipal election to be held on Monday, March 14, will occur on next Thursday evening, March 10, at 7:30 o'clock in the City Hall, it was announced this morning.

All citizens interested in municipal affairs are urged to be present at the meeting and participate in its deliberations. No candidates have appeared openly in the field as yet, but it is expected that there will be a number at the meeting.

At the election the voters will select one person to be Mayor of Oakland, three persons as members of the Town Council and one person for the office of Town Treasurer, the Mayor and the Councilmen to serve terms of two years and the Treasurer a term of one year.

The retiring mayor is Grover C. Stemple and the retiring Councilmen are R. C. McComas, Ralph T. Thayer and Howard P. Stuck. Miss Frances Hamill is the retiring City Treasurer, who has been chosen each succeeding year for some years without opposition.

TO DECIDE CHAMPIONS OF HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

Friendsville-Oakland Contest to Be Staged at Westernport

The High School basketball championship of the county will be decided Saturday evening on the Bruce High school court in Westernport, it was decided at a conference between F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent; W. J. Glenn, principal of Friendsville High school, and Foster D. Bittle, principal of Oakland High school, on Tuesday evening.

The place for holding the championship contest was agreed upon only after much discussion on the subject. Mr. Glenn wanted the game played in Frostburg, while Mr. Bittle suggested the Naylor Hall in Oakland, which has not been in use for two years and hence could be considered a neutral floor. This would give more people of the county an opportunity of seeing the game, it was contended.

Joe Ervin, of the Playground Athletic League, will act as referee in the contest, which will start at 8:00 o'clock. A number of people from both Friendsville and Oakland are planning to attend.

28,525 ACRES OF FOREST LAND ARE FIRED IN 1931

A Total of 1,086 Fires Reported by State Forestry Department

A total of 1,086 forest fires were reported in Maryland during 1931, a record from the Maryland State Department of forestry indicates. This is over two-thirds more fires than were reported in 1928, in which year 634 fires constituted the greatest number to have been recorded previous to 1930.

Due to a contiuations of the drought of 1930, fire conditions for 1931 were unusual, the report stated. When weather conditions are normal forest fires seldom occur in Maryland during January, February or the first ten days of March. During this period in 1931, 172 fires occurred. The remainder of the year had normal fire conditions except for a severe ten-day period about the middle of April.

There were 28,525 acres burned in 1931, and two fires over 1,000 acres in size. The estimated damage was $100,314.96 and the cost of fire fighting was $19,909.28. In classifying the fire according to causes, "smoking" leads with 413 fires or 40 percent. Brush burning is next with 279, followed by incendiary, causing 167 fires. Railroads caused 88 fires, miscellaneous, 83; campers, 29; lumbering, 4; lightning, 2; unknown, 3.

Garrett Has 138 Fires

Garrett county had 138 fires, covering an acreage of 4,591¼, with an estimated damage of $9,785.30. The expense of fighting these fires was $2,953.88.

The cause of the fires was divided as follows: railroads, 10; campers, 4; smoking, 44; burning brush, 14; incendiary, 58; miscellaneous, 8; false alarms, 33.

Lesson for March 6

JESUS WASHES HIS DISCIPLES' FEET

LESSON TEXT—John 13:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Performs a Humble Task.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dignifies Lowly Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spirit of Christianity.

I. Christ's Amazing Love for His Own (vv. 1-3).

Jesus was fully conscious of what was immediately before him. He knew that the cross with all its shame and anguish was upon him. He knew that his disciples would shamefully forsake him in a few hours. He knew that one of that number would be the instrument in the hands of the Devil in his betrayal. He was fully conscious of his deity. He knew that all things were in his hands. Despite all this, he displayed great patience and manifested untiring love. He did not withdraw his love from them because of their weakness and the shameful failure which he knew would soon be made manifest. He not only loved them to the end of his earthly ministry, but loved them unto the "uttermost." "Loved to the uttermost" means that he bestowed upon them his love even to the extent of taking their place in death.

II. Christ Washing the Disciples' Feet (vv. 4-11).

This act was symbolic of his amazing love for his disciples. Jesus did not regard his hands too holy to do this menial service.

1. Steps in this service (vv. 4-6).
a. He rises from supper.
b. Laid aside his garments.
c. Took a towel and girded himself.
d. Poured water into a basin.
e. Washed his disciples' feet.
f. Wiped them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

These steps symbolize Christ's entire work of redemption. His rising from supper represents his rising from his place of enjoyment in the heavenly glory. His laying aside his garments symbolized his putting aside his vesture of majesty (Phil. 2:7, 8). His girding himself symbolized his taking the form of a servant (Phil. 2:7). The water in the basin—his cleansing blood. His washing of the disciples' feet—his actual cleansing of them through his Word (John 15:3; Eph. 5:26). His taking his garments again—his returning to his place and position of glory.

2. Peter's impetuosity and ignorance (vv. 6-9). When he realized what the Lord was doing, he refused to have his feet washed. When he realized the peril of refusal, he desired to be fully washed. He went from one extreme to another.

3. The significance of this service to those who participate in it (vv. 8-11).

a. It is a spiritual cleansing (v. 8). Fellowship with Jesus is only possible as we are continuously cleansed from our sins. The cleansing here is not the washing of regeneration, but that of sanctification. Even those who are regenerated need the continual cleansing of Christ's blood in order to have fellowship with him. He that is regenerated; that is, washed in the blood of Christ (symbolized by water baptism), does not need a repetition of the act, but he needs the cleasing of sanctification (symbolized by the washing of the feet).

b. A badge of brotherly affection (v. 14). This act showed his abandonment to the service of his disciples. This is a lesson that is much needed today. True love is tested by the service it renders.

c. A proof of humility (v. 15). This was a lesson much needed by the disciples, and much needed by us all today. They had just been disputing as to who should be the greatest in the kingdom. Thus their selfish ambition was expressing itself. On every hand we see expressions of pride, vanity, and even arrogance, in those who are professed followers of the lowly Jesus.

d. Equalization (v. 16). As the disciples were thus served by Jesus Christ, their vain ambitions were rebuked. To enter into this service in the Spirit of Christ is to encounter a leveling of humanity.

III. An Example for Us (vv. 14-16).

Christ the Lord of all became the servant of all, and his disciples are under solemn obligation to follow him in their service to others.

This obligation rests upon his lordship (v. 14).

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Full redemption removes remorse.

Christ can change sadness to gladness.

• • •

Sin is like a river which begins in a quiet spring and ends in a stormy sea.

• • •

Jesus on earth—his path, his spirit, his ways—is the measure of our walk and obedience.

ANYBODY REMEMBER THIS PICTURE OF YESTERDAY?

Old Cuts Uncovered in Search This Week Will Be Published In The Republican

LOOK FOR THE NEXT ONE

In searching for a particular cut, requested by a customer, members of The Republican staff uncovered a number of plates, showing groups of people gathered at various places in the past. Some of them are in the dim past, while others are not so old.

In the hopes that these plates might recall interesting events in the lives of its many readers, The Republican will reprint a few of them, beginning this week with a picture taken in front of the Oakland Grammar school building.

Information as to the exact date the picture was taken, and some of the people shown in it, will be received at The Republican office with pleasure.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

We have some newcomers in our fair town, and I never would have known they were living here had their names not been announced from the Fairmont station where the Boys' Band was broadcasting. They were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Ratbush, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton D. Whiskey, Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Waylor, Dr. and Mrs. Boardwater and Mr. Condor and Mr. Kalball (Col. Bell).

And did Mayor Stemple have Microphobia for the first few seconds of his talk! When I asked him for his speech for publication I told him I wanted everything except the tremolos. Microphobia, if you must know, is a disease. Very few people are immune. It strikes one some minutes before he faces the "mike" and usually lingers a few minutes after he begins speaking.

Due to Mayor Stemple's strong constitution, his recovery was rapid, and before he had passed through the introduction he had conquered the disease without resorting to stimulants. And then, did he tell them about Oakland? And how! Mayor's speech, minus the tremolos, is found on another page of The Republican today.

In case any of the Legionaires or Rotarians want to know anything about Fort Necessity, I believe that I can arrange to get a speaker here to address them on the subject.

The high school students who went to Cumberland to see and hear Admiral Byrd last Friday afternoon thought they were near the South Pole on their return journey. Their bus broke down and they called Stanton's truck into service, and coming back, it wasn't so hot. It's a little early for open air joy riding.

I WONDER——

How many people in the county there are with birthdays on February 29th? Besides Lois Ross.

If anybody in Oakland can beat me wiggling my ears.

If we are going to have any winter, and if the summer will be turned topsy-turvy.

If Archibaldson will ever grow up.

If we are helping the Relief Committee as much as we ought?

If anybody still reads this column.

If Henry McComas can whistle with that front tooth missing.

How Harry Stemple would look on stilts.

Who's going to run for Mayor.

How many bachelors will still be bachelors on January 1, 1933.

How's your Aunt Fanny?

You're Full of Soup

Tell me what you eat and I'll tell you what you are.

Biting the nails is no indication that the system needs iron.

The human body requires so many calories to keep it warm. A calorie is that amount of heat required to change a square inch of goose flesh to 97 degrees Fahrenheit, Eastern Standard Time. I will show you the effects of various foods upon the body and gravy upon the vest.

Food is divided into several groups: Fats, starches, blueing, and ironing waxes. We get our heat from the sugars, starches and red underwear. A suit of red underwear is equivalent in heating value to two portions of horseradish, a bottle of tobasco, two oil stoves and one pipeless furnace.

Meat is a vegetable by-product. It is simply hay, grass and grain that has been predigested by some animal.

Grapefruit is a large orange that has been crossed with a shower bath like Archibaldson's.

And now, tell me what you eat, and I'll tell you what you are. I'll tell you what you are anyway—you—?!-!.!?:*-?. Besides that you are just an ordinary human being and would like to eat everything if you were sure you wouldn't get fat, fatter, or fattest.

Take Scoop's advice—eat what you want and laugh—at least you can laugh at the other fellow who followed the same advice. Laughing jiggles the liver, nourishes the funny-bone and tickles the palate. And to those who never had their palate tickled before, believe me, it is some sensation!

DON'T WAIT UNTIL TEETH ACHE TO SEE THE DENTIST

Doctor of Oral Hygiene Advises Seeing Dentist Twice a Year

Urging parents to take their children to their dentist for an examination and the necessary dental attention at least once every six months, Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health, said recently: "Many parents are willing enough to have their children see a dentist once a year, but they question the need for making a second visit within the year, when apparently all necessary work was finished at the first visit.

"They somehow get the impression," he continued, "that defects are not likely to develop after their first visit has been made. They don't realize that many things in the life of the growing child—such as errors in diet, and exposure to infections, may affect mouth health and the health of the teeth just as they affect the general health of the child. The same is true of adults. On that account neither children nor grown-ups are adequately safeguarded when a hard and fast rule is followed in regard to the twice yearly visit to the dentist.

"Tooth decay can develop and spread to an alarming degree in a very short period. That is why the rule should read, 'Visit your dentist twice a year or as often as he advises, and go straight to him at the first indication of tooth ache.' Tooth ache is a warning signal. Neglecting the warning is dangerous.

"Mothers have learned that the best way to keep the well baby well is through regular medical superivision. The best way to keep the mouth and teeth healthy is through regular dental supervision. A visit to the dentist every six months will enable him to discover new defects when they are in the early stages and when corrections can be made with little or no trouble.

"All disease prevention and health promotion have to be carried on on a cooperative basis. Give your dentist a chance to do his part by having him make an inspection of your teeth with the necessary corrections at least once every six months. But do your part, too, by eating tooth-strengthening foods, by taking care of your general health and by the thorough cleansing of your mouth and teeth twice a day, or oftener."

LEGAL SAFEGUARDS OF LAWLESS ENCOURAGEMENT TO COMMISSION OF CRIMES

Immunity Resulting from Trial Technicalities Regarded By New York Prosecutor as Main Cause of Disregard of Law

By JOHN J. BENNETT, Jr.,
Attorney General, State of New York.
(United States Daily)

It is almost superfluous for anyone living in Twentieth Century America to call attention to the fact that the most pressing social problem confronting the people of the United States generally is that of crime.

So accustomed to the crime situation have we become that I fear the full significance of its menacing features is oftentimes lost from our view. Sometimes I believe we have been altogether too indifferent to the eime wave that seems never to languish with us. I often wonder whether, if a determined people decided to seek the solution or the solutions of this problem, they might not reduce the appalling social waste resulting therefrom.

I sincerely doubt that the population at large is even remotely aware of the extent to which crime has grown in the United States, or of the power that is wielded by the invisible government of the underworld.

In the teeming history of the United States, lawlessness has always been found in a greater or lesser degree. I suppose this is because of the circumstances surrounding our growth from the comparatively insignificant nation of 150 years ago to our present exalted position among the countries of the world.

Lawlessness has existed on our frontiers. Lawlessness has been found in our great cities. Lawlessness has been seen in our towns and countryside.

But not, it seems to me, the kind of lawlessness that exists among us today. Where once crime was individualized and even to some extent picturesque, as seen in the eareers of the western bandits, today it is big business, at once ruthless and cold.

The past 10 years have witnessed the rise of the modern racketeer and the gunman gangster. The era thru which we have passed has been replete with instances of criminal daring and insolence almost impossible to conceive.

Into the very warp and woof of our times has been woven the turbulent story of the overlords of vice and the army of desperadoes traveling in their wake. Our times have produced a Capone, an almost mythical figure, concerning whom the newspapers have written tales bordering on the fantastic—In whose career the motion pictures have found a theme for stories lurid beyond the last dream of sensationalism.

And those who read even as they run must have observed that this class to whom I refer, the racketeer and his henchman, the gunman, apparently have been and are immune from punishment. Almost it seems as though the law is impotent in the face of the challenge that has been hurled by the criminal class.

This is indeed a distressing situation. Here consider for a moment the toll that crime has exacted, the full signifieance of the situation will be apparent to all.

The statisticians tell us that the annual crime bill of the United States ranges from $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000. If we place against this estimate—which is, of course, conjectural but nevertheless not far-fetched—the national income aggregating in our best business years approximately $80,000,000,000 we may readily conceive the economic waste resulting from crime.

In arriving at the cost of our annual crime bill the statisticians take into eonsideration not only direct losses resulting from robberies, larcenies and other crimes, but the indirect factors, such as costs of insurance against thieving of every description, costs of maintenance of the vast organization devoted to law enforcement and costs arising out of the operation of prisons.

The picture presented by these statistics is incomplete, however, in that it furnishes no real perspective of the immense social damage resulting from crime; of the misery it brings to the countless thousands who are affected by it; of the degradation and suffering inevitably following in its wake.

Why is it that violent crime flourishes here on such a magnitudinous scale when elsewhere in civilized countries it is not a vexing problem? Frequently, we read that in Germany and England, despite the fact that for 10 years these countries have been held in the grip of sustained economic depression, prisons are being closed because there is no need for them.

I do not subscribe to the bellef that either the Germans or the English are essentially more law-abiding than the people of the United States. Nor do I eoncur with the conclusions of some eritics of our civilization who affirm that we as a people are naturally lawless.

And I refuse to give assent to the theory recently advanced by one of our outstanding historians, that ours is a lawless heritage. But I do believe with most persons who have studied the crime problem that we are distinctly apathetic concerning its solution.

To be sure, we have made superficial attempts to understand the problem. For example, we have introduced in some of our prisons advanced methods of treating criminals confiend there. For instance, in New York State we have instituted a species of self-government in selected State prisons.

We have had mutual welfare leagues, by which presumably the convict is to be taught how to adjust himself to living outside by partiei-pating in the government of himself while in prison. We have created a parole system based on the theory that if we hold out to an imprisoned criminal the hope that by good conduct he will be able to reduce his maximum sentence not only will he be amenable to prison discipline but also grateful for the consideration received.

One grave objection has been raised to the assumptions upon which the parele system is based. It is this: That the most notorious desperadoes on the outside frequently are the most orderly prisoners.

There is a motto among the real, hardened criminals, and it is this: "You can't beat the system"—meaning to say that it is better to adjust oneself to the rigors of prison life and thereby win a comparatively early release than be unruly and intraetable.

We have in the State of New York a probation system based on the idea that the accidental offender should not be sent to prison at all but should be placed under the supervision of a probation officer, whose duty it will be to so advise and guide the offender that he will naver again come in contact with the law. In certain parts of the State where it has been highly developed, the probation system coneededly has been of some value.

In any event, probation has no application whatsoever to second, third, and fourth felony offenders. It is from their ranks that the majority of our vieious criminals is drawn.

We have sought here in the State of New York to solve the problem raised by the modern bandit and his ilk by the enactment of most stringnet legislation—the so-called Baumes laws. We have increased the penalties for the commission of offenses while armed and for the possession of dangerous weapons. We have raised the penalties for second, third, and fourth offenders, even providing that the habitual criminal shall be incarcerated for life.

But despite these attempts to control the crime problem, concededly we have made slight impression. The bandit is still with us, and the ranks of the confirmed criminals are being swelled daily. Our State prisons are erowded to eapacity.

For my own part I believe the only approach to a solution of the erime problem bearing promise of immediate results is that which eontemplates the enactment of basic and far-reaching reforms in the penal law and in the code of criminal procedure.

When I asked, "Why is organized crime of the racketeering type practically unknown in England?" I do not hesitate to answer: Primarily because English justice is swift and certain.

The English people as a whole, I am sure, are inherently no more law-abiding than our own. But this they know: That he who commits a crime in that country stands better than an average chance of paying the penalty attaching thereto.

Jusice there is expeditious because the English have long since reformed their penal code, removing therefrom archaism with which it formerly was cluttered. Many of these same archaisms still persist in the code of criminal procendurs of the State of New York which has its origin in the English common law.

In England, for example, if a defendant refuses to take the stand in his own behalf, the Crown prosecutor has the right to draw the jury's attention to his reluctance personally to deny accusations made against him, pointing out that if the defendant were innocent he would not hesitate to face his aceusers. This conclusion, while not binding on the jury, inevitably must carry great weight.

In the State of New York the District Attorney has not such right. Hence, our prosecuting attorneys, even in the trials of persons known to be of notorious character, are precluded from commenting on the defendant's failure to testify in his own behalf. This binds the hands of the District Attorney in more ways than one, for unless the defendant does testify and thereby throw the door open for cross-examination, his character can not be placed in evidence.

Again, in the English courts and in the United States Federal courts, a judge has the right to comment on the character and evidence of witnesses appearing for the defense. The judiciary of the State of New York have no such power.

Here our judges are mere refugees, restricted to a discussion with the jury of the law applicable to a given case. How much more efficient it would be if our judiciary were permitted to give to the jury the benefit of their experience and their power of analysis and thus lead them to a proper consideration of the evidence.

I believe most fair-minded persons will agree in my conelusion that a fundamental reason for the surprising percentage of convictions obtained in England is that the English judges are not restricted in their presentation of the ease to the jury. To the objection that increasing the power of the judiciary in this respect will lead to judicial abuses, my only answer is that the power has not been abused in either the English or Federal courts.

GRANTSVILLE

Studios Celebrate Bicentennial

The Colonial soiree held by the Choral and Dramatic Association of Holmes-Wallace Studios on Tuesday, February 23, was a brilliant and delightful event. Members of the club and some of their guests wore very eharming colonial costumes and the program presented informally during the evening, was Colonial and patriotic in character.

The opening chorus, "Hail Columbia," was sung after Miss Helen Folk had read how it came to be written in 1789. Mrs. Diefenbaeh played MacDowell's "With Sweet Lavender" and Mr. Irvin Miller and ehorus sang "The Land of Washington." After this came a scene from Constance D'Arey MacKay's "George Washington's Fortune," in which Red Rowan the gipsy, impersonated by Miss Delta Gantt, in a song and gipsy dance tells the fortune of the young surveyor, George Washington, a part played by Clyde Miller. MacDowell's "Log Cabin" was played by Miss Mabel Younkin; Mr. A. J. Miller and the chorus sang "The Yorktown Drum and Fife March," and Miss Ruth Keller read Emerson's poem, "A Nation's Strength." "Father of the Land We Love," written by George M. Cohan and issued by the Bieentennial Commission for use in George Washington celebrations, was sung by Mrs. Harry Bender and chorus just as refreshments were served, and the chorus was repeated, everybody standing, as a toast to the memory of the Father of His Country. A word contest came next, Miss Helen Folk receiving the lady's prize and Mr. A. J. Miller that of the gentleman.

Mr. A. J. Miller and chorus sang "The Flag of our Union" and the festivities of the evening came to a closc with a Yankee Doodle dance in which the members of the club and most of the guests merrily joined.

Grantsville vs. Somerfield

The Grantsville Town Trouncers played an interesting game of basketball in the National Garage Hall with the team from Somerfield, Pa. The local team displayed remarkable ability, but was defeated, the score being 26-16.

Y. P. U. Meets

The Young People's Union of the town met for their regular session in the Lutheran social hall Tuesday evening with an attendance of thirty members. Following the devotional exercises and the business session, an entertainment eommemorating the 200th birthday of the Father of Our Country was held. One interesting feature was a series of contests which were held by five opposing teams and which were named for five famous Americans whose birthdays come in February—Washington, Lincoln, Edison, Lindbergh and St. Valentine. The Lindbergh team won the prize for the highest number of points in the contest.

Union Church Services

Starting Sunday evening, March 13, and continuing until Friday evening, March 18, inclusive, union church services will be held in Grantsville. The meetings will be conducted in the Methodist church Sunday and Monday evenings; in the Reformed church on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and in the Lutheran church Thursday and Friday evenings. Rev. S. D. Sigler, Rev. M. A. Keifer and Rev. A. C. Bell will be in charge.

Methodist Ladies Meet

Mrs. George Edwards entertained the members of the Methodist Ladies' Aid Society at her home last Thursday afternoon. An interesting meeting was led by Mrs. Etta Englc. A delicious two-course luncheon was served.

Successful Operetta

The comic operetta, "Dream Girl," which was presented by the Grantsville High School Glee Club in W. O. W. Hall Friday and Saturday evenings, was very well rendered and very well attended. The play was supervised by Miss Ruth Conley. Musical numbers were of a high class and the parts excellently interpreted by the students of the school taking part, who were Margaret Blocher, Raymond Loechel, Lena Custer, George Murphy, Anna Fresh, Olive Vangilder and Joe Knepp.

Between the acts instrumental and vocal music was furnished by Miss Martha Miller, Carl Fratz, Kenneth Keller and Harland Weitzel; also a monologue by the latter. All of the above are students of Accident High School.

Leap Year Party

Mrs. Fred. Livengood and Mrs. Francis Boucher delightfully entertained at a Leap Year party in honor of Miss Mary Bevans at the home of Mrs. Livengood, Monday evening, February 29. About forty guests were present. All gaily joined in the games, contests and dancing until the wee, small hours of the morning. A delicious two-course luncheon was served.

Y. and M. Musicale

The Yoder-Miller Quartet is holding frequent rehearsals for the musical program to be presented in the Lutheran social hall on Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock. The first part of the program will be composed of popular and old-time favorites, and the latter part Negro spirituals, with accompaniment, in costumes.

Telephone Company Improvements

The Springs Mutual Telephone Co. is rebuilding its line between West Salisbury and St. Paul, Pa.

The Keyser's Ridge Telephone Co. is making repairs and alterations and also eonnecting with the Grantsville central station instead of with the central station at Springs.

Legion Card Party

The American Legion is sponsoring a bridge and 500 card party to be held in W. O. W. Hall, Grantsville, Wednesday evening, March 9. Useful and attractive prizes will be awarded and refreshments will be served. The proeeeds will be used by the local relief eommittee. All are invited.

Bridge Hostesses

Mrs. T. O. Broadwater entertained the Bridge Club at the National Hotel on Tuesday evening. Three tables were in play. Delicious refreshments were served.

Miss Leona Clark was hostess to the Teachers' Bridge Club Thursday evening. The prize was won by Miss Fern Folk.

Home Hygiene Class

The weekly lesson in home hygiene was given Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fred. Livengood to a large number of members of the class. Mrs. Cole, R. N., conducted the discussion and demonstration which dealt with child care. The next meeting of the class will be held on Wednesday afternoon, March 10, from 2:00 to 4:00 o'clock.

Mr. C. H. Bill is spending several days with his brother, Frank Bill, and family, in Lonaconing.

Miss Zola Folk, student in the State Normal school, Frostburg, was a week-end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Patton.

Dewey Epstein, of Baltimore, spent the week-end with friends in Grantsville.

Miss Marion Wisseman, who has completed an eight week's course in the Johnstown Bible school, has returned to her home.

Joseph Hershberger and Solomon Yoder, of Norfolk, Va., are spending some time with relatives and friends in this community.

Miss Daisy Shumaker, Frostburg, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Shumaker this week-end.

Miss Ferne Buckel, Bittinger, was a week-end guest of Miss Mary Bevans.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Beachy have returned to their home in Zanesville, O., after several week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Folk.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Yoder visited Mrs. Lydia Bender, of Scottdale, Pa., last week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Folk and three daughters, of Wilmerding, Pa., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Folk and family.

Mrs. Fred. Hochman and son Glenn and Mrs. Lillie Younkin spent Sunday with Mrs. Tillie Failinger, of the State line.

GORTNER

Mr. Milton Miller preached at the Union church here Sunday morning and Sunday evening. He was accompanied to Gortner by members of his family and by Mr. and Mrs. Simon Yoder, of Grantsville.

Mrs. Mary Breuninger, of Sunnyside, spent Friday afternoon with Mrs. Sam Beachy.

Miss Anna Virginia Slabach returned from Uniontown on Saturday.

Guy Sanders and family, of Fairmont, were week-end visitors to relatives here. They were accompanied to Fairmont Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Taylor.

Misses Sarah Yoder and Sadie Wengard and Mr. Henry Yoder, of Salisbury, Pa.; Messrs. Joe Hershberger and Solomon Yoder, of Lynnhaven, Va., visited relatives and friends here several days the past week.

Earl Lee and Simon and Fred. Swartzentruber took a truckload of Mr. Swartzentruber's beef cattle to the Baltimore market on Wednesday.

Mrs. Roy Lee and Miss Minnie Shaffer were guests of Mrs. I. L. Beckman at Lynndale on Tuesday.

Mrs. Paul Welch, Jos. Feathers, Mrs. Russell Beckman, Mrs. Charles Johnson and Mrs. Will Welch attended the funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cramer at Kingwood on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner, Mrs. Anna Bittinger and son Lawrence Bittinger spent Wednesday in Keyser and Cumberland. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Archie Davis, who visited relatives and friends in this community until Monday.

Mrs. D. J. Swartzentruber spent Thursday afternoon with Mrs. John Kitzmiller.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeWitt, of Hoyes, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Spoerlein.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fulk and sons were guests Saturday and Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Ridder.

Mr. Sam Beachy and family and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sisk were guests on Sunday evening of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dodge.

Clarence Taylor and family contemplate moving on the Russel Stover farm in Pleasant Valley in the near future.

We regret to chronicle the fact that we have lost a family of excellent people by the removal from this community of Sam Beachy and family, who left here on Tuesday for Grantsville where they will have charge of the Orphanage and farm connected therewith. No better selection could have been made by the directors than to place the home in Mr. Beachy's hands.

Mrs. Anna Bittinger and son Lawrence, spent Friday in Terra Alta visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dodge.

Mrs. Mary Mosser left on Sunday to visit her sons Ray and Earl Mosser.

Mr. Cecil Sisk, Mr. and Mrs. George Sisk, who were enroute from Akron, Ohio, to Quantico, Va., called on Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sisk, Monday morning.

Mrs. Hervey Roth visited Mrs. John Rolfe and Mrs. Ray Mosser at Red House on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Artie Dodge and children and Mr. John Wilson spent Saturday near Meyersdale and Grantsville as guests of Messrs. Norman Beachy and Elmer Sehrock in their sugar camps.

HOW JAPANESE AFFECT PEACE PACTS

The disturbing effect which the Japanese invasion of China has had on international peace agreements and international organizations for the settlement of world problems is vividly brought forth in the current issue of the Natonal Republic in an article written by Prof. Verne Dyson, of the University of the Philippines, for the China Weekly Review. In part Professor Dyson says:

"The tragedy of war precedes the battle; the lifeless soldier upon the field, the ruined church and the general destruction of the landscape are only objective indications of antecedent moral disasters. Blood and physical death are merely the outward symbols of tragedy. The real catastrophe is spiritual.

"Manchuria, in advance of the war which threatened there, has already become a world tragedy, an international misforutune more far-reching in its consequences than any actual destruction of life and property which might occur. It will require some weeks yet for humanity to realize fully the extent of its loss.

"The truth is that all the formulas for world peace, all disarmament schedules, all the treaties and elaborate diplomatic structures which the nations patiently erected during the past ten years to prevent war have been swept away. A stubborn Japan in Manchria has ended a fair dream, a great delusion. The word Failure must be writte large upon these instruments by which humanity, exhausted by the greatest of all wars, had hoped to end war:

1. The Four-Power Pacific Treaty.
2. The Five-Power Treaty.
3. The Nine-Power Treaty.
4. The Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact.
5. The League of Nations.

"The Four-Power Pacific Treaty, signed on December 13, 1921, was the first of the hopeful agreements reached at the Washington Conference. By this treaty Great Britain, France, Japan and the United States agreed to respect each other's positions in the Pacific, to settle by a special conference any disputes which might arise betwen them, to confer and jointly determine upon the best means of settling any dispute which might arise between a party to the treaty and an outside nation. This treaty, although favorable to Japan, was the first step in the post-war program to establish world peace. It definitely covers the present Manchurian situation. Japan has violated the spirit and letter of the agreement in not seeking the advice of Great Britain, France and the United States in attempting to settle the misunderstanding with China. This treaty, therefore, may be regardet as a failure.

"The Four-Power Pacific Treaty which at the time was regarded as a definite achievement in favor of world peace and the abolition of war, was followed on February 6, 1922, by the Five-Power Treaty, signed also at the Washington Conference. This agreement apparently was predicted upon the Four-Power treaty, which supposedly afforded a basis for a further advance toward international harmony. The second treaty provided for limitation of naval armaments in keeping with the proposals of Secretary Charles of the United States Department of State, and for the maintenance of the status quo in respect for the fortifications in certain parts of the Pacific. The great delusion began with these two treatics. Next came the supposedly still more powerful Nine-Power Treaty signed also on February 6, 1922, and in turn predicated upon the two previous compacts. In this agreement China was included and became a party to the Open Door policy. The powers, including Japan, bound themselves to respect China's sovereignty, independence and territorial and administrative integrity. These are high sounding phrases which meant much more to the world at that time than they do at the present momemnt.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

D. E. Offutt, president of the Garrett County Bank, and one of the largest taxpayers in the county, forwarded to Senator Getty at Annapolis a bill providing for the issue of bonds to purchase a lot and erect thereon a new court house and jail at Oakland. The old court house required repairs every year and it was argued that the amount expended annually on the old building would more than pay the interest on the bonds for a new building.

Marriages of Miss Maxie Forman to John Elsey; Miss Araminta J. Gnagey to Albert A. Warnck, Miss Emma C. Harvey to John T. Moon, and Miss Flora Alice McRobie to John A. Wright were recorded.

A ball was given in the Glades Hotel which was attended by many Oakland young people.

"Aunt" Caroline Dandridge, a colored woman of Oakland and mother of several children, was declared insane by a jury and was taken to Sylvan Retreat, Cumberland.

The Oakland public school pupils were scheduled to give their annual enteretainment in Offutt's Hall.

E. C. Tillson, prominent citizen of Deer Park, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. William R. Davis, Piedmont, W. Va. For many years Mr. Tillson was business manager of the lumbering interests of Henry G. Davis at Deer Park and was also the proprietor of a hotel there known as the Wing-and-Wing.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Frederick A. Becker was held in the sum of $5,000 on a charge of having entered a Pullman car attached to a passenger train on the Seventeen-Mile Grade of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and held up the pasengers, robbing them of jewels and money.

Miss Pearl Rhoades and William Lawton, Oakland, were married by the Rev. A. B. Riker.

Harold Stanton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Urban Stanton, Grantsville, had his leg broken in a coasting accident.

Plans for the building of homes for Dice Spiker, Isaac A. Paugh, Wm. R. Offutt, C. F. Hammond, C. E. Bender, G. Semmes Hamill, Stuart F. Hamill and John Ault were accepted and work was to begin at once.

Peter F. and Harvey Gortner returned to their home from Baltimore in which city they had been for several months taking a course in automobile construction and operation.

Birthday Surprise Party

A birthday surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd V. Riley, Route 37, on Wednesday evening, February 24, in honor of their son Glenn. Games featured the evening, after which refreshments were served. A taffy pull was also enjoyed. The birthday cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Charles Beckman. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beckman and children Clara and Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. McKinley Harvey and daughters Geraldine and Mary Belle, Emma Filsinger, Nettie Speicher, Lillian Harvey, Hazel Harvey, Irene Schenk, Merle Esworthy, Iris Riley and Leaura Riley; Messrs. Harvey Speicher, Jud Peck, Fredlock Schenk, Rob Roy Paugh, Wm. Hamill, Jr., Bruce Harvey, Harry Filsinger, Dwight Schenk, Albert Friend and Irvin Riley.

MARRIED

Sanders—Reams—Miss Holice G. Reams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Reams, of near Oakland, and Mr. James Austin Sanders, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Sanders, of near Hutton, were married by Rev. J. W. Dawson in Oakland, Saturday, January 16, it has been announced. The couple were attended by Miss Alice Sanders, sister of the groom, and Robert Paugh.

NEW GERMANY

Mrs. Hubert Fresh, Williamsport, accompanied by Misses Mildred and Marie Swisher, State Line, Pa., visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Fresh the past week-end.

Mrs. C. J. Otto spent Friday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Broadwater.

Mr. Alfred Broadwater, Glencoe, Pa., was a business caller in our community this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Warnick and infant son, and Messrs. C. J. Otto and Lloyd Kamp motored to Thurmont, Md., recently, where they visited Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Bright and family.

Austin Kamp and family, Grantsville, and Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Robeson, Frostburg, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Warnick.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wampler and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wampler called at the home of J. E. Wampler recently.

Harold Durst was a guest on Sunday of Willard Otto.

FORMER COUNTY RESIDENT KILLS WAITRESS AND SELF

Daniel W. Bowser, 33, Accuses Woman of "Not Going Straight"

Daniel W. Bowser, aged 33, former resident of Garrett county, and a brother of Earl Bowser, of Somerfield, Pa., killed a waitress, a young woman, named Elizabeth Granovitch, and himself, with a revolver in a Penn Avenue rooming house, Pittsburgh, Tuesday, February 23, after a quarrel due to his accusation that she was not "going straight," as he desired her to do.

Police broke down the door of a room occupied by Miss Granovitch, alias Saunders, aged 19, a short time after her screams and the crack of revolver shots had filled the house. They found the body of the girl and that of Bowser on the floor. There was a bullet wound through her heart and one in Bowser's right temple.

Other occupants of the house said that sounds of a heated argument betwcen the man and girl were heard issuing from her room shortly before the double tragedy.

Five shots were fired, according to statements made by the police when they investigated the matter.

The police found an automatic revolver beside Bowser's right hand when they broke down the door after being summoned to the rooming house by Mrs. Sophie Sachs, the landlady.

They also found two notes, written on two sides of a single sheet of letter paper, in Bowser's pocket. On one side he had written:

Edna said I was making a mistake. I clothed Betty and kept her when she was down and out. She said she was a square shooter. She lied. I gave her all and she wouldn't go straight, so she is going to pay.

(Signed) DAN.

The other note said:

There is something I want Mrs. Edna Podeste, 431 Elm Road, to do for me. Tell her to look around. I left her word. I want my brother to get my trunk, tools and auto. His address is Earl Bowser, Somerfield, Pa. The garage rent is paid.

The landlady said the girl told her she was Elizabeth Saunders when she rented the room about eight weeks ago, but she suspected the name was fictitious. A card bearing the name and address, Mrs. Alex. Granovitch, 317 Locust street, Ambridge, found in the girl's room, gave a clue to her identity.

Communication with that address led to the identification of the girl at the morgue, when Alex Granovitch said the body was that of his daughter Elizabeth. He said the girl had left home about a year ago, after a quarrel about keeping late hours and had not been home for about 7 months.

She had written to her home often, mentioning a job as a domestic and later as a clerk in a 5 and 10 cent store, but never speaking of any man. He said she had completed all but one year of high school when she left home.

Bowser lived at 431 Elm street, Ambridge, and was an electrician, formerly in the employ of the American Bridge Company.

Home Demonstration Agent's Schedule, March 9 to 12

During the month of March the Homemakers Clubs will study ways in which they can use wheat, the cereal which is plentiful, inexpensive and healthful. The clothing group will study the new spring materials and ways of using them in attractive, inexpensive dresses. Anyone in the community who desires to come is cordially invited. The above is the expression of Miss Burtis, demonstration agent.

March 9, Oakland Homemakers Club at 2:00 p. m. with Mrs. C. A. Shilke. Demonstration, "New Ways to Serve Wheat, our least expensive cereal."

March 10, Sunnyside Homemakers Club, at 2:00 p. m. at Grange Hall. Demonstration, "Money saving fabrics and finishes for Spring."

March 11, Kempton Homemakers Club at 7:00 p. m., at the school house.

March 12, Red House 4-H Club at 2:00 p. m., with Helen Mosser.

Testimony Taken In Coal Company Suit

Testimony was taken last Thursday before Judge Albert A. Doub, in the Circuit Court at Cumberland in the suit in equity of Vance H. Burtner and wife against Clair P. Burtner and others, all of Philadelphia, Pa. The plaintiffs seek an injunction to prevent the defendants from selling coal lands in Allegany and Garrett counties.

The Burtner brothers operated coal mines in this county under the name of the Burtner Coal Co. They were also associated in the Penn-Mar Realty Corporation, which with the Independence Fire Insurance Security Co., is a co-defendant. Horace P. Whitworth and George Henderson are attorneys for the plaintiffs, while Walter C. Capper represents the fire insurance company, holders of the bonds of the Burtner Coal Co.

IF TAXES ARE PAST DUE COLLECTOR CAN GET RENT

Statute Effective In Every Section Except Garrett County

A 120-year-old Maryland statute, effective in every section of the State except Garrett county, permitting tax collectors to take tenants' rent in cases where landlords are delinquent in paying their tax assessments, was called to the attention of Baltimore's tax collector one day last week. The reason this more than a century-old law does not affect Garrett county is because the taxes of this county are collectable under a local law passed in the year 1890, according to a local attorney, who has examined the statute applicable to this section of the State.

The opinion of the Baltimore lawyer said, in effect, that when a landlord's taxes on real estate are overdue the city collector need not resort to collecting by tax sale but instead may bill the tenant and collect as much of the tenant's rent as may be needed to pay the taxes.

The opinion was sought from the solicitor of the city and the statute cited in the reply of the assistant solicitor was quoted as saying:

"The tenant or person holding any leasehold estate shall pay to the collector the taxes levied upon the demised premises and shall have his action against the landlord for the sum so paid, and may deduct the same out of the rent reserved, unless otherwise agreed between the lessor and lessee."

The opinion went on to cite several instances of the statute being upheld in the courts. The exception pertaining to Garrett county was also noted.

St. Paul's M. E. Church Notices

The themes for Sunday will be "To Know Him," for the morning hour, and "The Source of Strength" for the 7:30 hour, is the announcement by Rev. J. W. Dawson, pastor. The junior choir will assist the regular church choir at the evening service.

Miss Alice Butt will have charge of the Epworth League services at 6:45 Sunday evening.

Let us do our best to attend all these services during the Lenten season, is the appeal made by Rev. Mr. Dawson.

DIED.

HARRIET ELIZABETH KIMMELL.

Mrs. Harriet Elizabeth Kimmell died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Myers, Oakland, on Monday, February 29, aged 87 years, 7 months and 18 days.

She was born July 11, 1844, in Barbour county, West Va. She joined the U. B. church in early life, living a devout Christian life through all these years. In 1864 she was married to Chauncey Kimmell, who died January 17, 1911. To this union were born fourteen children, ten of whom survive: John W. Kimmell, Westernport; Samuel F. Kimmell, Logan, W. Va.; Chauncey F. Kimmell, Brookville, Pa.; D. O. Kimmell, Shinnston, W. Va.; Totten A. Kimmell, Wolf Summit, W. Va.; Lambert L. Kimmell, Brookville, Pa.; and George F. Kimmell, Akron, Ohio,; Mrs. Patrick Hamill and Mrs. Henry Myers, Oakland; and Mrs. C. L. Browning, Akron, Ohio. She is also survived by twenty-nine grandchildren and twenty-one great grandchildren.

Mrs. Kimmell has been identified with Garrett county for a great many years, her father, Hector Sinclair, having operated a grist mill on the site of what is now Oakland at a time when there were only two buildings, the house in which he lived and the mill which he operated for its owner a Mr. McCarthy.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Thayerville M. E. church, Rev. S. A. Jessc, of Loch Lynn, officiating. Interment was made in the Thayerville cemetery.

MRS. SARAH ANN SAVEDGE.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Savedge, aged 93 years, 5 months and 18 days, died at her home at Deer Park on Thursday night, February 24, at midnight. She was the daughter of the late James W. Smalley and Elizabeth Brant Smalley and was born at Waynesburg, Pa., August 16, 1838. She was the widow of Calvin Savedge who died May 16, 1899.

Mrs. Savedge was the mother of twelve children, five sons and seven daughters and those surviving are James Marshall Savedge, Washington, D. C.; William Robinson Savedge, Sanson Smalley Savedge and Charles Reese Savedge, all of Deer Park; Mrs. Emma Hill, Arnold, Pa.; and Mrs. Lewis Baldwin, of Kitzmiller. She is also survived by 28 grandchildren and 30 great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from her late home on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. D. C. Trimble, pastor of St. Matthew's Episcopal church, Oakland, officiating. Interment was in the Deer Park cemetery.

Pallbearers were Charles Montgomery, Deer Park; Harry Savedge, New Kensington, Pa.; Sherman Hill, Arnold, Pa.; Earl Hill, Arnold, Pa.; Lewis Baldwin, Kitzmiller; and Lloyd McRobie, Deer Park, all grandsons.

Flower girls were Dorothy and Isabella Montgomery, Madaline, Gloria and Willia Savedge, of Deer Park, granddaughters of the deceased.

GILBERT MOON.

A telegram received in Oakland last evening by Miss Bert White announced the death of Gilbert Moon, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Moon was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Moon, formerly of Swanton, but now of Cumberland, and was the husband of Mrs. Ignatius White Moon, formerly of Oakland.

He had been ill a short time of pneumonia and his death occurred at 6 o'clock last evening at Cleveland, and burial services will be conducted in that city at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, according to present plans.

Mr. Moon is survived by his widow, his parents, two children, Betty, 12 years of age, and Jane, 11 years old, three brothers, Harold, of Washington, D. C.; Russell, of Cumberland, and Maynard, of Swanton.

BOYS' BAND RADIO DEBUT MADE AT WMMN STUDIOS

Reception Here Good; Many Congratulatory Messages Received

After having pleased a large number of radio listeners last Sunday by their concert broadcast from station WMMN, Fairmont, judging from the great number of congratulatory messages received, the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland, completed arrangements to broadcast from Station KDKA, Pittsburgh, on Sunday, March 6, from 3:00 until 3:30 p. m.

The reception of the program in Oakland from Fairmont was good and the hour of music was heard by the majority of the townspeople as well as by many residing in adjacent Garrett county towns and on Garrett county farms.

The musical program was interrupted for a few minutes while Mayor Grover C. Stemple, of Oakland, spoke to the radio audience. The Mayor's address follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Radio Audience:—

It is with pleasure, I assure you, that I have the opportunity afforded me through Station WMMN of speaking to you briefly at this time.

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland, Maryland, who is entertaining you at this hour comes to you with the compliments of the citizens of Oakland and of the individual members of the band. In order to fully appreciate this band it is really necessary to see them in person. This band is composed of fifty members who vary in height from four and one-half feet to six feet three inches and in ages ranging from nine years upwards.

I believe that there is no form of entertainment cleaner, purer, more wholesome and educational than is music, and it is a form of entertainment of which one never tires. Quite often composers of music have left their work as a memorial, and a memorial must be something coming from human effort, some achievement that the heart can feel and the eyes see and that can live through the ages.

Music is as important as other arts to the soul and spirit and the teaching of music is justified in our schools and institutions of learning through the inspiration it carries and the elevating influence it exerts. Music is a splendid vocation as a breadwinner, and there is no doubt in my mind but that some day there are members of this band who will be recognized by the public as having achieved fame in music.

This is not a paid musical organization—just boys and young men who are willing to give of their time for the pleasure and training which they receive in turn. The director himself, Mr. Russel Brown, and assistant director, Mr. Julius B. Littman, do not receive any compensation for the hours spent in bringing this band to perfection.

If this concert here at this hour has pleased you in the least we shall feel that we have shared with you a portion of our musical talent of Oakland.

The town of Oakland is the county-seat of Garrett county, and Garrett county is the largest county in area in the State of Maryland. Quite a number of the citizens of Fairmont and vicinity know a great deal about Oakland and Garrett countl, as they are frequent visitors with us. Oakland is a town of approximately two thousand population with all the advantages of a large city, including twenty-four-hour electric service, natural gas, municipal-owned water works and sewage disposal. Our water is drawn from boiling springs and wells that overflow during normal conditions. Oakland is one of the few towns that had sufficient water supply during the recent drought of 1930 and 1931. Oakland is located on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and on Route 37 of the State roads system of Maryland. It is eight miles north of Route 50, or the Northwestern Turnpike, and 27 miles south of Route 40, or the National Highway.

There is located ten miles north of Oakland, on Route 37 what is known as Deep Creek Lake, which has a shore line of seventy-two miles and varies in depth from shallows to sixty-five feet, making it an ideal place for summer recreation and is fast becoming a resort for all lovers of outdoor sports.

Oakland has three good substantial banks that withstood the business depression without the least sign of weakening. Not a place of business of any kind has failed in Oakland during these past trying years.

The town itself is in good financial condition with a tax rate of 90 cents. Our streets are all improved with amiesite and macadam, making them the best possible streets for a city of a much larger population.

Our elementary and high schools are a standard of State requirement and a credit to an institution of learning. The graduates from our schools speak for the high type of education that is laid down by State authorities and carried out by our school officials and instructors.

We have a volunteer fire department second to none in the State of Maryland with a fire fighting equipment valued at $25,000, averaging more than $12 per capita invested in fire fighting apparatus, and composed of two large American-LaFrance fire trucks and all that is required to make a first-class fire company.

Our hotels are modern in every respect, equipped with private baths, running water in all rooms, private dining rooms and private dining room service.

There are many fine things I would like to tell you about Oakland, but time will not permit and I would be taking time allotted to our band for this hour's broadcast, so I extend a most cordial invitation to all my listeners everywhere to visit our wonderful town with a city appearance.

OAKLAND A. A. DEFEATS ROWLESBBURG FIVE 44-25

Locals Run Up Largest Score of Season In Fast Game

Oakland A. A. basketball team easily defeated Rowlesburg in the Oakland High School auditorium last Thursday night 44 to 25, to run up the largest score of the season. Rowlesburg led at quarter time 7 to 6, but the local boys got their eye on the basket and were leading 22 to 13 at half time. They increased their lead during each succeeding quarter.

Pollock and McComas each shot seven field goals for Oakland, while Carrico, with five field goals, led the scoring for Rowlesburg. Rowlesburg was without the service of their star guard, Barrett, former player for Davis-Elkins College, who was ill.

The lineup and summary:

Oakland—44		Rowlesburg—25
Pollock	F	Wotring
Hanst	F	Hooten
McComas	C	Carrico
Nally	G	Rosser
Lee	G	Fretwell

Substitutions—Oakland, Gaves.

Field goals—Oakland, Pollock 7, Hanst 4, McComas 7, Nally 2, Lee 2. Rowlesburg, Wotring 4, Hooten 1, Carrico 5, Fretwell 1.

Foul goals—Oakland, Pollock 0-1, Hanst 0-1, McComas 0-2, Nally 0-1, Lee 0-1. Rowlesburg, Hooten 2-3, Carrico 0-1, Fretwell 1-1.

Referee, Edwin Elias.

In a return game with Rowlesburg at Rowlesburg on Saturday night, Oakland again defeated the River City team 58 to 44. Both teams were "on" when it came to shooting baskets, and it was only a question of who had the ball the most.

Oakland led at half time 29 to 16, but Rowlesburg crept up to within two points of Oakland's showing during the latter part of the game, when the score stood 44 to 42, but Oakland hit the basket for fourteen more points before the final whistle blew, in the meantime holding Rowlesburg to a lone tally. McComas had a big night in shooting ten field goals. Graves, playing at center and taking Pollock's place on the team, made six field goals and played a good floor game. Barrett, former D. and E. college star, and Carrico were the big guns for Rowlesburg.

The lineup and summary:

Oakland—58		Rowlesburg—44
McComas	F	Rosser
Hanst	F	Hooten
Graves	C	Carrico
Nally	G	Barrett
Lee	G	Fretwell

Substitutions—Rowlesburg, Wotring for Rosser.

Field goals—Oakland, McComas 10, Hanst 8, Graves 6, Lee 4. Rowlesburg, Wotring 2, Hooten 1, Carrico 8, Barrett 9.

Foul goals—Oakland, McComas 0-3, Hanst 0-3, Graves 2-3, Lee 0-2. Rowlesburg, Wotring 0-2, Rosser 0-1, Hooten 1-3, Carrico 2-3, Fretwell 1-1.

Oakland defeated Aurora at the Oakland high gym on Tuesday evening, 43 to 24. The local team led 18 to 10 at half time and increased its lead throughout the entire contest.

Field goals were as follows: Oakland, Pollock 4, Hanst 8, McComas 6, Nally 2, Lee 1. Aurora, Parrish 6, Teets 4, Myers 2.

Foul Goals—Oakland, Hanst 0-1, McComas 1-1, Nally 0-1. Aurora—Stemple 0-1, Myers 0-1.

MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever."

Today the Maryland Bible Society makes its initial bow to the people of Maryland through the pages of the excellent journals of the State whoso editors have graciously opened their columns to the executive secretary of this time-honored institution for a weekly message.

It is not the purpose of the writer to spread sectarian propaganda, or to introduce controversial matter into these eolmuns, but rather to tell the story of a great Book, and how it has been preserved through chaging civilizations to bless the world with its message of comfort and dellverance.

There is scarcely to be found in the annals of literature, sacred or profane, a more dramatic story than that of the Bible, that inestimable gift of God to man for the rule and guide of his faith. Its glorious truth, now so universally familiar, and accessible to all who will receive it, was onee the possession only of the learned. Its propagation was from mouth to ear, its record the repository of the sacred breast. In those far-off days of beginnings the prophets method of gaining the truth—precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little, was the only method by which the story of divine revelation could be known, the only means by which men could catch glimpses of that Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

We are apt to think that the golden age of happiness and light is far in the past—some believing that the Garden of Eden was its home—or else far ahead, in some glorious future we may never hope to share. Perhaps the truth lics somewhere between these extremes. Revelation, whether in the realms of science or religion, is a developing thing, and must suffer many reverscs and hindrances as it struggles toward completeness of acceptance by the rank and file of mankind.

"Never in custom's oiled grooves
The world to higher level moves,
But grates and grinds with friction hard
O'er granits boulder and flinty shard.

It is our purpose to trace through the centuries the gratings and grinc ings attending the progress of the Divine Word from the Father's heart through divinely ehosen messengers, in divers ways, and successive ages, down to our own day.

The articles will be brief and each one a unit in itself, so that if any should be missed, the story will not be spoiled for the reader, and yet a continuity will run through the series so that each monograph will be a link in the Bible story chain.

If, while following this series of articles, our readers should be impelled to ask questions, the writer will be happy to have such questions printed in the Maryland Bible Society's corner and will endeavor to answer any and all that are not of a controversial nature.

Next week the story of the origin and purpose of the Maryland Bible Society will be told. Watch your favorite county paper for this and succeeding stories of the Bible in its relation to the march of civilization and the emancipation of the human race.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge, poet, philosopher, omniverous reader, declared that "The Bible is the only book that finds me in all my moods." The book that calls forth such a statement from such a man, is not to be lightly passed by. It has a message for today. Lot us seek it together.

Mr. Clifford Friend, of the Accident Community, Reviews Tax Problems and Paints a Desolate Picture of What Will Happen Should Taxes Not Be Reduced, Evidently Unaware of the Fact that the County Commissioners Control Only About 25 Per Cent of the Levy, the Other 75 Per Cent Being Mandatory Under Laws Passed During Mr. Ritchie's Regime At Annapolis; and In Addition The Board Has Nothing To Do With Fixing Salaries of the School Officials or School Teachers.

(The following communication, appearing in an emasculated form in last week's Mountain Democrat, was brought to The Republican office on Monday by the author, Mr. Clifford Friend, of the Accident community, who requested its publication as he prepared it originally and who was at a loss to know why the Democrat had cut certain portions from it and printed the remaainder. Editor The Republican.)

To the Editor of The Republican.

For the past several months there has been a great deal of discussion about taxes. Our farmers and business men have written down their losses in red for two or three consecutive years now, and after they have used every economy possible they are naturally looking to the subject of taxes. And why not? Taxes have been steadily climbing since the World War. They started to advance with commodity prices and since this was in accordance with the trend of the times nobody thought of doing anything about it. But, alas! taxes did not halt when commodity prices stood still. In this county public salaries already high, were pushed up another notch. Our tax burden already too heavy in boom times was made still heavier right in the face of a price landslide and nation-wide panic.

The fact that a great many of our taxes are delinquent for 1930-31, and that a considerably larger amount will be delinquent at the end of this year, has not apparently caused enough concern in the mind of our officials who are responsible for the county's finances to cause them to take steps to put in effect any economic measures for 1932 in order to provide for the inevitable reduction in revenue. However, an increase in our tax rate is being contemplated in order to provide the necessary funds to keep certain superfluous county employes on the pay roll. Meanwhile, certain other high salaries protected by state legislation must either go on until enough public sentiment is aroused to force the enactment of laws that will give relief or else until our remaining property owners can no longer bear the burden.

The time is close at hand when the majority of our farmers can not continue to pay. This is revealed by a check-up in a certain community where eight out of fifteen farmers who did pay this year did so with borrowed money.

Those very fortunate persons who are on the county pay roll would do well were they to voluntarily accept a reduction. They should know that their is danger of destroying the goose that lays the golden egg. Let us take heed from those counties in other states where the school teachers are working month after month without the accustomed pay check.

During the past two years county employes have benefited to the equivalent of a forty per cent raise in salaries due to falling prices. Since the money to pay these salaries must be earned within the county, let us consider the comparative cost to the farmer on the basis of production:

Suppose we take the employe who receives annually $1,000. In order to pay that salary in 1924-25 the farmer had to produce around five hundred bushels of potatoes at $2.00 per bushel; or around seven hundred bushels of wheat at $1.40 per bushel; or two thousand pounds of wool at 50 cents per pound. But in 1931 the farmer had to produce twenty-five hundred bushels of potatoes at 40 cents; two thousand bushels of wheat at 50 cents, or seven thousand one hundred pounds of wool at 14 cents per pound.

Even yet, this comparison hardly gives one a fair conception of the situation confronting the farmer, for the reason that it is not possible to produce five times as many potatoes, three times as much wheat and three and one-half times as much wool as in 1925, and if it were produced there would be no market. Therefore, the farmer's only hope lies in the direction of reduced expenses and not in increased production.

Unless a substantial change for the better is made before the coming fall, probably fifty per cent of our farm taxes will be delinquent for 1932. At the present rate of spending this would mean a tax increase of possibly seventy-five per cent to those of us who are still able to carry our present share of the burden. Everybody knows that the economic strain of such an excess rate of taxation would surely spell disaster. To raise our present tax rate would be a serious mistake. There is but one possible way and that is to reduce expenses. Public expenditures can be cut in Garrett county just as they have been cut elsewhere. Of course it means that sacrifices must be made. It may mean that we give up our county agent and our health officers and will mean the paring down of road and school expenses. These things can be done, regardless of what certain persons connected with our schools and offices tell us. How can we do otherwise? We have not the means to carry on longer as we have been. Are we going to sit still while the house burns and falls in upon us? We know we are riding to a fall. Do we intend to go headlong over the brink?

Our farmers and business men have spent two very unprofitable years. Property values have plunged down along with commodities. Surpluses have been eaten up and judgment notes and mortgages stand in their place. Cut-throat competition, bad collections, bank failures, frozen assets and lack of credit have added to their woes. High taxes complete the picture.

Now we citizens of Garrett county are struggling through this ordeal hoping to save our homes that we may hand them down to our posterity.

We only ask for a fighting chance. So we say to our responsible public officials: We have economized on our farms, in our mills, our stores and our homes, and we demand of you that you, too, begin now to economize in your administration of our public funds.

CLIFFORD FRIEND.
Accident, Md., Feb. 29, 1932.

Commercial Fertilizers, Feeds and Liming Materials

With the advent of the new fertilizer law, which was put into effect on January 1, Maryland farmers will find a new publication, "Commercial Fertilizers, Commercial Feeds and Agricultural Liming Materials," recently issued by the State Inspection Service at College Park, Md., of real value in explaining the significance of the new law and its application.

The first part of the new bulletin contains a list and description of all brands of fertilizer registered prior to January 14 of this year and intended for 1932 delivery in Maryland. In addition there is a detailed report covering the chemical and microscopical examination of 303 samples of feed taken from November 1 to January 1 by State inspectors and a report of an examination made of 24 liming materials secured during the same period.

The bulletin also contains a statement on the significance of brand names and points out that hitherto certain names have meant but little as indicators of the ingredients present. One of the purposes of the inspection service is to protect purchasers against misleading implications of certain brand names.

Another hopeful feature of the publication is a chart of recommendations for fertilizers applications in various parts of the State according to the new method of expressing nitrogen. Recommendations are given for the four great divisions of the State, Piedmont, Western, Southern and Eastern Shore and for all the principal crops.

Copies may be obtained by writing the State Inspector Service, College Park, for a copy of Bulletin No. 142.

Evergreens for Shade

Casual observation will reveal to anyone the fact that many of the common evergreens such as arborvitaes and junipers, when planted on the shady side of buildings are not in a flourishing condition. Too little attention is given to this matter of selecting types which will succeed in these more or less unfavorable situations. The hemlock seems especially adapted for such use, the yews succeed fairly well and a few junipers, such as Pfitzer's, succeed in light shade.

Generally, however, the broad-leaved types are the ones to select. Of these the English ivy is very adaptable. It may be used on the wall, on lattice or fence and makes an attractive ground cover. Pachysandra and periwinkle are useful for low plantings. Rhododendrons and azaleas do well on the north or east, especially if not overhung by large trees. The native holly has a handsome green foilage of a dark hue and since it stands clipping well may be grown in the form of a shrub, if desired. The native inkberry and Japanese holly are shrubby forms of holly, which merit wider use. The evergreen holly is now being used extensively and should be substituted for the Japanese cnonymus which is also subject to attacks of the scale. Various forms of boxwood are particularly useful in shady locations. Other forms which should not be overlooked are the Oregon grape, Mountain laurel, Pieris and leucothoe.

Excellent evergreen barberries have been introduced from China in recent years. The Leatherleaf viburnum is striking and there are other new things of interest for shady situations.

TESTED RECEIPTS FOR CANNED FOODS

Beef Loaf With Baked Beans

2½ cups canned roast beef, 1 well beaten egg, 1 cup bread crumbs, 1 cup juice from canned tomatoes, salt, pepper, 3 bananas, butter.

Run the meat through a chopper and add the egg, bread crumbs, tomato juice and seasoning. Form into a loaf and bake 20 minutes. Peel and clice the bananas lengthwise and arrange around the nteat, continue baking 10 minutes, basting with the melted butter. Serve on a hot platter, the meat loaf in the center with the bananas around it.

Pea Salad

2½ cups small sized peas, 2 tablespoons chopped onions, 4 tablespoons cream cheese (grated), 4 tablespoons sweet pickle, lettuce, salad dressing.

Cut cheese and pickles into small pieces. Mix with peas. Add salad dressing and serve upon lettuce leaves.

Corn Dumplings

½ cup canned corn put through food chopper, 2 cups flour, 4 tablespoons fat, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ to ⅔ cup liquid, which may be either milk or water.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in the shortening and add the liquid slowly stirring as little as possible. Put on a lightly floured board and roll to a thickness of about a quarter of an inch. Cut with a 3-inch biscuit cutter. Season the corn pulp to taste and put 1 teaspoon of the seasoned pulp on each biscuit round. Bring up the edges and pinch lightly together. Bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes or until well browned. These may be served with meat gravy or with a well seasoned cheese sauce. To make the cheese sauce, use 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 small onion chopped, ¼ teaspoon salt, a few grains, paprike, a few grains white pepper, and 4 tablespoons grated cheese. Cook the onion, butter and seasonings together, add the flour, stir until smooth. Add the milk slowly, stirring constantly until the mixture begins to thicken, then add the grated cheese and stir until smooth. Serve at once.

Sauerkraut Cottage Pie

1 cup cooked minced meat, 1 cup sauerkraut chopped, 1 cup stock or gravy, salt if needed, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 cups mashed potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter.

Mix the meat, sauerkraut, stock and seasonings. Taste it to see if more salt is needed. Pour into a greased baking dish. Put the well mashed potatoes on top, piling it lightly. Dot it with the butter. Cook in a moderate oven about 30 minutes, or until the potato is brown. This will serve four.

Origin of "Yankee"

There are several theories about the origin of the word "Yankee." Dr. William Gordon said it was a cant word in use at Cambridge, Mass., as early as 1713, denoting excellence. He supposed it was originally a by-word in college. Thierry says it is a corruption of Jankin, a diminutive of John. Anbury says it is derived from a Cherokee word "eankke," which signified "coward," "slave." Another theory is that the Indians, in endeavoring to pronounce the words English and Englals, made it into Yengees, which the English changed to Yankee.

ADVERTISING Applies Power

Advertising puts no virtue into a product.

You can't sell anything with advertising that you can't sell without advertising.

But with advertising you can sell it a lot faster.

Advertising applies the power of a product to speed its acceptance.

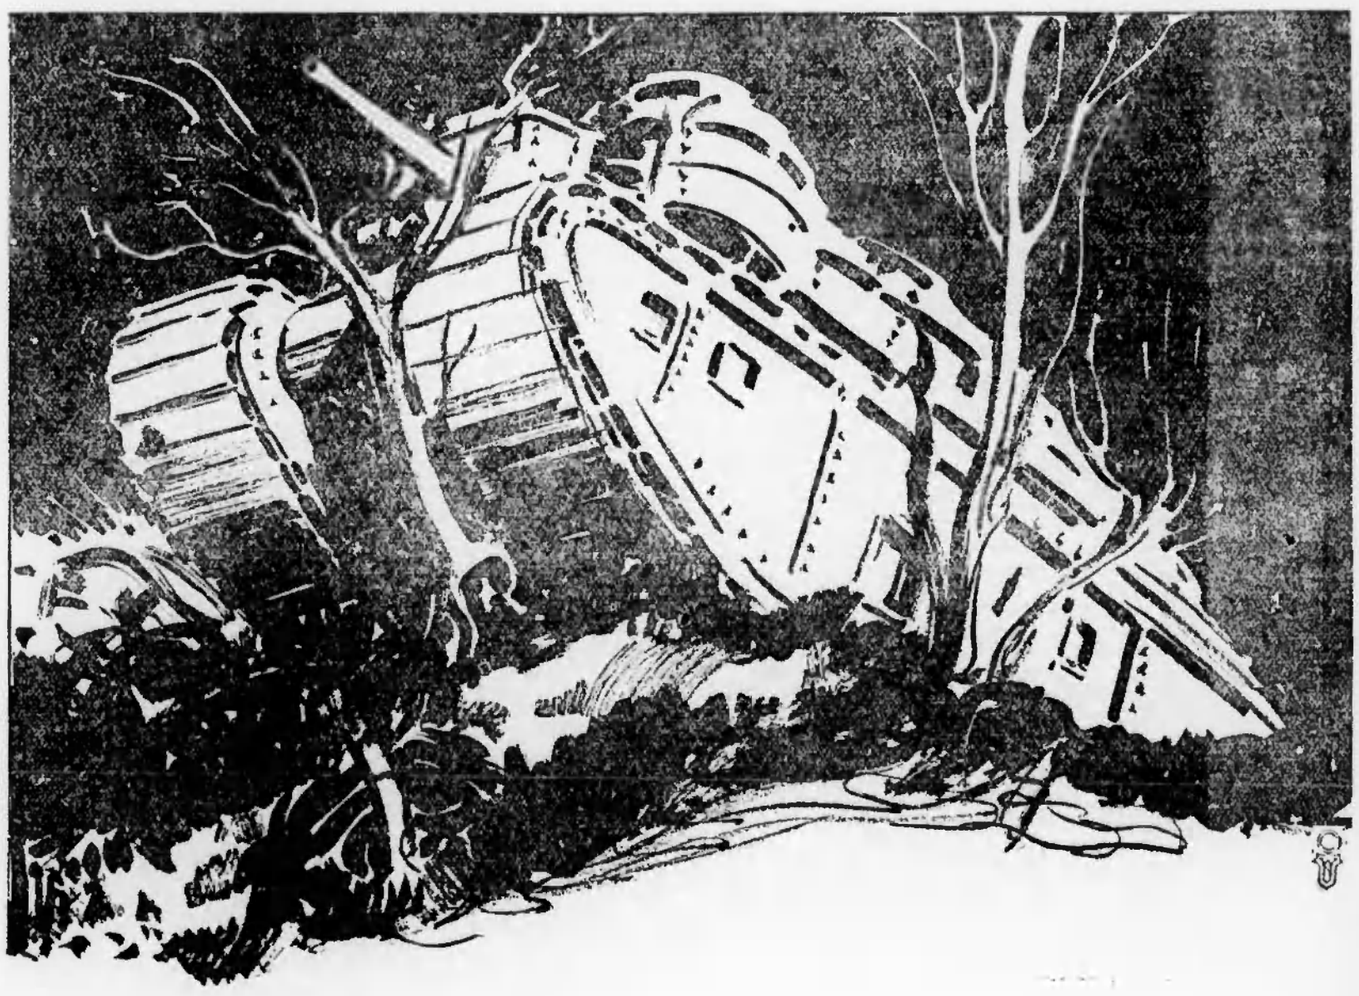
Advertising finds people and tells them quickly. They might find out sometime anyway, but in the meantime valuable machines and merchandise would be standing idle.

All business requires lots of customers. Advertising is the quickest way to get them; the most economical way.

You can put a motor car in low gear and drive across the continent. It's pretty slow. You can also make a good product and wait for it to find customers. You can also have good merchandise on your shelves and racks and wait just as long.

But second and third speeds are made to get there quicker and advertising shortens the time for business accomplishments.

The Republican has a larger circulation than any other newspaper published and circulated in Garrett County.



Consistent Advertising in The Republican Will Put Your Business in High Gear.

MT. LAKE PARK

MRS. MINNIE C. RICHARDSON

The many friends of Mrs. Minnie Crawford Richardson, widow of the late George H. Richardson, formerly a contractor of Fairmont, West Va., were shocked to learn of her death, which occurred at her cottage in the Park last Monday morning at ten o'clock.

At her request, found in a short letter of instructions, her body was conveyed to Fairmont Monday afternoon and taken to the Jones funeral parlors and later removed to "Sonnecroft," the residence of Mrs. Clyde E Hutchinson, from which funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon

Mrs. Richardson was a life-long resident of Fairmont until a few seasons ago when she permanently moved to Mountain Lake Park. Mr. Richardson died there about six years ago. She had been a victim of asthma for a number of years, but found relief on the mountains.

Mrs. Richardson had spent the last two winters with Mrs. Harry White, in Oakland, and came to the Park last Friday for the season. She was ill when she opened her house and it is presumed that the change from a steam-heated residence to her cottage here, which had been unoccupied during the winter months, was too severe and that she contracted pneumonia, which caused her death. She was aged 70 years.

Her only surviving relatives are Frank Crawford and Mrs. Fred Higginbotham, nephew and niece, and Mrs. Charles S. Robinson, a half sister, all of Fairmont. She was a life-long member of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Fairmont and devoted to its activities.

More Posies

There are, of course, good reasons why the Boss Editor should be favored in many matters, but really it is beyond our ken that he should be favored by blooming out-door plants at this season of the year. Nevertheless the fact is that many jonquils are in the flower spaces of his residence on Second street. On Monday he picked a beautiful speciment which now occupies a prominent place in his sanctum. But then the Boss Editor's wife might have had something to do with the sprightliness of the home-grown flowers. The fact that flowers are blooming in Garrett county may be a surprise to Mayor Clayton.

Local Poultry Plant Inspected

Mr. W. H. Rice, poultry inspector of the University of Maryland Extension Service, accompanied by County Agent Carter, paid a visit to the poultry plant of Britten Martin here in the Park recently and put his okey on the flock and the plant.

Assessment Reduced

The town tax collector reports that the records in the County Commissioners office show that the Mountain Lake Park Association has been relieved of the payment of taxes hereafter on a number of vacant lots in Park as well as on Hamilton Hall, assessed at $3,000 and on Thoburn Inn, assessed at $6,000, claimed by the Association as being for church uses but operated as hotels. The total assessment reduction amounts to $13,992, which taken from the former assessment of $52,272.00, leaves the Association's assessible property at $37,280. The reduction may deprive the Community of betwen $80 and $100 in taxes each year.

Election in Loch Lynn Heights

The annual election in Loch Lynn Heights will take place on Monday, March 7th, the polls being open between one and six o'clock in the afternoon. Two councilmen for a term of two years will be elected. Messrs. H. V. Leighton and A. L. Biggs have been nominated on the citizens ticket.

Addresses on Washington

Oak Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F., on each Wednesday evening is addressed by one of the members on some phase of the life of Washington.

Mr. John Ream, superintendent of the United Brethren Sunday school, has also instituted the same interesting and instructive feature. Each Sunday morning a member of the school is selected to give a three to five-minute talk on Washington. Last Sunday morning the subject was "Washington's Prayer Life."

News Briefs and Personal Items

Rev. I. S. Middaugh supplied the pulpit of the U. B. church last Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. S. A. Jessee.

In the M. E. church here service on Sunday will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock; preaching service at 7:30 p. m., when the sermon subject will be "Overcomers and their reward." At Pleasant Valley preaching service at 11:00 a. m., when the sermon theme will be "Travelers to the Heavenly Zion." Rev. Gregory Bleakly is pastor of both these churches and will deliver the sermons.

Many good reports came from the Oakland broadcast at Fairmont last Sunday. The boys band made quite a hit, but Parkites are wondering why Mayor Stemple failed to mention Mountain Lake Park in his address. We are sure it was an oversight.

D. E. Callis is making rather extensive improvements to his farm home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. C. Fleming and Mrs. R. L. Cunningham motored here recently and spent the day in the Park with friends.

Mrs. M. L. Sisk spent the week-end at Keyser.

Mr. H. V. Leighton has started work at his planing mill in the Weeks and Weeks building.

Mr. Thomas Schooley is able to be out after having been confined to his home a few days with a severe cold.

Word has been received by friends that Mrs. Mary Busselle and daughter, Miss Myrtie Finnell, who have spent the winter months in Parkersburg, will arrive at Allenhurst, their summer home in the Park, about the middle of this month.

Inquiries are already being received for cottages for the summer. The prospects for a good season are encouraging, in spite of the depression.

Word has been received of the death of Mr. George E. Amos, a prominent citizen of Fairmont. Mr. Amos was the father of Clay D. Amos, whose family, together with Mr. and Mrs. Annan, occupied the Clark cottage here for the past two seasons.

HOW YOUR DOLLAR IS SPENT

This small part of your dollar is spent for gas

Food	34.6 %
Clothing	13.75%
Housing	21.0 %
Sundries	27.6 %
Gas Fuel	3.05%

WHEN you stop to consider how your family budget dollar is spent it will surprise you how little you spend for gas.

Then too, consider for a moment how much in the way of convenience, comfort and genuine utility you get for the small sum you actually pay.

The expenditures shown in the chart are United States Government statistics. They are not our figures. They represent the average expenditures of all families in the United States. This trifling expenditure for gas fuel serves you well in many ways. It cooks three meals a day for a family of four persons at a trifle less than 3/10ths of 1¢ per person per meal. It provides you with heat for hot water. Continuous or intermittent, as you like, heating service for your home. Remember—you pay for what you use after you have used it. Not before.

Gas is the cheapest, cleanest, most convenient and economical of all domestic fuels. Piped into your home—ready for use any time you want it. Its nominal cost urges further use.

Continuous automatic service for all household purposes costs much less than you think.

SEVERE SNOWSTORM HITS GARRETT COUNTY SUNDAY

Highways Remain Blocked Until Monday Evening—Worst Storm For Several Years

MANY CARS SNOWBOUND

Lashing storms which are sweeping Maryland this week and covering the country with snow, continues unabated, leaving in their wake ten dead and unestimated property damage. It is said to be one of the worst storms in a quarter of a century.

The storm struck Garrett county slowly, beginning about 8 o'clock on Sunday, but the mercury had dropped 25 degrees within a short time and the large, wet swonflakes had turned into fine particles which were driven through the air by a high wind. Before evening a regular blizzard had set in.

With all available snow plows at work, Garrett county roads remained blocked until Monday evening, and it was reported that approximately 100 cars were stranded along the various highways. No serious accidents were reported and property damage here was slight.

Telephone and telegraph lines east of Oakland were broken during the height of the storm and Hagerstown was isolated from the rest of the world for 24 hours. Between 700 and 800 telephone poles were down in the vicinity of Hagerstown.

The storm was general throughout the east, and from the Florida coast to Canada, and from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic seaboard, it beat a path of death and destruction as it gnashed through temperatures from far below zero to freezing. Four degrees above zero was registered Monday morning at the Government station at Weber's, one mile south of Oakland.

Snow which fell to a depth of about six inches in Garrett county earlier in the week was tossed about by the hurrican-like wind and piled drifts to a depth of several feet, and several inches of snowfall have been added since that time.

The State Roads Commission put all available snow plows to work on the Western Maryland roads in an effort to break through the heavy drifts. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad was crippled, but maintained trains, although behind schedule.

Various schools in the county were parayized on Monday and Tuesday, busses being unable to gather in the children, and no classes were held.

Members of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band, returning from Pittsburgh, Pa., were stranded along the highways on Sunday evening and did not reach their homes until Monday night. It was easily the worst storm of the year.

Card Party for Benefit of Relief Fund Tonight

Tonight at eight o'clock in the Knights of Pythias Hall, the Relief Committee of Oakland will be hosts at a card party to raise funds for the continuance of the relief work in this section. Various card games will be played; various prizes are offered. The public is invited to aid by securing tickets. These are 50 cents each and may be purchased at Gonder's Drug Store or at the hall this evening.

Citizens of the community have generously donated the food to be served and the prizes to be given. Among those who have sent in cash or clothing or foodstuffs to the committee for distribution recently are: Mrs. W. W. Dawson, Mrs. Hardesty, Mrs. Harry Stemple.

Three Men Given 10-Day Sentence for Short Changing

Three men, arrested by authorities in Kingwood, West Va., charged with short changing several merchants in Terra Alta and several service stations along Route 7, were sentenced to serve ten days in jail at Kingwood when given a hearing at the office of E. C. Everly, justice of the peace in the West Virginia town a short time ago.

The men, P. H. Finn, W. B. Conrad and C. C. Sexton, were stopped at Kingwood by county and State officers after the officers had been warned by police in Oakland. They had short-changed Clyde Breedlove and Adams Garage at Crellin. Breedlove traced the trio to Terra Alta where they worked several persons with their racket.

New Feature Being Added To Boys' Week Celebration

New features are being added this year in the celebration of Boys' Week, which will be held April 30 to May 7 under the auspices of the members of the Oakland Rotary club.

They are inviting the girls to share the activities on Sunday, both at church and in the parade in the afternoon, and also on Tuesday evening when a faculty-parent-student meeting will be held. Boys and girls will also share in the motion picture on Friday.

The committee is working on an achievement contest, which is something new in Boys' Week here. It is also planned to hold a parade and deliver an address in each school center of the county on Sunday.

GRANDCHILDREN WIN ON APPEAL IN HAMILL CASE

Court of Appeals Gives Grandchildren Right To Have Case Submitted To Jury

In a decision handed down by Judge T. Scott Offutt, in the Court of Appeals of Maryland on Thursday, the rulings of the Orphans' Court of Garrett county were reversed and the contentions of the grandchildren of the late Gilmor S. Hamill, of Oakland, were upheld. The four grandchildren, James F. Hamill, of New York; Gilmor S. Hamill, III, of Cumberland, and Virginia E. and Edwin C. Hamill, infants, filed a caveat in the Garrett County Orphans' Court alleging that the last will and testament of Mr. Hamill was procured by undue influence and that he was not mentally competent to make a will.

The infant heirs joined in this caveat by their guardian, Paul L. Hitchins.

Mr. Hamill also left two sons, H. Byrne Hamill and Stuart F. Hamill. George A. Fraley and Stuart F. Hamill were appointed executors.

About a month and a half before the date of the last will Mr. Hamill executed another will which gave his grandchildren a much larger interest in his estate. The executors contended that the grandchildren should elect whether they filed their caveat as heirs-at-law of their grandfather or as beneficiaries under the last will. The executors further contended that the two infant children had no right to sue in the name of their guardian, Paul L. Hitchins, but should sue in the name of their mother. The executors further claimed the right to have tried along with the caveat case certain questions concerning the amount of money which Mr. Hamill, Sr., had expended in educating his grandchildren. The Orphans' Court of Garrett County in a decision made last October sustained all three contentions of the executors.

The Court of Appeals in its opinion reversed the Orphans' Court and decided that it had committed error in its rulings on all three questions. The Court of Appeals decided that the grandchildren had a right to have their caveat case submitted to a jury on issues concerning undue influence, mental capacity of Mr. Hamill and whether the will had been executed by him. It also decided that it was immaterial in the caveat case whether or not the grandfather had expended sums of money in educating his grandchildren, as that had nothing to do with the questions presented in the caveat case. It is expected that the case will shortly be tried before a jury.

Walter C. Capper and F. Brooke Whiting, Cumberland, were attorneys for the grandchildren, and Ernest Ray Jones and Walter W. Dawson, of Oakland, with William M. Maloy, of Baltimore, were attorneys for the executors.

Car Skids Into Culvert

George Kerins received a cut on his cheek, and his daughter, Cecelia, received a bruised knee, when the automobile in which they were riding skidded and ran into a culvert at the Flatwoods turn, near Accident, Sunday morning.

Mr. Kerins was enroute to Pittsburgh, Pa., and other members of his family were in the car at the time of the accident but were not injured. His two sons, George and Regis, continued to Pittsburgh in other cars, while Mr. Kerins returned to Oakland. The car was not damaged extensively.

Attend the card party for the benefit of the Relief Committee.

DREAM OF BROADCASTING TURNS INTO NIGHTMARE AS RAGING SNOWSTORM CAUSES HARROWING EXPERIENCE

Members of Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band are Held Snowbound and Spend Night in Farmhouses

13 CARS COMPLETE TRIP

The dream of broadcasting over KDKA, Pittsburgh, although realized on Sunday afternoon by the 50 members of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland, turned into a night-mare for the entire party of thirteen automobiles and almost the entire populace of Oakland before all returned safely to their homes.

Leaving Oakland at 9 o'clock Sunday morning at the beginning of what appeared to be just another snow flurry, the majority of the boys and their drivers didn't return to Oakland until Monday evening, and two carloads arrived by train at 1:30 Tuesday morning.

The storm which grew steadily worse instead of better, turned into the worst blizzard of the season and blocked the highways early Sunday evening so that the returning automobiles piled into snowdrifts and stuck there—that is, all but two.

Many harrowing experiences are being related by the boys and other members of the party, who spent the night at farmhouses after being nearly frozen by the cold wind and biting snow which swept across the open fields mercilessly.

Fifteen cars began the trip to Pittsburgh early Sunday morning driven by the following: Dr. N. I. Broadwater, Robert Hoffman, Mayor Grover C. Stemple, E. R. Jones, Fred Landon in Harry Miller's truck carrying the band instruments, Russell Brown in Stuart Hamill's car, Earl Shartzer, George Hanst, Cheston Browning, Jr., Donald R. Sincell, Ralph Weber, James Canty in car of James P. Treacy, Carl McIntire, George Kerins, and Arthur Naylor.

Near Accident the car driven by Mr. Kerins struck a culvert, and members of the band in the ear were transferred to other automobiles. Fifteen miles east of Uniontown Arthur Naylor turned back, but the other thirteen ears struggled on through the cold, ice, snow and wind and reached Pittsburgh from 1:15 until 10 minutes before time to broadcast. R. R. Gilbert, former director, met the band at Pittsburgh, having driven with his family from Buckhannon.

On the return journey four cars, those of Ray Jones, Donald Sincell, James Canty and George Hanst, began their homeward trek via Washington and Waynesburg, Pa., Morgantown and Kingwood, West Va. The others elected to return the way they had gone, route 51 to Uniontown, route 40 to Keyser's ridge, route 37 to Oakland.

Evans' hill, near Terra Alta, became an insurmountable barrier for Sincell and Jones, while on the other route the cars piled up at Sebold's curve, north of McHenry, and Accident. One car remained in Uniontown.

Stories of the good times spent at the farmhouses of Garrett county, along the Accident highway, wherein buckwheat cakes and sausage were served to parties of 18 and 20, have been on the lips of those who experienced the good fortune, while on Evans' hill, the stories are not so favorable. The boys who were in Mr. Jones' car didn't get a bite to eat until noon on Monday when they stopped a bread truck and got some pies and buns, while Mr. Jones didn't have anything to eat until 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. And the people in the farmhouse in which they stayed sat down to their usual breakfast of buckwheat cakes, and wouldn't even sell a glass of milk to the Jones party.

No serious after effects have been noted, although many are nursing "nipped" cars, hands, feet, etc., received Sunday night.

Broadcast from William Penn

The Boys' Band broadcast from the 21st floor of the William Penn hotel for one-half hour, under the direction of Russell H. Brown. A large stack of telegrams and many telephone messages were received at the studio, but the time limit of the program did not permit reading them or permit Mayor Stemple to say a few words in behalf of Oakland.

Following the broadcast the members were served dinner in the Cardinal room of the William Penn hotel, just four hours after they were scheduled to eat.

Besides the drivers of the various cars, the following made the trip: Eddie Hinebaugh, Guy O. Yutzy, Terrence Tamburini, Waller Hoye; band members, Irving Broadwater, Elvin Iman, Hugh Teets, Jack Treacy, Logan Weber, Joseph Sollars, John McIntire, Laural Whipkey, Richard Davis, William Glotfelty, Lorraine Weeks, Lloyd Liller, George Kerins, Bond Weber, Austin McRobie, Roland R. Gilbert, Maurice Treacy, William Boardman, Kenneth Lawton, Jack Weber, Paul Fazzalari, Charles Tusing, Donald Stemple, Harley Dawson, James Treacy, Robert Lawton, Arthur Lawton, Frank Lyon, Harry Cogley, Jack Lawton, J. Billie Yutzy, Eddie Michael, Regis Kerins, Lewis Jones, Stuart Hamill, Fred. Peddicord, Carroll Casteel, George Stuck, Julius Littman, Walter Dawson, James Nordeck, Thomas Compton, Humbird Offutt, Gerald Iman, Harry Stemple, Jr., Robert Lohr and Schell Hoye.

REPORT SHOWS FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY GOOD

Net Assets Increase $14,000 In 1931—Indebtedness of City Lessened Report Shows

$21,000 UNPAID TAXES

Showing the town of Oakland to be in a sound financial condition in spite of slow collections, etc., the annual financial report was presented at the regular meeting of the Mayor and Town Council held Tuesday night at the City Hall. While receipts as a whole were smaller, expenditures were also smaller, leaving a balance in the treasury of $5,817.15. Since the report has been made, however, Grover Stemple, Mayor, pointed out, $2,500 has been paid on the street improvement loan, reducing it to $3,500. This was the second payment of the year on this item, $2,000 having been paid previously.

The statement shows that the town owes nothing except its bonded indebtedness, the balance on the street improvement loan, and $8,500 due on the fire equipment. This is $3,500 less than last year, the report shows.

The assets have increased approximately $7,000 during the past year while the liabilities have decreased more than $7,000. Net assets now total $64,429.95.

The ordinary and necessary expenditures aggregate nearly $1,000 per month, besides the expenditures to meet other indebtedness.

Listed among the assets were unpaid taxes for the years 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, and 1931, amounting to more than $21,000.00, enough to pay the indebtedness on the street improvement loan, the balance on the fire equipment, and have a substantial balance.

The Waingold property on Liberty street, recently purchased by the town at tax sale, was listed at $1,500. The fire trucks and equipment were listed at $21,400.00 this year as compared with $20,355.00 in the last report.

The report will be found on another page of The Republican today. The financial statement was presented by A. G. Ross, clerk, and was passed by the council and approved by Mayor Stemple at the monthly meeting Tuesday night. Tuesday night's meeting was the final session of the present council as the annual election for members of that body will be held on Monday, March 14. The new council will organize on April 4.

The retiring members of the council expressed the hope of continued success to their successors. The council decided to paint the second floor of the City hall, and the contract was awarded to Joseph E. Helbig, the lowest bidder among six.

Loch Lynn Election Held

A. L. Biggs and H. V. Leighton were elected to serve as councilmen for the town of Loch Lynn Heights, at the regular election held on Monday. Voting was light due to the inclement weather conditions. They will serve for a period of two years, having assumed the duties of their offices on Monday evening following the election.

C. E. Hardesty is mayor, and the hold-over members of the council are B. W. Harvey and E. C. Hutchinson.

DETAILED REPORT SHOWS CONDITION OF FINANCES

Is First of Its Kind Presented to County Commissioners

A monthly report, showing in detail the money paid out by Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., as County Treasurer, the amount collected for taxes of 1931, the amount remaining uncollected and the overdrafts on the various accounts in the levy, was presented to the Board of County Commissioners at its regular meeting on Monday evening.

The report was the first of its kind ever to be presented to the board, and George D. Browning, president, described it as one of the best reports he had ever received from the County Treasurer.

The report shows that out of the estimated revenue of $385,817.59, as of the levy of April, 1931, the total amount received by the treasurer up to February 29, was $275,319.78, leaving $110,497.81 yet outstanding.

The report also showed that the treasurer has cash on hand amounting to $4,722.99, and has paid overdrafts on different accounts amounting to $6,507.38. The School Board has received from the treasurer $105,690.70, which is forty per cent of the total amount collected to date, leaving a balance of $41,962.85 to be paid the School Commissioners by the end of the fiscal year.

H. C. SMITH, REPUBLICAN, FILES FOR CONGRESS

Rockville Attorney Enters Primary Lists For Sixth District Nomination

Harold C. Smith, attorney, of Rockville, has filed with the Secretary of State his certificate to become a Republican candidate for the House of Representatives in the Sixth Maryland District, composed of Garrett, Allegany, Frederick, Washington and Montgomery counties. He is the first to file for the Republican nomination.

Mr. Smith, a former department commander of the American Legion, was one of the organizers of that body. He was the secretary of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce up to this year, when he declined re-election. He is a member of the Rockville Rotary Club and a number of other civic organizations.

Mr. Smith will visit the counties of the District during the next week or ten days and will spend much of his time up to the primary in May with his campaign.

Principal Forest Guard for Garrett County Appointed

Cecil Ramsey, of Oakland, has been appointed and commissioned Principal Forest Guard for Garrett County by the State Forestry Department and assumed his duties on Saturday of last week. The position is a new one created recently. Mr. Ramsey will have under his direction the activities of the forest fire fighters in times of fires occurring in the wooded lands of the county and will also supervise the fire lookout towers in various sections.

Public Service on Good Friday

The usual annual Good Friday afternoon service will be held this year in St. Paul's M. E. church, beginning at one o'clock and continuing until three o'clock, when a choir composed of members of the various musical organizations of the churches of Oakland will render the oratorio by Sir John Stainer, "The Crucifixion." The choir will be under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Thayer, Jr., and Dr. John G. Robinson.

Held For Drunken Driving

Jefferson Burch, of White Rock, is in the Garrett County Jail in default of bond pending a hearing on the charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants. Sunday night as he was going south on Third street in Oakland Burch is alleged to have struck the rear of the Ford coupe owned by Mason Glotfelty, which was parked in front of his residence on Third street.

Marriage Announced

Mrs. Ernest Wotring has announced the marriage of her niece, Miss Lavinia Root, to Mr. George W. Cassell, of Baltimore. The ceremony was performed on February 22, in Oakland, by Rev. J. W. Dawson. The couple will reside in Baltimore.

TO NOMINATE CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICES

Citizens' Meeting to be Held at 7:30 Tonight—Election to Be Held on Monday

TO OPEN POLLS AT EIGHT

Nomination of candidates for mayor, three councilmen and a treasurer for the town of Oakland will be made at a citizens' meeting to be held this evening in the City Hall at 7:30 o'clock, Grover C. Stemple, mayor, has announced. Election for these offices will be held on Monday, March 14.

Mayor Stemple is requesting that a representative group of citizens be present and take an interest in the municipal affairs by nominating responsible men on the ticket. The meeting will be called to order by the mayor after which a chairman will be named to conduct the business affairs.

No candidates have as yet appeared openly in the field, but it is certain that some of the retiring officials will be up for renomination and re-election. In case of more than six candidates for councilmen, it was undecided whether or not names would be placed on the ballot or be cut down by vote of the citizens present at the meeting. The latter method has been used during the last several years.

At the election on Monday, March 14, the voters will elect one person as mayor of Oakland, three persons as members of the Town Council, and one person for the office of treasurer, the mayor and councilmen to serve terms of two years, and the treasurer a term of one year.

The polls will open at 8 o'clock a. m., at the council chamber and will remain open until 6 o'clock p. m.

MAR'S HILL GROUP MEETS TO FORM EXTENSION CLUB

Eleven Present at First Session At Home of Mrs. E. J. Beachy

Eleven rural women of the Mar's Hill community met Thursday, March 3, at the home of Mrs. E. J. Beachy for their first meeting with the Home Demonstration Agent of Garrett county. The group was welcomed into the circle of Homemakers clubs by Mrs. S. C. Beachy, president of the County Council of Homemakers, who gave an interesting talk about the work of the ten existing clubs in the county. Mrs. Beachy pointed out that besides the benefits derived from the exchanging of ideas with one's neighbors and the leaving of some new practice for the home, the social time together has been of value to the other homemakers.

The Extension Service program was explained to the group and a demonstration "Time and Money Saving Finishes for Spring," was given. Two types of homemade bias tape were made at a cost of 3 cents for 8 yards, a saving of 7 cents. Besides saving homemakers' money these tapes are quickly made, are color fast and are much more durable than commercial tape.

Miss Beulah Engle was elected chairman of the group until it becomes organized. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Floyd Durst on Thursday, April 7. Those present were Mrs. E. J. Beachy, Mrs. J. H. Baum, Mrs. Ellsworth Beachy, Miss Kate Beachy, Mrs. Floyd Durst, Miss Beulah Engle, Mrs. Ralph Engle, Mrs. L. E. Wengard, Mrs. Setzer Durst, Mrs. Lloyd Kamp, Mrs. C. C. Durst.

Legionaires Have Turkey and Bean Banquet

Thirty-five members of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, attended a turkey and bean banquet on Tuesday night in the Knights of Pythias Hall.

The dinner was the culmination of a membership drive between two teams of the Legion, Joseph Gonder's team winning first place, entitling his cohorts to the turkey, while the losers' part were the beans. Both sides, however, received portions of both dishes. The dinner was served by members of the Relief Committee, the proceeds of which will go toward relieving the needy of this section.

Dr. George E. Clarke presided, and Joseph M. Gonder gave the address of the evening. A. G. Hesen, post commander, also made a short address to the assembled Legionaires.

Lesson for March 13

JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Plans a Home in Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Comforts His Disciples.

The hopes of the disciples were utterly shattered when Jesus told them about the cross. He had told them that he was going away and that they could not follow him. He consoled them by

I. Pointing to the Coming Reunion in the Father's House (vv. 1-3).

1. He asked them to trust in himself even as God (v. 1). Faith in the God-man, Christ Jesus, will steady the heart, no matter how intense the grief or how great the sorrow. Faith in God and Christ is one and the same thing, for Jesus Christ is not merely another God, but one with God. Christ himself is divine and therefore the revealer of divinity. Jesus Christ is the same object of trust as God himself. The believer should repose in him the same confidence and yield unto him the same submission as to God. Trust in Jesus as God is the secret of a quiet heart.

2. He informed them that he was going to the Father's house to prepare a home for them (v. 2). Heaven is the Father's house. Heaven is an eternal dwelling place. There is in it abundant room for all. There are "Many mansions." All who come to God through Christ will find room.

It is a prepared place for a prepared people.

3. He assured them that he would come again and escort them to the Father's house (v. 3). Jesus will not wait for his own to come to him, but will come and call forth from the graves those who have died and transform living believers, taking them all to be with himself forevermore in the heavenly home.

II. Revealing the Way to the Father's House (vv. 4-11).

Jesus informed the disciples that they knew the way to that place to which he was going. To this Thomas interposed a doubt. In answer to which Christ asserts that he is

1. The way to God (v. 6). He is something more than a mere guide or teacher—he is the way itself. He is the door of the sheepfold—the very entrance to the tree of life.

2. The truth (v. 6). He is not merely the teacher, but the truth incarnate. In Christ's incarnation the spiritual and material worlds were united. Therefore, every line of truth, whether spiritual or material, converges in him. No one can ever have the real truth about anything who does not have Jesus Christ. In him we have especially the truth about God. To pretend to know God while at the same time rejecting Jesus Christ is utter folly. Only as Christ reveals God can we know him (John 1:18).

3. The life (v. 6). Christ is not merely the giver of life, but he is the essence of life. Only those who receive Christ have life in the truest sense.

III. Assuring Them That His Work Was to Continue (vv. 12-14).

Jesus' going away was not to end the work which he had begun. This, no doubt, means that through the ministry of the Spirit-filled disciples the work which Christ began would assume larger proportions. There would be a much greater number of conversions than under his ministry. The means by which they were to get the power to do such wonders was prayer. God will surely answer prayer, not only because he loves his children, but through answered prayer his own name will be glorified.

IV. Promising Another Comforter (vv. 12-17).

The word "Comforter" means literally "one called to the side of another to give help, protection and deliverance." This Comforter is the Holy Spirit. Jesus was the Comforter while here on earth. The Holy Spirit was to be "another" Comforter. The condition upon which they might enjoy the comfort of the Spirit was obedience to Jesus (vv. 15-17).

V. Assuring Them of His Return to Them (vv. 18-24).

Although Jesus went away he did not leave his disciples as orphans. He is spiritually present all the time. The Father and the Son make their abode with the disciple who loves and obeys Jesus Christ.

Trust the Lord

Difficulties afford opportunities for learning God's faithfulness, which otherwise we should not have. It gives me great comfort to remember that the work is his; that he knows how best to carry it on, and is infinitely more interested in it than we are. His word shall not return unto him void: we will preach it then, and leave results with him.—Hudson Taylor.

Gratitude is the continuous echo which our hearts give to God's mercy.

HOW MANY DO YOU KNOW IN THIS WEEK'S PICTURE?

In continuing the feature of "Who Remembers," which was started in The Republican last Thursday, this week a number of individual photographs are presented. The photographs of the subjects shown were taken in their younger days. Try hard at first and see if you can name them. Then when you can't turn to the paragraph below and see how far off you were.

MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever."

Dr. Bernard C. Steiner begins his brochure entitled "The Maryland Bible Society," with this striking sentence: "The triumphs of the 19th Century were many, and among the greatest of them was the wide distribution of the Holy Scriptures."

In 1804 the British and Foreign Bible Society was organized. It is a remarkable coincidence that in the very same year, at Williamstown, Massachusetts, Samuel J. Mills and four of his fellow college students brought into being the modern missionary movement as one of the results of the famous Haystack prayer meeting. Out of this meeting developed the movement which ultimately led to the formation of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

In 1808, the first Bible Society in the United States was instituted in Philadelphia, to be followed two years later by the organization in Baltimore of the Maryland Bible Society.

This society was inter-denominational from its inception. One of its brightest glories is reflected from the fact that in those days of sharp and clear cut divisions between the Protestant groups, the Bible Society offered a common ground where all could meet together and feel as David so truly expressed it, "Behold, how beautiful it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Unfortunately, the original records concerning the foundation of the Baltimore Bible Society, as it was then called, have not been found, and the newspapers seem to have taken no notice of the event. A pamphlet preserved by Dr. John Franklin Goucher gives the names of the Board of Managers in 1812, and shows that the most prominent citizens of the city were patrons of the Society, and devoted workers in the cause represented by it. The list of names found in this pamphlet is as follows: George Dashiell, John Hagerty, James Inglis, John Daniel Kurtz, Joseph G. J. Bend, Robert Annan, John Glendy, Alexander McCaine, Frederick Beasley, John Healy, John Hargrove, George Robert, Lewis Richards, Adam Vonerden, Baltzer Schaeffer, James H. McCulloch, Isaac Burnston, William, H. Dorsey, James McHenry, John Livingston, John Crawford, Andrew Ellicott, James Campbell, John Kelso.

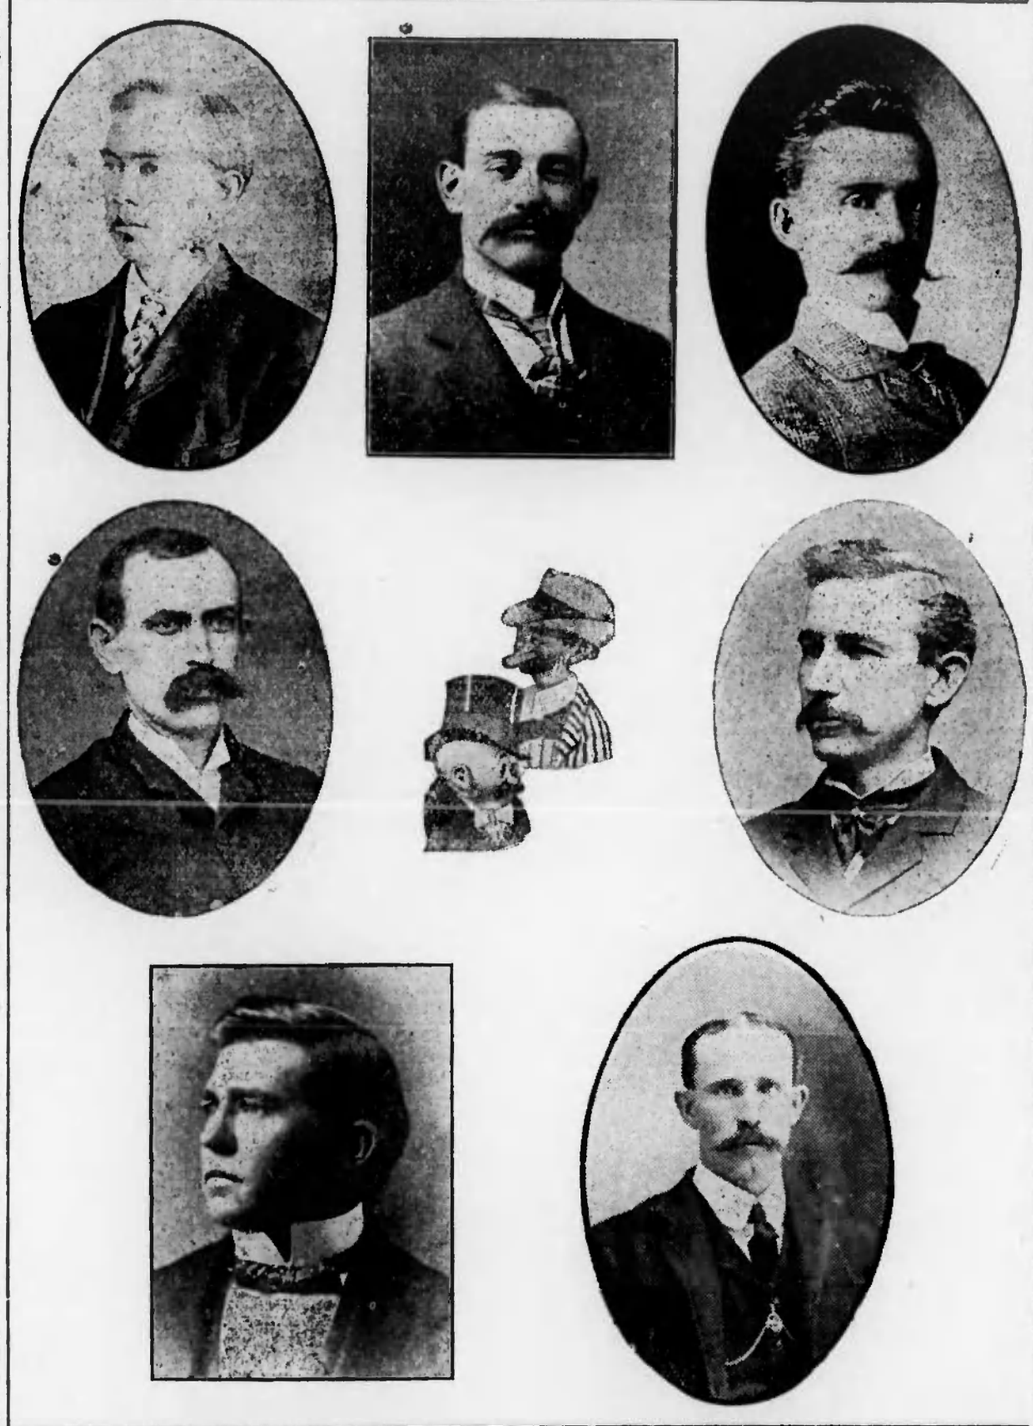
I quote again from Dr. Steiner: "Rev. George Dashiell was Rector of St. Peter s Protestant Episcopal Church; Rev. J. Daniel Kurtz was pastor of the Lutheran Church; Rev. Joseph G. J. Bend was rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, and Rev. Frederick Beasley was the assistant rector; Rev. John Glendy was pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church; Rev. John Hargrove was the pastor of the Swedenborgain or New Jerusalem Church; Rev. Alexander McCaine and Rev. George Roberts were Methodist clergymen and Rev. Lewis Richardson was a Baptist. The following occupations were represented among the lay members of the society at this early date; a physician, Collector of the Port of Baltimore, a teacher, a surveyor, a stationer, a silk dyer, a butcher, a dealer in fancy goods and millinery, a dry goods merchant, and a wharf manager.

Altogether it was a cosmopolitan group, and represented the best types of the city's life.

How we should like to know just who developed the initiative in this beautiful missionary work. That, like most beginnings, is shrouded in the mists of the past. Men have labored, as St. Paul says, and other men have entered into their labors. Rudyard Kipling puts these words into the mouth of King Solomon, when at the end of his career he is called upon to lay aside the building of the Temple. They apply equally to all builders in the Temple of Truth.

"I called my men from my quarries,
My forests, my wharves, and my shcers.
All I had wrought I abandoned
To the fate of the faithless years.
Yet I carved in the timber
Yet I cut on the stone,
After me cometh a builder,
Tell him, I, too, have known."

WHO REMEMBERS?



SIXTEEN MARRIAGES ARE PERFORMED DURING WEEK

Eight Licenses Issued on Saturday—One "Don't Publish"

Sixteen marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland. Half of this number were issued on Saturday, almost always a busy day for the clerk in this department of his office. One permit was marked "don't publish."

Thomas Lawrence Lewis, 28, farmer, and Mary Lee Williston, 16 (parents' consent), student, both of Terra Alta, W. Va.

Delbert E. Carder, 21, clerk, and Thelma Andreath Irelan, 14 (parents' consent), student, both of Toledo, O.

The Communication from Mr. Clifford Friend, of Accident, Appearing in The Republican last Thursday In Which Mr. Friend Complained of Taxes in Garrett County, Finds An Answer in the Speech Delivered by Mr. Galen L. Tait in Baltimore Recently Wherein Mr. Tait Shows Conclusively That The Governor of Maryland, Mr. Ritchie, Is Responsible For High Taxes Not Only in Garrett County but in Every County of Maryland.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Reading with interest the communication appearing in The Republican last Thursday, contributed by Mr. Clifford Friend, of Accident, brought to my mind something that occurred a short time ago when a former office holder of Garrett county used practically the identical argument in his effort to shift the responsibility for high taxes in Garrett county that Mr. Friend has used in his letter to the editor. Whether or not there is any connection between the two men in the preparation of the article and the argument used by tho former office-holder, I am unable to say, but I do know that for some months past a feeling has existed in the heart and mind of the man honored a few years ago by the voters of the county against at least one member of the Board of County Commissioners and at every opportunity presented something to the discredit of the Commissioner is said by the man who has taken umbrage and for no good reason whatever.

So, if Mr. Friend's communication and argument is based on what someone else has said and is being used as a cat's-paw, then his grounds are untenable, to say the least, but he has failed to lay the cause of high taxes in Maryland at the right door. The Commissioners are responsible for the levying of only about 25 per cent of the taxes in Garrett county. The levying of the other 75 per cent is made mandatory by laws passed during Mr. Ritchie's administration as we shall see by reading the following address, made at Baltimore on February 12 by Mr. Galen L. Tait, whose argument and statement of facts and figures should be sufficient to convince any fair-minded individual that the reason for high taxes is in Annapolis and the office of Governor Ritchie and not in the County Commissioners' office in Oakland.

Mr. Tait said in part:

An example of the old-time leadership, long on politics but short on sound economics, was given recently in Washington when Governor Ritchie, speaking under the auspices of the American Taxpayers' League, stated, "The Federal Government should stop draining the earnings and savings of the American people. Farms and homes go under the hammer because taxes cannot be paid." "What has the Government done," he said, "to adjust itself to conditions and to reduce its cost to the American people, thus saving something on the taxpayers' bills?"

Before Governor Ritchie assumes to hold the Federal Government responsible for the burdens of taxation, let him acknowledge that state and local governments impose a large part of these burdens. The ordinary family man with income of $4500, or less, pays very little or nothing to the Federal Government, but whether he owns a home or rents, he pays a very considerable sum, directly or indirectly, for state, city, town, county, school or other local taxes.

Let Governor Ritchie prove that the expensive state government—or the extravagant local governments, under his lieutenants—during his four terms has reduced the tax burden to the ordinary individual or has been more economically conducted than the Federal Government, which has the great burden of national defense and security.

Let us review the era between 1920, when Mr. Ritchie became governor, the last year of the Wilson administration. and the year 1930—a decade of Ritchie rule in Maryland and Republican administration at Washington.

First, let us take up the public debt. The debt of Maryland has increased under Governor Ritchie from about 18 millions in 1920 to 30 millions in 1930, while the national debt, under Republican rule, has decreased from 24 billions in 1920 to 16 billions in 1930. While Governor Ritchie increased Maryland's debt 62 per cent, Republican Presidents reduced the national debt by 34 per cent.

During President Wilson's last year, the national government spent 6 billions 100 millions of taxes, while in 1930 the Republican national administration spent 3 billions 400 millions of taxes, which is a decrease of 44 per cent. This includes the large interest, but excludes principal, payments, on the sinking fund in retirement of public debts which were paid out of surplus ordinary receipts.

How strikingly different in Maryland, the Utopia of Governor Ritchie's fertile imagination!

Governor Harrington, in 1920, spent in Maryland, $12,800,000. Governor Ritchie, in 1930, expended over $35,000,000. While Washington decreased expenses by 44 per cent, Annapolis raised them by 190 per cent. Meantime Federal employes were greatly reduced, while state employes multiplied.

When Mr. Ritchie came in as governor in 1920, Maryland collected about 5 millions in general property taxes, and in 1930 collected about 7 millions, an increase of about 42 per cent. This does not include the enormous sum from gasoline, race track, and other special taxes, large parts of which were applied to roads, but includes only real, personal and intangible property taxes.

Governor Ritchie's claim that he has reduced the tax rate is utterly misleading in the face of raised assessments and increased individual state tax bills.

What has Governor Ritchie's state government imposed in state taxes on our farms and homes, as compared with surrounding states and similar industrial states along the Atlantic seaboard?

According to the 1929 Census Bulletin on the Financial Statistics of States—the last one issued—the average state property tax or realty tax in Maryland per person was about three times the amount of the same average tax per person paid by the aggregate population of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York.

The average general property or realty tax in Maryland per person is over ten times as much as that of the average person in the aggregate populations of the nearby states of Delaware, West Virginia, North Carolina, Virginia and Pennsylvania. The last three states do not tax real estate for state purposes.

The farm and home owners pay no direct national tax, and ninety per cent of them are exempt from national income tax.

Instead of stongly intimating that the National Government is responsible for farm and home owners being sold out for taxes, why has not Governor Ritchie relieved them of State realty taxes, as Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Virginia and California have done?

The advance Bulletin of 1930 Census Statistics of States shows that all classes of Maryland state taxes rose from $5.49 in 1917 to $13.22 in 1930, average per person.

Governor Ritchie complains mournfully about the alleged centralization of power in the National government, while during his terms of office he has reorganized all the executive agencies of the state so as to create a real autocracy—which, like an octopus, is seated at Annapolis, with powerful tentacles reaching out into Baltimore City and every county of the state.

Governor Ritchie, therefore, is responsible for the increase and unequal burdens of Maryland taxation, and for its poor showing when compared with the notable decreases in taxation made since the Wilson regime by Republican administrations at Washington.

Mr. Tait's arraignment of the state executive does not go far enough. Mr. Ritchie, through his commissions, his various heads of departments, like the State Roads Commission, the automobile commissioner and the State Department of Education, is responsible for the laws on the statute books making it mandatory to pay large salaries to officials, the creation of useless yet expensive departments, —the game and fish commissions as an example—which spends thousands of dollars annually for a purpose that is of little or no benefit to the people at large.

Other useless and extravagant boards and commissions could be included in the above, but I do not think it necessary, except to call attention to the fact that the amount of money required to maintain the County Health unit is less than one-half of one cent on each dollar levied for county purposes, and the life and well being of even one child per year that may be benefitted by this department of the county government is worth many times the amount expended.

TAXPAYER.

BITTINGER

The first decided blizzard of the entire winter swept over this section last Sunday. Snow fell early in the day and drifted in the roads to such depth that automobile travel was halted by evening and the mercury went down dangerously near the zero point.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bittinger and Mrs. Jacob Brenneman, who went to St. Paul for a week's visit with relatives, were snowbound upon their recurn homeward on Sunday.

J. A. Beachy and son Forrest, of near Grantsville, were business callers in Bittinger early last week.

Constable Silas O. Wiley, of Mountain Lake Park, passed through here one evening last week.

R. L. Emory and sister Miss Ruth Emory motored to Frostburg on a business mission a few days ago.

W. E. Buckle was obliged to invest in some new headgear since Madam Stork presented he and Mrs. Buckle with a baby boy a few days ago.

John Green, who resides in the Dry Run community, near this place, was taken to Miners Hospital at Frostburg, one day last week where he is receiving treatment.

Daniel Green, of Meadow Mountain, was a Sunday visitor on this side of the mountain.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Beachy and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Beachy visited relatives in Mountain Lake Park on Sunday.

Rex. Ralph and Elbert Buckle motored to Frostburg last Saturday evening where they spent a few hours with friends.

Members of the Busy Workers' Sunday school class were entertained by Miss Ruth Emory last Saturday afternoon.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

There isn't any doubt about the answer to one of my "I Wonders" in last Thursday's column as to whether or not we were going to have any winter this year. It certainly scattered the caravan of the Boys' Band Sunday afternoon and evening. But look at the experience they will have to tell their grandchildren about. Spending the night at Evans' Hill, Sebold's Turn, Accident, Uniontown, Sand Fiat, Kingwood and points en route from Pittsburgh, is an event that doesn't happen more than once a year—or once in a lifetime.

To relieve me from putting my brain to work this morning, I received a letter from Gerald Chinwit, of Red Raven, Maryland. Inasmuch as the letter was postmarked Steyer, I believe Jerry is trying to hide his wit under his whiskers. He asks me to say something nice about him and promises if I do he will send me some poetry for this column.

If it's anything like some of the poetry I have received here, all I can say to him is "Pooey, pooey." He will not only have to pay for having it published, but he must pay cash in advance to have me even read it.

The letter from Gerald however, speake for itself. And when you can get other people to think for you, I ask you, what's the use of doing any of it yourself.

Mr. Chinwit's Letter.
Red Raven, Maryland,
February 31, 1932.

Dear Scoop:—

Noticing you published the letter you received one time from your thousands of delighted readers, I have decided to write you one. Now, isn't that nice? You see I have tried other methods without success, so this seems the only way I can get my name in the paper. If you don't put this letter in your paper, I'll send one to the Democrat.

The weakly paper from Oakland always arrives late out here where I live in my ancestral home that has been in the family ever since tbe feller that owned it couldn't pay for it and a automobile both, and I always look forward with anxiety and yearning to the postman's—awtohellwith the postman, he's a Democrat anyway —what I started to say was, is, will be (you can straighten it out before you give this to the Boss Editor). Now where were we? Oh, I always look forward eagerly to the moment when I can clip your column out of The Republican so the children will not read it. They are inclined to get that way anyway and enough is too much.

What I like most about your column is its style. I think you acquire style. Your stuff reads as though you just had to say it. In fact, one gets the impression that you wouldn't say it at all if you could find a way out of it.

Well, Scoop, I have to work too, so I can sympa—YOU know what I mean, Scoop. I really do feel for you. Well, as the saying is, "if worst comes to the worst, there's always the river, you know."

Your style, Scoop, is what puts your column across. Style with a natural swing and punch in it. Now, if you could just think of something to say—and you can, Scoop, if you just make up your mind to it. Others can do it; why not you? Early in the morning, just before retiring, just say to yourself, "I WILL THINK; I WILL, I WILL." Then in the afternoon when you get out of bed, keep repeating, over and over, "I WILL THINK; I WILL, I WILL." Keep it up all the time. You will be surprised at the ease with which results are obtained. Ideas will come to you nearly every week and some of them may be printed without getting you in jail.

I like you, Scoop, otherwise I would not give you all this free advice and encouragement. If you print this letter and say something nice about it I may even send you some of my jokes and poetry for your column. I want to say right now, though, I WILL NOT PAY TO HAVE THEM PUBLISHED. Don't make the mistake other editors have made.

Well, I'm about out of paper, so must close.

Very truly yours,
GERALD CHINWIT.

Somehow or other, one of the things that has tickled me the most for some time was Mick Turney delivering parcel post matter in Ray Teets' wrecker on Monday at noon.

Every politician must have two hats—one to throw in the ring and one to talk through. Now I know why Mayor Stemple bought a new hat on Saturday. He already had one to throw in the ring.

The Boss Editor has intimated that after April 1st—the date upon which Mrs. Scoop is scheduled to return from 2 years' residence in the west—I would become strictly a home man with no more visits to various basketball floors either at home or abroad; no more football games at Morgantown; no more going out at night; no more excuses that I had to see a man about a dog. Well, that may be true, but we shall wait and see what we shall see.

Dear Zilchy:—

I've been wanting to write you for a long time, because I know you don't take The Republican and therefore never know what's going on in your old home town.

You remember several years ago when I told you about a boys' band being organized here and you said it would never amount to anything? Well, you're crazy! Two weeks ago the band broadcasted from Fairmont and last Sunday from Pittsburgh, and did they put on the dog? But I must tell you about our trip to Pittsburgh and return on Sunday.

It was a terrible day really—snow, ice, fog, wind, and everything but, we finally got there. It was coming back the fun began, and let me tell you, nobody thought it was fun until after they got home, and that wasn't until a day and a half after they had left this burg—that is, all except the two heroes—Jim Canty and me. We just don't care to stay in snowdrifts, somehow.

Ray Jones and his bunch decided to park on Evans' Hill for the night, and what do you know? They couldn't even buy or beg anything to eat, and the family they stayed with just sat there in front of them the next morning and let the buckwheat cakes slip down. It turned out to be a fast day for Jones and company, and he swears that he never had this fellow in a lawsuit of any kind, so it couldn't have been revenge he was seeking.

Down towards Sebold's and Alexander's at Accident, things were different. They stuffed the castaways so full of cakes and sausages that they were sorry the snowplow got the road open as soon as they did.

Ralph Weber lost his hat, and Turk Shartzer says it's the only time he ever heard that man give vent to his thoughts in real style. And I believe Turk ought to know about real style when it comes to expressing ones thoughts in an emphatic way.

Jute Littman was among the missing, and when I took his banknotes over to the Garrett National Bank (where Jute works) on Monday to return them to him Max Jarboe asked if that was all that was left of Julius. But he's coming out of the bank now, so he's safe.

Doc Broadwater and Mayor Stemple spent Monday at Alexander's playing blackjack and checkers while the highway was being opened, and it is rumored that the Mayor won all the cigarets.

At the studio there were Hasaleah Yutzy, Mary Frances Yutzy, Nell Compton, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Haulenbeek, Ed. Rathbun, Mrs. Ellery Plots, Bess Hinebaugh, Mrs. Mayme Cuzad, and Ches. Browning's sister Anna, and a few other native Oaklanders who had come to renew acquaintances and see old friends.

There are a lot of other stories, and when I get the whole bunch together to tell them, I will let you in on more of it.

Until then, so long; but listen! Why don't you subscribe for The Republican and get all the news of the county while it is news?

MAINTENANCE OF RURAL SCHOOLS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Financing of Education Largely Taken Over by State as Abandoned Farms and Diversion of Industries Reduce Local Revenues.

By DR. CLYDE L. KING,
Secretary of Revenue, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
(In the United States Daily)

During the nineteenth century the traditional source of income for the support of Pennsylvania schools was the general property tax.

A century of experience proved that the general property tax could not give all the children of the State an equal chance for an education. As a sole source of income it resulted in heavy burdens of taxation in some districts, and in other districts low standards for wages of teachers, short terms of school, and poor school equipment, even though the tax rate was high and the assessments made at 100 per cent of values.

To overcome these inequalities the school subsidy system was adopted in this State. Folk generally thought that under the system the poorest school districts of the State would be able to pay at least 25 percent of their teachers' salaries.

But even though certain classes of school districts receive as much as 75 percent of their teachers' salaries as a subsidy from the State treasury, there are now in the State some 400 insolvent school districts; insolvent in the sense that with full assessments of value and high rates current bills cannot be paid in full.

The State, in other words, set up standards as to teachers' salaries, as to term of service, and as to school equipment of such character that, although the State now carries the major portion of the burden, these school districts are still bankrupt, and confiscation and great suffering have been put upon property owners.

The Legislature of 1929 appropriated $100,000 for distressed school districts to help out such districts as could not pay even one dollar out of four spent for their teachers' salaries. This sum proved too small. The Legislature of 1931 appropriated $1,250,000 for this purpose, and this huge sum is about one-half the amount actually needed.

This State subsidy to the school districts took $29,000,000 in 1921-1923, and will take $62,000,000 in 1931-1933 for all common-school purposes. Though the present budget calls for more money by millions of dollars than was ever appropriated before, even larger sums must be required from the State in the future if the standards as to teachers' salaries and as to school tenures are to be maintained.

We are coming rapidly to a place where the State is in fact assuming all the expenses of certain school districts. There is no real financial autonomy nor responsibility in school management in such districts.

The taxes on real estate and buildings as a source of school income in this State has in fact broken down. The reasons for this lie in the declining values of real estate.

These declining values are not by chance, nor are they related primarily to the present depression. These declining values are due to serious shifts of capital enterprises from the State of Pennsylvania, and they include alike city and country. As illustrations of the causes I give the following:

There have been huge quantities of agricultural land abandoned in the past few years in all parts of the State, as in the country generally. Great sections of certain townships have practically been abandoned in entirety.

From 1900 to 1930 the population of the State as a whole has increased 52.8 percent. But during this same 30-year period the population declined in 20 of the 67 counties. The decline in some of these counties was marked. Thus in 1930 Bradford county had but 82.6 percent of the population it had in 1900; Tioga county but 64.9 percent; Potter county 57.1 percent, and Forest county but 46.9 percent.

The population in the towns and villages in some of these counties did not decline as fast as did the rural population. Thus in 1930 the population in the farming areas of Potter county was but 41 percent of what it was in 1900, and Tioga county but 56.6 percent of what it had been 30 years ago.

In certain townships the situation is still more distressing. Thus in two townships—Sylvania and Wharton—in Potter county, there is now but one person in five of 30 years ago. The same is true of Ward township, in Tioga county, while in Elk township of Tioga county there remains but one person in eight that had homes there but three decades ago.

The counties showing increases in population in the past 30 years are those in industrial centers in the main. Philadelphia county in this period fell behind the increase in the State by 2 percent. Allegheny county increased 15 percent above the State average. The counties showing greatest increases were those near metropolitan areas with high tax rates, notably those near Philadelphia—such as Delaware and Montgomery. Home owners moved out of high-tax areas.

In a few instances in this State deforestation is the reason for this decline in rural population, and hence in rural values. But, taking the State and the county as a whole, the reason lies in the fact that the science of agriculture has increased more rapidly than the population has increased. Farms in this country for a decade have had rapidly declining values. Since 1920 the farm dollar has purchased less than has the dollar in nearly all other industries.

People have been leaving the farms of the country at a rate of about 500,000 a year net. This exodus from the country to the city has been temporarily stopped during the present depression. But the stoppage has not meant any decrease in the trend of abandoned lands, because agricultural lands become abandoned lands in fact before the people move off them.

Farmers are now sticking around awhile longer on such farms in the hope that something better offers, simply using their farm homes as refugees would. The older children have already gone from such farms, and the old folk will go when their children are able to provide for them elsewhere. In this sense more farm area is being abandoned this year than in any other year in our history.

The mere fact that folk still continue, out of necessity, to live on such farms does not mean for a minute that those farms pay or are regarded now as homes in a permanent sense or will ever be so regarded again. Machinery and science have increased production more rapidly than population has increased, not only in this country but in other countries. Ability to pay taxes has declined accordingly.

To be sure, this is not the first time farm values have declined in Pennsylvania. But the decline formerly was regional, not general, and not worldwide.

The soft coal counties offer an illustration of capital migration from this State. But a few years ago Pennsylvania led all States in the production of soft coal. In recent years capital and also labor have gone from Pennsylvania in the soft coal fields of Kentucky, Virginia, and West Virginia, so that West Virginia alone, aided by freight rates unfavorable to Pennsylvania, has a coal output now beyond that of Pennsylvania.

The result has been that fine old American standards of living in many mining towns in this State have declined to a point of absolutely insolvency and bankruptcy, alike among citizens and local governments. In their stead have grown up villages of squalor in near-by States. Taxable values in the soft coal areas have declined. Former values we cannot expect to return, at least in our generation.

In the soft coal area in town and in country the ability of the tax on land and buildings to support our schools has gone in large part, and it now appears, gone forever.

A similar migration of capital, not as yet so marked, has taken place in the anthracite coal counties. But taxable values in the school districts in the anthracite areas are reflecting that migration of capital.

Capital has gone from many of our textile centers, notably from Philadelphia, supported by capital from other States, into the Carolinas and into other places in the South. This is a permanent migration as far as one can see at the present time. Over half the textile spindles are now south of the Mason and Dixon Line.

Such migration of capital as these account for the slump of real estate values in Philadelphia and in other metropolitan areas in the State. This migration has been going on with increasing power for a decade at least. Taxable values declined with this migration. Hence the assessed values of property in Philadelphia and in other textile centers have declined. Tax rates continue high, or grow even higher. But the total moneys available for school purposes decreases from taxes on property.

In certain urban towns about Philadelphia, and in certain urban towns around such cities as Pittsburgh, there has been a migration to the suburbs. This migration has been one of capital on one hand and of commuters on the other. Capital investments have left our cities for the lower real estate values, lower taxes, lower wage possibilities and lower living costs of the countryside around our industrial centers.

Thanks to the ladies' demand for rayon and specialties, the slump in textile employment in this State did not start until 1929. Employment and wage payments in the anthracite industry started downward in 1926, and wage payments in that industry in 1931 were about 55 percent of 1923-1925.

For every major industry in the State employment and wage-earning power have been declining since about 1923 to 1926. This is a pertinent fact to remember when we turn shortly to consider sources of revenue for school purposes other than general property taxes.

The ability of general property taxpayers to support education in this State is declining, and has been declining for a decade, with little prospect for a substantial come-back during this generation of educators. Again I conclude that schoolmen must either learn to lower school costs or turn to sources of tax income other than general property.

When the bank's allotment of money for loans of this nature became exhausted, other farmers could not borrow. Consequently farmers could not hold livestock through the feeding season. That reduced demands for feed and forage.

With this measure in effect today, local banks can use these assets to secure funds from the Federal reserve banks, and then lend them to other farmers, who can issue chattel mortgages on the cattle that they buy at the yards.

Church services next Sunday morning to be conducted by the Brethren.

The following named ladies attended the sewing circle at the home of Mrs. D. L. Swartzentruber recently: Misses Alma White, Lena Slabach, Mary Lichty, Fannie Yoder, Susie Petersheim, Mrs. J. W. Baker, Mrs. Noah Slabach, Mrs. Anna Bittinger, Mrs. August Kiliius, Mrs. Harry Beeghley, Mrs. Earl Sterling, Mrs. Charles Newman, Mrs. John Sisk, Mrs. Robert Gauer, Mrs. Catherine Frazee, Mrs. Artie Dodge, Mrs. Dan Lichty, Mrs. Albert Sisk, Mrs. Jonas Giotfelty, Mrs. Hervey Roth, Mrs. Will Welch, Mrs. Ray Mosser, Mrs. Jacob Swartzentruber, Mrs. Paul Welch, Mrs. James Hamilton, Mrs. Elza Biser, Mrs. Mary Mosser, Mrs. Sam Miller, Mrs. George Martin, Mrs. Ellsworth Moon, Mrs. W. E. Spoerlein. The next meeting will be held the first Tuesday in April at the home of Mrs. Charles Newman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilkins, of Lewistown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bear, of Kempton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeWitt returned to their home in Hoyes on Sunday.

Miss Grace Filer spent the week-end with Miss Anna Virginia Slabach.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Taylor returned home from Fairmont on Sunday.

Mrs. Albert Sisk spent Wednesday at Mrs. J. C. Petersheim's.

Mr. Laban Swartzentruber, superintendent of the West Liberty (O.) children's home, spent Thursday night here with his brother, Mr. D. L. Swartzentruber.

Messrs. Joseph Feathers, Jacob Swartzentruber, S. W. Slabach, Henry Yoder and Albert Sisk recently visited Noah Slabach, who has been confined to his home with an injury to his knee for several days.

HOW TO FAIL IN BUSINESS

An exchange publishes the following set of directions on how to fail in business:

"A trade publication points out that according to Bradstreet's report for 1930, 95 per cent of all business failures were non-advertisers. One does not hesitate a minute about insuring his home or place of business, but how about the business itself? The successful business man is the one who goes after business; the failure is the one who sits around and waits for business to come to him."

The progressive business man is an advertiser, and the size of the town has nothing to do with it. In a Nebraska town is a business man who does a business of $300,000 in a town of 3,000 population. His success has been phenomenal. He says that there is no secret about the reason for forging ahead. Advertising has done the trick. Here is what he says: "I have no sympathy for the merchant who sleeps between advertised blankets on bed springs that are nationally advertised, sleeps in advertised pajamas, who rides to work in an advertised car and who, when he gets to work, refuses to advertise. He ought to go broke and he probably will. If I were to start business again I would invest five per cent of my gross sales in advertising. It pays."

DEFENSE SENTIMENT GROWS

The celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington is serving once more to call the attention of the people of the United States to the advice of the first President against entangling alliances and in favor of preparation for national defense. Vice-President Curtis made this clear at the dedication of the Administration School Building at Philadelphia a few days ago when he said:

"Today when we read of the conditions in the Far East we recall that history tells us of the first formal document of its kind in the world's history—it was the first neutrality proclamation; it was issued by George Washington.

"As Washington advised, it was never more necessary than now that the country be kept in a state of complete national defense. It would be wonderful if the strong nations of the earth would agree upon a plan of disarmament which would reduce their armies and navies to the smallest strength needed for defense, but the fear of offense keeps them from doing so.

"Unless all will disarm, none will. So we must keep both our army and navy strong enough for complete national defense. So, too, must we keep up the strength of that new branch of the common defense, the air force.

"We hope for, have done, and are doing everything possible to bring about world peace, but it must be peace with honor; peace not involving us in the political quarrels of other nations. Washington's advice of 'no entangling alliances' might almost have been with present-day conditions in mind.

"Now, as then, we should chart and follow our own course, not that of any other nation. Now, as then, should we be indignant at every attempt of a foreign power to establish an influence in our councils.

"Today there are in our midst men of alien thought and race who would sow the seeds of discord and disunion among us; who would overthrow our cherished ideals and traditions. We must rid our beloved country of all such, and of all alien criminals, and of all alien racketeers. The sooner such aliens are deported the better it will be for all."

The words of the Vice-President are well worth repeating. The American people are more and more each day becoming alive to the dangers which confront us. The action of Japan in Manchuria and Shanghi, thrusting aside all international agreements and treating the League of Nations as a schoolboy organization has opened our eyes to the dangers of trusting entirely to international agreements for the avoidance of war. The United States now as always, is willing to meet the other powers half way in the matter of disarmament. We are not going to Chinafy ourselves, however, and by following pacifist advice, render ourselves helpless as an example to a war-filled world which would not respect any such example and would only use it to coerce us in any way possible. Pacifists cry for disarmament to bring peace and then advocate the dangerous policy of entering into a commercial boycott of Japan, a step well calculated to plunge us into war. Sometimes we are led to believe that politically the international pacifists in the United States have not yet advanced beyond the dollcart stage.

WHY NOT STOP KIDDING OURSELVES

Many of our pacifists profess to believe that America is the world's great obstacle to peace. The impression they seek to create is that only the bloodthirsty militarism of the United States prevents the world from disarming. They oppose appropriations for the maintenance of our regular army, and Jane Addams even insists on the dissolution of our National Guard. They raise loud outcry against the slight military training given to youth in some of our colleges and high schools. They insist that if the rest of the world doesn't beat its cannon into plowshares Uncle Sam is all to blame because he doesn't use his moral guidance.

A recently published report of the Foreign Policy Association shows just how preposterous this pretense of American militarism is.

France has given a year or more of intensive military training since the World War to 3,000,000 men now in the first line reserve. This is in addition to a million men in the second line reserve. These men have all been conscripted, and their training is not of the incidental sort given in our National Guard or in our colleges and secondary schools. They are fully equipped to be called into quick action. France has as many trained army officers as we have men in our regular army—a total of 106,000.

Little Czecho-Slovakia has been calling up approximately a hundred thousand men a year for real military training, and has a million men in her reserves.

Poland has conscripted from 150,000 to 190,000 men a year since the World War, and now has a reserve force of 1,700,000 trained soldiers.

Italy has conscripted each year between 224,000 and 250,000 men, and has a reserve force of some 2,500,000 trained men. All of the Allies and the new nations formed as the result of the war, excepting England, maintains this system of conscription and the building up of immense armed forces. Soviet Russia has a large army of conscripts, active and reserve, than any other European power, besides several millions more who have received partial training.

We have in the United States a little more than 100,000 men actively receiving such training. About 50,000 of them are available for mobilization in continental United States. We have more than twice the population of any of the nations mentioned other than Soviet Russia, and greater national wealth than all of them combined.

Yet we hear this constant caterwauling against our comparatively insignificant military forces, not adequate to quell an insurrection of any size, not to mention national defense proportionate to what we have to guard in case of involvement in war. And while we do not expect war, neither do we expect cyclones and yet occasionally they come regardless of whether they are invited, or wanted, or not.

We do not wish or intend to maintain in this country such armies as are kept up in Europe. But in view of the disparity between our military strength and that of these other powers, why is it that this is the only country in the world, other than England, in which there is a formidable movement to get rid of what military defense we have?

This thought, too, occurs to many Americans. If these nations can afford to withdraw from productive occupations so many millions of men at great expense, why so much talk about Europe being too poor to pay the debts they owe this country? The man who rides around in an expensive automobile and then declares that he can't pay his grocery bill would hardly expect to get a respectful hearing from his creditors.

Now everybody knows that France, Italy, Poland, Soviet Russia and the smaller nations of Europe have no more intention of disarming than they have of taking wings like a dove and flying to the South Pole. Only those who lack in comprehension of realities in Europe believe that these nations either want to or intend to disarm. Asking them to disarm is like urging a wildcat to file his nails.

END OF THE "TRUCE"

Speaker Garner makes much ado about nothing. He calls for a termination of a political "truce" that never existed. Because some Republicans have ventured to commend President Hoover for the constructive economic program that he has set in motion, Mr. Garner says that the Democratic boys won't play ball any more. They are tired of letting Herbert Hoover do all the pitching.

Republicans both in and out of Congress are surprised to learn that the Democratic leaders of the House have looked upon their cooperation with the administration as an "undeclared compact." In reality there has been no truce between the two parties. Politics has been held in abeyance because both parties realized that an orgy of partisanship while the country was in distress would have brought them disrepute.

The Democrats returned from the long congressional holiday with a demand for leadership. Business was adrift, industry was in the doldrums, banks were on the verge of disasters, unemployment was widespread. Leadership out of this situation was the demand of the hour. At that time they did not realize that President Hoover was fully prepared to exercise such leadership. In rapid succession he sent one constructive measure after another to Congress. Even before Congress assembled he had organized the National Credit Corporation. Then came recommendations for sweeping new taxation to balance the Federal budget. On his initiative the capital of the Federal Land Banks was extended. Next came the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with $2,000,000,000 in credit to inject into effete industry and finance. Finally, credit expansion on lines favored by him brought new hope and stability to every financial institution in the country and turned the national psychology away from despair and panic.

President Hoover has dominated the whole situation. Every reconstruction measure of any importance that has been put into operation has originated in the White House. Having called for leadership from the administration, the Democratic party has been overwhelmed by it. Democratic leaders of the House have had an opportunity to do little, except to approve projects sent to Congress from the White House. All of these measurer are of such vital importance.

Speaker Garner is especially reluctant to allow President Hoover credit for the credit expansion bill. But the facts are indisputable. The Democratic spokesman on these matters, Senator Glass, brought forward a measure that would have contributed to the disastrous process of deflation which has been going on for two years. It was President Hoover who induced congressional leaders to lay this measure aside and enact an emergency law along the lines he had outlined in his message to Congress. It is a tribute to the President's leadership and devotion to the welfare of the country that he induced two Democrats to introduce the measure in Congress, thus insuring its early enactment.

The only original proposal which the Democratic party has made for relief is a bill calling for a $750,000,000 outlay from the depleated Treasury to aid the States, and this was defeated, largely by Democrats, along with the La Follette dole bill in the Senate.

No one is holding the House leaders back. Why don't they bring forward their relief measures? If their proposals can command the support of Congress it is not to be supposed that the administration will turn its back upon them. Thus far the majority in the House has been content to let the administration mark the way to recovery. They are entitled to high commendation for falling in line with the President's program. But no one will take seriously their attempt to claim it as their own.

An Interesting Fact

BACK OF THE BEGINNING
Avalon

On the 15th day of April, 1632, three hundred years ago, George Calvert died, at the comparatively young age of 52 years, while the charter for his new colony of Maryland was being slowly put through the legal hopper.

His death, prior to the settlement of Maryland, is a source of regret, when we consider his disappointing experience in his attempt to develop Avalon (now Nova Scotia) in Newfoundland, for which he had obtained a charter in 1623.

Up to 1625, when he disqualified himself for public office by announcing his conversion to the Catholic faith, George Calvert desired the colonization of America simply as a representative of the crown and state. Subsequently, and after the King had conferred on him the title of Baron of Baltimore, in County Longford, Ireland, Calvert devoted his attention almost entirely to the New World.

He had sent two emissaries to Newfoundland, who, possibly from an ulterior motive, reported back to their chief that the land was an earthly paradise; that "the wild beasts were kind, the fruits and flowers ranged from the vegetation of the temperate zone to tropical luxuriance."

Lord Baltimore found it expedient to visit Avalon on several occasions. In 1628 he brought with him his wife and several of his children, together with forty settlers. Prior to this visit he had caused to be erected a residence in Avalon said to have cost between $100,000 and $150,000, the handsomest home in English North America, signifying his intention to settle there permanently.

But serious trouble with the French began on this visit. In this connection it is interesting to note that he sent against his enemies, on at least one occasion, the Ark and the Dove, the same two vessels that carried his colonists to Maryland at a later date.

The winter of 1628-1629 brought to Avalon disease and death and bitter disappointment to Lord Baltimore. Of this experience he writes that he had been deceived and that from the middle of October to the middle of May "both land and sea so frozen for the greater part of the tyme, as they are not penetrable, no plant or vegetable thing appearing out of the earth until about the middle of May."

But this sad and disappointing experience did not dampen his spirits, as we find him expressing to the King his desire to make other efforts in the New World under warmer skies.

After writing that "I am determined to commit this place (Avalon) to fishermen who are able to encounter storms and hard weather," he requested the King to grant him a tract of land in Virginia. (To be continued)

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The foundation work for a new dwelling on Oak street, to be occupied when completed by the family of Henry Eggers, was completed.

Silas E. Shirer purchased a lot on Alder street and was preparing to erect a dwelling thereon.

Pulp wood was being shipped from Oakland by the carload to paper mills at Luke.

Charles W. Mason closed his eating house, which he had operated in the Legge building on Railroad street for some time.

The Oakland public schools, with others in the county, were ordered to be closed on March 16 by the Garrett County Board of Education. E. A. Browning announced that he would open a select school in town following the closing of the public school. At Swanton the school had been previously closed because of non-attendance of the pupils.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The situation in the Orient, clouded and uncertain as it is, has done quite a little to clarify the atmosphere in America from the nationalist standpoint. The inability of the League of Nations or any of the many so-called peace agreements to stop the invasion of China by the Japanese, in spite of the urgent calls of the Chinese for help and arbitration, has done a great deal in the United States to discredit international agreements and supergoverning bodies as war preventives, and has caused a chrystalizing of sentiment, inside Congress and out, against getting the United States into any foreign entanglements or inducing Uncle Sam to depend too much on promises and not enough on his defensive armament.

* * *

There is no militarism in the United States. In fact, peace sentiment is well nigh universal, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. But the people are more and more becoming convinced that the world cannot depend so much on the League of Nations and its Court, the Kellogg-Briand and other peace pacts, as it can on defensive armament and a disposition to mind its own business and let the other nations of the world, so far as possible, settle their own problems without foreign interference.

* * *

As a result, there never was less sentiment for getting Uncle Sam into the League of Nations than at present. All of the predictions made by the anti-League Senators a decade ago seemed to have turned out to be true, while the claims of the pro-Leaguers have been refuted by world events. Even former League leaders like Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Newton D. Baker have so far deviated from their earlier paths, so far as the League is concerned, that Joseph Tumulty, who was secretary to President Wilson, has seen fit publicly to chide them for their change of faith, or perhaps lack of faith.

* * *

All of this, it is expected, will furnish ammunition for the anti-League Court Senators, when the question of getting Uncle Sam into the Court through the Root protocol comes up in the Senate. The anti-Court Senators are much encouraged by recent international developments which, they claim, have substantiated their views that Uncle Sam should stay out of the League and the League Court and devote his time to building up his own nation. In fact they believe that if the World Court resolution were to come to a vote now they could defeat it, along with the Root modification. One anti-internationalist Senator told the writer recently that he would like to get the World Court resolution voted out now, because he felt assured that the result would be overwhelming defeat for the resolution. Just when it will be reported out of committee cannot be stated, but it is evident that the pro-League Court Senators are just as much depressed at present as their opponents are elated.

* * *

The Sino-Japanese situation also has confounded the pacifists as well as the internationalists. In view of the late Japanese action sentiment for strengthening our national defense, instead of weakening it, has grown rapidly. The threat to cut the Army for economy's sake may not materialize in Congress and it is now much more likely that the Vinson ten-year naval program, to give us a navy up to treaty strength, will be pessed by Congress.

Bridge of Steps

Neu Rossen, Germany, has a "bridge of steps." The structure is entirely of concrete, and the floor consists of a series of steps, gradually flattening at the top of the steep arch, in order to make the climb and descent easier for the pedestrians. A high steel railing at each side also helps the climbers.

Unlawful To Permit Dogs To Run At Large

From E. Lee LeCompte The Republican is in receipt of a letter calling the attention of the public to the law rclative to dogs running at large pursuing game which is very detrimental to the game supply, and especially to rabbits during the propagating season.

The law provides that it is unlawful for any person to allow any dog or dogs belonging to them to run at large on other property than that owned or tenanted by them between March 1st and September 1st and pursue game or destroy the eggs or the nests.

The penalty for violation of the law is a fine of not less than $25.

COMMUNITY SINGS BEING HELD IN MANY SECTIONS

Meetings Scheduled to Plan for Summer Programs at Park

Pomona Grange meeting was held at Sunnyside Grange hall on Mareh 3. John Carter, county agent of Garrett county, presided at the open meeting whieh followed. Rev. Walter B. Brock, pastor of the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, gave an address on George Washington, the Farmer." Miss Sara B. Huff lead the community singing using song slides. The enthusiastic singing was an indication of what we may expect on a much larger scale when thousands gather for the Sunday afternoon programs of Mountain Lake Institute this coming summer. The Punch and Judy quartet from Loch Lynn was present and rendered a number of selections. The "Corn Dodgers" string quartet also gave several numbers. As the meeting came to a close with each community represented, looking forward to the opportunity for a similar community sing in their own neighborhood, it was the common conviction that the program of Mountain Lake Institute will fill a long felt need in the rural, social and recreational life, according to I. S. Middaugh, director.

Loch Lynn Community Sing

It is planned to have Miss Huff and Mr. Middaugh present for the regular weekly sing to be held in Loeh Lynn Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All who are interested in singing and the program planned for this summer at Mountain Lake Institute, should not fail to be present.

Directors' Meeting

The third regular meeting of the Board of Directors of Mountain Lake Institute will be held Monday, March 14, at 3 o'clock in the County Agent's office in Oakland. The program is now well under way, it was stated and at this meeting many of the details of the summer plans will be worked out.

Mountain Top Ministers' Meeting

Reverend Walter B. Brock, president of the Mountain Top Ministers' Association, has called a meeting of the ministers of this area for Monday, March 14, at 10 a. m., to definitely plan for their cooperation in a Summer School of Religious Education for Mountain Lake Institute. Plans will also be discussed for a Ministers' Conference and retreat to be held later as a part of the program at Mt. Lake Park. Every minister and Sunday School superintendent is being asked to attend.

Community Meetings in Pennsylvania

Miss Sara B. Huff and Mr. Middaugh will represent Mountain Lake Institute on the program for the annual meeting of the Stony Creek Valley Community Association to be held at Shanksville, Pa., on the evening of March 11.

Saered Song Festival

A county-wide meeting has been called for Sunday afternoon, March 13, at 2 o'clock, at the Somerset High schol auditorium, Somerset, Pa. At this meeting representing Mountain join in singing sacred songs under the leadership of Miss Huff. Mr. Middaugh has been invited to speak at this meeting representting Mountain Lake Institute, and will present the opportunity for every community in the Tableland Area to join in the Extension program of Mountain Lake Institute. It is hoped that this will be the first of a number of county-wide meetings to be held throughout the Allegheny Tableland area.

Grateful For Service

I wish to take this method of thanking the public-spirited business men of Oakland who so generously donated their services and the use of their cars to transport the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band to Fairmont, W. Va., on Sunday, February 28, and to Pittsburgh on Sunday, March 6.

GROVER C. STEMPLE,
Mayor of Oakland, Md.

Only Two Cases of Undulent Fever Instead of 26 Cases

In the report of the county health officers which appeared in The Republican last Thursday an error appeared when it was stated that in the county there were 26 cases of undulant fever. The correct number of eases as reported by Dr. Clarke to The Republican was two. We regret having made the error.

Sunday in St. Mark's Lutheran Church

Sunday school session at 9:30 a. m. A elass for every grade of pupil is provided for those who do not have a Sunday school home. At 10:45 a. m., Divine worship with sermon: "They that Crucify—The Deserters." Men of the Brotherhood will be present in a body. In the evening Luther League at the usual hour when Prentiss Porter will be the leader. Evening worship at 7:30 with sermon: "The Miraeles of the Cross—The Grave Clothes." All are welcome to these services.

DIED.

JOHN HAINES

John Haines, aged 82, a retired Baltimore and Ohio engineer, of Deer Park, died at Memorial Hospital, in Cumberland, Saturday night, following an operation for appendicitis.

Funeral services were held at Deer Park, from the M. E. church, with interment in the Deer Park cemetery on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Haines is survived by his wife, one son Charles, of Pennsylvania, and one daughter, Mrs. Richard Murphy, of Deer Park; also by several grandchildren, two of whom lived at his home.

FRANK J. FOLK

Funeral services for Frank J. Folk, 72 years old, of Boswell, Pa., who died Thursday night at the Somerset Hospital, were held Monday afternoon at the Springs Mennonite church, with interment in the church cemetery. He is survived by two children, George, of Boswell, and Mrs. Savannah Durst, of Grantsville, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Elizabeth Ward, Frostburg; Simon Folk, Cumberland; Mrs. Hattie Stahl and Mrs. Ellen McKenzie, both of Jennings; Mrs. Eliza Butler, Keyser's Ridge, and Harvey Folk, Nanty-Glo, Pa.

MRS. MYRTLE OLIVE KELLY

Funeral services for Mrs. Myrtle Olive Kelly, aged 62, whose death occurred Sunday night at her home in Terra Alta, W. Va., following an illness of pneumonia, were held Wednesday morning in the Presbyterian church, Terra Alta, Rev. Walter B. Brock, pastor of Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, Oakland, officiating. Interment was made in the Terra Alta cemetery.

Mrs. Kelly was born and reared at Terra Alta and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Fraley. She had made her home in Grafton until the family moved to Terra Alta about six months ago. Survivors include the husband, James A. Kelly; one son Carroll Kelly, of Grafton, W. Va.; four grandchildren, and the following brothers and sisters: Rupert Fraley, Terra Alta; G. A. Fraley, and Mrs. Beulah Janoske, of Oakland; Albert Fraley, of Washington state; and Mrs. Ethel Coburn, of Martinsburg, West Va.

MRS. SARAH A. COMBS

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah A. Combs, 78, a former resident of Loch Lynn, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. B. Crane, at Buckhannon, W. Va., was held at the U. B. church, Loch Lynn, on Monday evening at 5:45. Because of the late arrivel of the funeral cortege, due to the condition of all highways, the service was very brief and was in charge of the pastor, Rev. S. A. Jessee.

Mary Margaret Lough and Helen Spidel, of Buckhannon, sang a duet, "Sometime We'll Understand", and the church choir rendered two numbers. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery beside her husband who died five years ago.

Besides Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Combs is survived by two sons, William, who is in a Baltimore hospital; and Walter, of Loch Lynn; also five grandchildren.

ALBERT BUSH

Albert Bush, aged 42, coal miner, was found dead at his home in Bloomington, Garrett county, yesterday morning by Frank Flynn, who had spent the night with Bush, who had been ill. Dr. James H. Wolverton, of Piedmont, who examined Bush's body, said that death was due to hemorrhage. Bush, unmarried, resided with his mother, Mrs. Minnie Bush. He had been employed by the Marsteller Coal Company. His other relatives are three brothers, Elmer, Howard and Leroy Bush, Bloomington, and four sisters, Mrs. Harder Davis and Mrs. Morgan Evans, Bloomington; Mrs. Thomas Dunlap, Cumberland, and Mrs. Lee Moorehead, Reedsville, W. Va. Funeral services will be held at the home Saturday noon. Burial will be at Hyndman, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wampler announce the birth of a son, born on Wednesday, March 2.

Miss Mary Jankey was a Sunday guest at the home of Loraine Otto.

Messrs. Allen Fresh and Ernest Durst motored to Hancock last Saturday where they spent the week-end visiting friends.

FRIENDSVILLE

Fire Does Slight Damage

A fire occurred in the home of Cecil Schroyer on Wednesday but due to the prompt response of the fire company the flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

Due to the heavy fall of snow the Elder Hill and Blooming Rose school busses have not been able to operate and bring the pupils from those districts into the town school.

Jean Skidmore, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Skidmore, narrowly escaped serious injury when he ran in front of an automobile here on the street one day last week.

An epidemic of mumps has struck this community and as a result several pupils have been sent to their homes when it was ascertained they were victims of the malady.

Wednesday was the coldest day experienced in Friendsville during the present year. The thermometer registered just zero.

Mr. Ross Friend is building a small house on Gravel Hill.

Walter Fike has sold his farm on Gravel Hill to James Friend of M. and his son Ralph.

THE cashier of the Brookville bank looked up from his desk as Sylvia, his competeat little stenographer, entered his office humming gayly.

"Why the mirth on Monday morning, Miss Sylvia?" he asked.

"The old, old reason—joy in having created something!" she told him.

"Tell me—let me be joyful, too," persisted the cashier.

He had known Sylvia since her childhood. Theirs was a friendly, family acquaintance aa well as a business association.

"I will—but you won't like it," Sylvia laughed.

"Oh—conceived the idea of getting married, I suppose."

Sylvia raised her hands in protest. "Not at all. But the effect on you will be just the same. I am going into business for myself."

The cashier listened while the girl unfolded her plan. The idea had come to her on Saturday morning like a flash of lightning from the unknown spaces. She had recognized it at once as an inspiration, and all through the week-end she had been turning it over in her mind until now it was a concrete plan all formulated and ready to put into action.

"Then you'll be a typewriter doctor, I gather," said the cashier when she had finished her outline.

"Yes—that's an attractive way to call it. There is no one in town who can mend a machine. You know yourself what a nuisance it is when the typewriters here in the office are out of order. We have to send to the city and not only pay the man's expenses but wait till he finds it convenient."

"Oh, I think you have hit upon a splendid idea. I—of course we hate to lose you, but we can't expect a girl with your ability and ambition to go on working for some one else at perhaps twenty dollars a week. Go to it, Miss Sylvia, and we will give you all the support we can."

Thus Sylvia severed her connections with the Brookville bank but she took with her all the good will of the officers and employees who, one and all, promised to help her to get launched in her new venture.

She found a diminutive office on the main street and called herself a "Typewriter Doctor." She had a native mechanical seaae and more than a little practical business ability.

It waa not long before Sylvia was very busy, and ahe had found it necessary to make a few trips to the city in order to learn from the makers of various machinea a number of intricate little peculiarities of their own typewriters. But she was quick and determined to succeed. Nothing aeemed too difficult. She waa happy and busy and she waa experiencing the thrill that comes with achievement.

One morning a young man appeared in her office.

"Good morning," she said cheerily.

The visitor explained that he was a writer and that he lived on a farm outside the limits of the city. His typewriter had become very badly in need of parts and repairs while he was in the middle of aome work for a weekly publication. He asked whether he might bring in his machine and perhaps rent one for a few days. That was his problem.

Sylvia assured him that that was her work, and she had several machiaes on hand that she could let him choose from. For by this time she had not only gone into the business of renting typewriters but ahe had acquired the agency of a neat little portable machine and was making handsome commissions on this.

If the young woman recognized another finger of fate pointing the way to her pathway she did not admit it. She confessed to herself that she was glad Mr. Bob Saunders would have to return for his machine. She liked him.

In a day or two, Bob Saunders appeared again. He was buoyantly happy.

"You are a mascot as well as a good typewriter doctor, Miss Bates," he said.

"How do you know?" asked Sylvia, for his machine was not ready.

"I have sold the story I wrote on the rented machine for more than a third again of what I have ever received before from the same people," he told her enthusiastically. "Now I can well afford to get the parts."

He remained in the little office longer than was necessary, but Sylvia kept on working. He was lost in admiration of the deft, easy way in which she went about mending this machine, adjusting that one, cleaniag another.

It became a habit—watching her.

"Could you—perhaps—doctor the heart of typewriting man, Miss—Sylvia?" he asked her one day after many weeks.

"I—might, if it needed it," admitted Sylvia.

"I think if you would—we—we could make a success—together." Bob wrote better than he talked.

But Sylvia managed to understand. And her response was all that he had hoped for.

"And, besides, the doctor needs a partner," she told him afterwards.

GRANTSVILLE

Public Gatherings Postponed

Because of the scarlet fever epidemic in the community, a great many of the scheduled public gatherings have been postponed. It seems that the epidemic has been checked, however, and the citizens of the community feel that it is better to discontinue some of the meetings until there is no apparent danger.

The union church service which was to have been held during the week of March 13th, has been indefinitely postponed, as well as the Yoder-Miller Quartet musicale, acheduled for this Thursday night, and the American Legion benefit card party for Wednesday evening, March 9th.

The Lewis Maust sale, which was to have been held on the 9th, has now been postponed until Wednesday, the 16th inst.

Winter With a Vengeance

The balmy spring weather which the people of this community enjoyed for nearly all the past month, has suddenly changed to winter. Sunday morning snow came, accompanied by a strong wind which continued until Monday at noon, piling the snow into huge drifts and making it necessary to keep snow plows in constant operation. Sunday evening traveling became so difficult that a large percentage of the tourists sought shelter for the night in the hotels and private homes of the town and in farmhouses along the National Highway. The storm was accompanied by a drop in temperature from 60 degrees to zero within a period of thirty hours or less.

Basketball Games

The Grantsville Free Wheelers and the Rex Club Juniors of Meyersdale, played a very interesting game of basketball in the National Garage Hall here on last Thursday evening, in which the Grantsville team was victorious, the score being Grantsville, 26; Meyersdale, 16.

The Grantsville team was again victorious in a game with the team from Confluence, Pa., on Friday evening, March 4. The score was: Grantsville 50, Confluence 13.

Miss Folk Entertains

The Teachers' Bridge Club was entertained by Miss Ferne Folk at her home last Thursday evening. Three tables were in play and the prize was won by Miss Mary G. Miller.

Prof. Rice Conducts Meeting

Prof. Rice, poultry specialist of the University of Maryland, College Park, was in this community last week and conducted a meeting for the benefit of those who are interested in the poultry industry, at the school building on Tuesday evening. The meeting, which was well attended, was very beneficial to all who are interested in this project.

Death of Milo Love

Milo Love, aged 38, died in Pittsburgh, Pa., last Friday. Mr. Love was a barber in this town for a short time several years ago.

Charles Robert Keller

Charles Robert, aged three years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Keller, died last Thursday night at 12 o'clock after a week's illness from scarlet fever. Because of the nature of his illness, a private funeral was held at the home on Saturday morning with interment in the Grantsville cemetery. Rev. M. A. Keifer and Rev. A. C. Bell officiated. The pallbearers were the uncles of the child, Allen, Otto and Harry Bender and his cousin, Byron Bender. He leaves to mourn his early death his parents and many other relatives and friends, who will greatly miss his bright smile and sunny disposition.

Eugene Miller

Eugene Miller, aged 21 years, died at his home, Meyersdale, Pa., Sunday night at 9:25, after a week's illness from double pneumonia and was hurried in the Grantsville Cemetery on Wednesday, March 9th.

He was a son of William H. and Myrtle Miller, who for many years were citizens of this community where Mr. Miller was employed at Stanton's Mill for sixteen years. He spent the years of his boyhood in Grantsville, where he was a favorite with his acquaintances. He was especially interested in athletics. He was a member of the Reformed church.

Funeral services were held at the home of the parents, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and burial was in the Grantsville cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Berlin, was in charge.

He is survived by three sisters: Mrs. Ward Compton, Ethel and Elenor Miller and by four brothers: Fay L., of Grantsville; Dalton, Cumberland; Earl K., Frostburg; and Wayne, at home.

Minor Mention

Miss Viola Broadwater, of Kempton, Md., spent the week-end with relatives and friends in Grantsville.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sherm, of Johnstown, Pa., were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gnagey at the National Hotel, last week.

Mrs. Mollie Turner, of Avilton, Md., spent the week-end with Miss Mary C. Dorsey.

Mrs. Ira Huff, who has been very ill, is recovering slowly.

Mrs. A. R. Getty, Mrs. Clarence Moore, Mrs. Eugene Hostettler, Mr. Oliver Getty, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hostettler and Miss Bertha Stein, all of Meyersdale, Pa., attended the funeral of Bobby Keller, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, of Boswell, Pa., and James Johnson, spent the week-end at the home of their mother, Mrs. Rebecca Johnson.

Everett Miller and family have moved into the house formerly owned by Mrs. Harriet Stanton, at Little Crossings.

TO PLAY OLSON'S SWEDES AND LONACONING QUINTET

Oakland A. A. to Meet Goodwill Fireman Tomorrow Night at Naylor's Hall, at 8:15

SWEDES HERE ON 19TH

Two outstanding basketball games will be played by the Oakland Independents, one with the Goodwill Firemen of Lonaconing, for the benefit of the Central Relief committee, and one with Olson's Terrible Swedes, of Humansville, Missouri.

The Goodwill Fireman will meet the local team on Friday evening in Naylor's hall, Oakland, and the proceeds will go to the Garrett county Central relief committee, to be used in purchasing food and clothing for the needy. The Firemen defeated Oakland on the O. H. S. gym several week ago in an extra-period battle, 34 to 30, and both teams will be out to win. Mr. B. O. Aiken will referee the contest, and admission will be 15 and 35 cents.

Naylor's Hall is being used so that more people can be accommodated.

Terrible Swedes Here

Olson's Terrible Swedes will appear in Oakland on Saturday, March 19, and this game also may possibly be played in Naylor's hall. The Swedes are one of the nationally known road teams of America and specialize in backhand passing. They are making their third eastern trip of the season, having met the Cumberland Caseys on their two former trips.

OAKLAND HIGH LOSES TO ALLEGANY FIVE 41 TO 29

Cumberland Quint Starts March Toward Third Successive State Title By Downing Locals

OAKLAND MAKES 11 FOULS

Allegany High school, of Cumberland, inaugurated the march toward its third consecutive state scholastic championship by defeating Oakland High school, Garrett county champions, in a game played at Naylor's hall, Oakland, Wednesday, by the score of 41 to 29.

Oakland made a good showing in the first quarter by holding the invaders to a 12-7 score, but in the second period the Allegany countians sewed up the game by increasing their total to thirty points while the home team's total was 12 at the halfway mark. Oakland opened the scoring and held a 5-2 lead for the first few minutes.

Coach Bowers of the Allegany quint, took his regulars out of the game in the third quarter, and Oakland showed up much better by outpointing the A. H. S. second string players, 17 to 11, but the 18 point handicap piled up in the first half proved too much to overcome. At the close of the third quarter the score was 33 to 18, but Oakland crept to within eight points of the visitors and Coach Bowers threw his regulars back into the game in the closing minutes.

The scoring combination of Captain Edgar Cessna, Paul Twigg and Dave Kauffman accounted for 13 of the 19 field goals credited to the winners. Cessna paced the point getters with six field goals, Twigg got four and Kauffman sank three shots.

Oakland scored nine field goals, four of which were registered by Ricc, pivot man. Maroncy, Oakland forward, gave the crowd a thrill in the game when he caged two beautiful backhanded shots. The Garrett Champs performed in a noteworthy manner at the frec throw line where they scored eleven points in 16 tries.

Wednesday's game marked the fifth meeting of Allegany and Garrett county teams in State competition. In 1927 Allegany beat Oakland 76-16. The following year Allegany walloped Oakland 63-17. The county was not represented in 1929, but a year later A. H. S. trounced Friendsville 49-13, and last March Coach Bowers, warriers had their toughest Inter-county battle up to that time with Kitzmiller High whom they defeated at Westernport 27 to 21.

Allegany has won the state championship three times during the past five years.

OAKLAND HIGH FIVE WINS CHAMPIONSHIP OF COUNTY

Comes From Behind To Rout Friendsville Quint 48 to 30

Oakland High School won the Garrett county scholastic basketball championship Saturday night at Bruce High in Westernport by defeating Friendsville in a play-off game 48-30.

What started off as a hectic battle turned into a rout as Oakland's men who had been missing some easy baskets throughout the first half began hitting on all shorts. Friendsville had a 22-20 lead at the intermission but from then on it was all Oakland, the county-seat team taking things in hand and romping home as it pleased. Butler, regular guard, was not in the line-up on account of sickness.

Peddicord was the high scorer for Oakland with 10 field goals, while Rice had six and Maroney five. W. Fox led Friendsville with five field goals and three fouls.

The lineup and summary:

Oakland—48		Friendsville—30
Peddicord	F	W. Fox
Maroney	F	Rumbaugh
Rice	C	Selby
Spoerlein	G	Coddington
Dawson	G	Rush

Substitutions: Oakland, Turney, Ray. Friendsvilie, McCullough.

Field goals: Oakland, Peddicord 10, Maroney 5, Rice 6, Dawson 1. Friendsville, W Fox 5, Selby 2, Coddington 2, Rush 2, Rumbaugh 1.

Fouls: Oakland, Peddicord 1-1, Maroney 1-4, Rice 2-4, Turney 0-1. Friendsville, Fox 3-7, Rush 3-5, Selby 0-2. Rumbaugh 0-1.

The following comprise the class to be confirmed in Zion Lutheran church on Sunday, March 20: Wm. East, Randall Georg, Carroll Goehringer, Frederick Kamp, Lena Georg, Hilda Georg and Mary Smith.

Missionary Society Meeting

The March meeting of the missionary society of St. Paul's Lutheran church was held in the home of Mrs. John Hetrick on Thursday evening. The meeting was ably led by Mrs. Smith Friend. There was an attendance of 14 members and guests. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Result of Municipal Election

At the municipal election, which was held in the town of Accident on Tuesday, Newton Gies and Peter J. Kahl were elected councilmen to serve two years.

Fire Insurance Company Meeting

The officers of the Farmers' Fire Insurance Company held a meeting in the Accident school building Saturday. Quite a large number were in attendance.

Notes of the Public School

Prof. B. O. Aiken, principal of the school, spent the week-end with relatives near Washington, D. C., and upon the return journey he became snowbound on the National Highway at a point between Frederick and Washington and was unable to reach here until Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth Parrish and Miss Mary Eagen were also away over the week-end and did not reach here until Tuesday, they being likewise snowbound.

Owing to the extremely cold weather and storm conditions which closed the road to Bittinger the bus from that place has not been operated for three days. The Hoyes bus is likewise off schedule and other busses have only made partial rounds. Attendance in the high school on Wednesday was only 51, and the grammar school attendance was 115.

The play, "Miss Fearless and Company," which was to have been presented last week-end was postponed until March 18 and 19. Illness among those to take part being the cause of its postponement.

At a recent meeting held in Accident a 4-H Club was organized with the following officers: President, Carl Fratz; vice-president, William Harmon; secretary, Austin Glotfelty; treasurer, Kenneth Keller; reporter, Harland Weitzell. All regular meetings will be held on the first Thursday of each month. This 4-H Club is being directed by County Agent J. H. Carter, cooperating with the U. S. Extension Service.

George Bushman, janitor at the school, has been quite ill this week and Edward Miller is filling his place.

The installation of electric lights in the Vo-Ag. room has been completed, the work having been done by the boys of this department.

Personal Mention

Miss Kathryn Speicher, of Kempton, spent the week-end here with her mother, Mrs. Clara Speicher.

Conrad Schmale was improving his home property last week by having some carpenter work done.

Miss Gladys Hetrick is spending some time with Miss Mildred Everly in the Cove.

Miss Marie Stark, of Bittinger, is here for a visit with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Speicher.

Mrs. Mary Hartman, who has been ill most of the winter, shows little improvement.

Wm. East was at Friendsville last week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. East.

Miss Blanche Speicher left Tuesday for Bellaire, O., where she will remain two weeks with relatives.

Mrs. DeLeon Rush and son, of Garrett, Indiana, are here visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McGettigan and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Brenneman and Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Broadwater, of Bittinger, visited Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ault last Saturday.

Stanley Fike, of Keyser, spent last Monday night at the home of Mr. N. M. Humberson.

Mr. and Mrs. Arch Whitehair and family, of Terra Alta, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sisler and Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Keller spent Sunday at the Luther Keller home.

Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Scrogum were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. Robert Alexander.

Mrs. Susan Beckman and daughter Clara, of Swanton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Speicher on Saturday.

Miss Nina B. Peck was at Somerset Wednesday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Siiger moved into the dwelling on the farm of H. J. Speicher recently.

Harvey J. Speicher was transacting business near Frederick several days this week.

MT. LAKE PARK

The Mayor Is Coming!

A letter from our very good friend, the Mayor of the Park, tells us that he expects to leave Los Angeles next Monday morning on the Panama-Pacific Liner Pennsylvania and come home by the way of the Panama Canal, arriving in New York about the 28th inst. He adds: "At present we are having beautiful weather and hope you will have the same kind for us when we reach home."

Well, just at the present writing we are not promising much along that line. Here we have been blowing our heads off by writing of the blooming flowers, the singing birds and the delightfully warm weather. We have great hopes for the future, but just now we are not on even speaking terms with the weather man. Our waking hours for the last few days have been spent in shoveling coal and slicing icicles off our whiskers.

In this connection we note a Lake Placid atmosphere was given to the Park this week by the presence on the slopes of Mrs. Utterback and son Bobby enjoying a twosome skiing.

Going to Attend Meeting

Rev. I. S. Middaugh leaves today for Shanksville, Pa., where he will attend a Tableland Association meeting on Friday in connection with the Stony Creek Valley County Association. He will be joined there by Miss Huff and on Sunday afternoon they will assist in a Somerset countywide sacred songfest at Somerset, Pa.

Saw and Planing Mill Moved

The H. V. Leighton and Son saw and planing mill has been moved from Loch Lynn to a point about a quarter of a mile beyond on the hard surfaced road. The firm has installed a combination planer and sizer to take care of any orders for frame lumber, flooring ceiling, finishing lumber, etc. We are glad to note that they will keep a supply stock on hand which will be an accommodation to those in this neighborhood. It is also encouraging to note that they will buy timber in the log.

Loch Lynn Election

The election Monday in Loch Lynn resulted in the election of Mr. A. L. Biggs and Mr. H. V. Leighton as members of the Town Council for a term of two years. Both of these men are much interested in the progress of the community and will work for its advancement.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Anna Rippert has returned to the Park from Baltimore where she spent the winter months with her daughter, and has opened her residence here.

Mrs. Frank Morgan is recovering from an attack of the influenza.

Mr. D. M. Lower spent Thursday of last wek in Frostburg on business.

Mrs. A. L. Biggs was hostess to the United Brethren Aid Society at the Ladies' Aid Hall on Friday afternoon.

GEN. WASHINGTON'S FIRST EMBLEM IS NOW IN RUINS

Neglected Monument In Maryland Reduced to Stone Pile

The first monument ever erected to the memory of George Washington stands today a bramble-guarded ruin atop South Mountain in Western Maryland.

No monument has been more shamefully neglected by the country which owes so much to the man whose works it commemorates and none was ever built with purer or more reverent patriotism.

Built in a Day

Led by veterans of the Revolutionary Army, the whole town of Boonsboro turned out on July 4, 1827, toiled 1200 feet up the mountain and labored all day without pay to build and dedicate this structure. They made it 30 feet high and 54 feet around the base.

At sundown a squad of heroes who had fought under Washington fired a salute at the close of appropriate ceremonies, according to contemporary writings.

This was just 28 years after the death of Washington, when the country was only beginning to realize the breadth of his vision and statesmanship.

Land Donated

Today the result of this labor of love is a refuge for rattlesnakes, buzzards and bobcats and a prey to the storms that sweep over the mountain.

An effort will be made this spring in Congress to obtain an appropriation to restore the monument and maintain it as a government reservation. The bill is being sponsored by Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland, backed by the State Daughters of the American Revolution, and by the Society for the Restoration of the First Washington Monument, organized by Senator Harvey Bomberger of Boonsboro. Senator Bomberger is a direct descendant of Laurene Bomberger to whom Lord Calvert granted the land on which the monument stands.

Historic Spot

The monument stands on the top of South Mountain overlooking the old National Highway, the main artery to the north and west from Washington.

From it can be seen the battlefield of Antietam, just below; and the hills of Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The spot is rich in historic interest. Washington himself helped in the building of the highway and it was over this road that Braddock marched to his defeat. The monument was used as a watch tower in the battle of South Mountain and Crampton's Gap and just below near Boonsboro John Brown made arrangements for his famous raid which in a large measure helped precipitate the Civil War.

Boonsboro was named after the family of which Daniel Boone was a member.

Washington's Visits to Cumberland

Few sections, outside his home neighborhood, were visited as often by Washington as Cumberland and vicinity.

On his first visit to the Fairfax lands in northwestern Virginia in 1748 as a surveyor, Washington came within ten or eleven miles of Cumberland, but did not reach the junction of Wills Creek and the Potomac River. Then a boy of sixteen, he surveyed miles of land in the Patterson Creek and the South Branch areas, and stayed several days at Col. Cresap's in Oldtown. This was his first visit to Allegany county, Maryland.

It was in 1750 that the Ohio Company selected the present site of Cumberland as a stragetic point for a store house and stockade.

From this time until 1758, a period of over seven years, the first President and Father of his Country was a frequent, almost constant, visitor to Cumberland.

Following his journey to the French in 1753 (with Cumberland as a stopping place both going and coming) Washington was commissioned a lieutenant-colonel under Col. Joshua Frey and came to Cumberland in 1754 as second in command of the Virginia forces ordered to repel the French advance to the present site of Pittsburgh.

Col. Frey's untimely death, when thrown from his horse between Oldtown and Cumberland, made Washington commander of the expedition against the French. This resulted in the battle at Fort Necessity on July 3, 1754, the first time that troops from different colonies had united for war on a common enemy. Fort Cumberland was the headquarters from which the Fort Necessity campaign was directed, and the point to which the soldiers returned after their failure to drive the French army away from Pittsburgh (Fort DuQuesne.)

Braddock and Forbes

Washington was here again in 1755 as an aide to General Braddock in the disastrous campaign against Fort DuQuesne. He was here from May 10 to June 10, and from here on July 18 wrote to his family of his safety after Braddock's defeat.

Aside from visits not connected with important events, Washington's next Cumberland appearance was on July 2, 1758, as head of 2000 men en route to join General Forbes in the final and successful campaign against the French at Pittsburgh. The future first President spent two months here, not leaving until September 9, when he marched his troops to Bedford, Pa., where he joined Forbes.

Washington's final visit to Cumberland was in October, 1794, when he stayed three days at the time of the so-called "Whiskey Rebellion."

In the meantime the American colonies, under his leadership, had won their independence and were now the United States of America; the youth who had lived here as a commander of Colonial troops against the French and Indians, had since then defeated the greatest armies of Europe and had forced the powerful British Empire to acknowledge his country's separte destiny, and had been elected for a second term as the new nation's first President!

How Washington must have reflected, when he came here in 1794, on the changes since 1754 and 1755. Then unknown—now the greatest figure in American history and a world celebrity!

It was here that Washington began his military career when he marched to Fort Necessity in 1754, and here he donned his military uniform for his last active service in 1794 as leader of the government forces against the Pennsylvanians who rose in defiance of the government's tax on whiskey. He went from here to Bedford and, after the collapse of the insurrection, returned to Philadelphia through Pennsylvania.

Homemakers' Column

By Miss Margaret Kirby Burtis
Home Demonstration Agent

Pie is said to be the most typical American food. It is the favorite dessert of our public eating places and if a census of our homes could be taken, pie would probably take first place as the one most popular food.

Buttermilk Pie.

Two cups buttermilk (warm), 3 yolks (or two whole eggs), 2 round tablespoons flour, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon lemon exeract. Mix and cook till thickened and put in baked crust, using whites for meringue. Tastes like lemon pie although the texture is not so smooth.

Cheese Pie

One and one-quarter cups smooth cottage cheese (2 qts. sour milk heated slowly and drained), 1½ cups milk (use rich milk or add 2 tablespoons melted butter), ¾ cup sugar (light brown or white), 2 eggs beaten slightly, 1 teaspoon vanilla or 2 teaspoons lemon juice, pinch of salt, cinnamon, nutmeg; 1 cup cocoanut may be added if liked. Bake as custard pie in unbaked crust. If curds are course, mash through sieve before adding milk.

Peach Pie

Six large peaches, ¼ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup flour, 2 tablespoons water, few grains nutmeg. Bake like one-crust apple pie, or for plain double-crust peach pie, bake same as apple pie.

Prune Pie

One-half pound prunes, soak, cook, seed and cut; boil juice down to ½ cup and add ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1½ teaspoons butter. Use double crust.

Lemon Sponge Pie

Three-fourths cup sugar, 1 lemon (juice and grated rind), 2 tablespoons flour, butter size of a walnut (melted or creamed), 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk beaten (2 or 3 eggs for larger pie, the rest not changed), 1 egg white (or more) folded in last. Bake in unbaked crust in moderate oven about 40 minutes.

Fifi Dorsay

Winsome Fifi Dorsay of the films was born in Montreal where she was educated. Her first stage experience was in a chorus which later was followed by a Greenwich Village Follies tour. Vaudeville came next, and then the talking pictures, her first appearance being with Will Rogers. She is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has black hair and hazel eyes.

DEEP CREEK PAGEANT TO OPEN SUMMER ACTIVITIES

Tentative Plans Call for Celebration in Early Part of June—Other Meetings Being Arranged

EXTENSION DAYS PLANNED

That no part of the Mountain Lake Park Institute and the Allegheny Tableland Association program was being received with greater enthusiasm than the pageants, was expressed by Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the Institute, who has been attending a number of meetings throughout the county in company with Miss Sara B. Huff, music leader.

The pre-season water pageant on Deep Creek Lake, planned for early in June is proving of greater interest to Oakland and Garrett county at the present time, he stated.

Deep Creek Lake will in time prove to be one of the greatest centers of recreation in the Tableland if the plans worked out by Miss Huff are realized. These plans will afford an opportunity to set forth the natural beauty of the lake and its surroundings.

Following the Deep Creek pageant will be the Fort Necessity celebration sponsored by the Tableland. Tentative plans assign the Somerset festival and pageant for the week-end of September 4 and the twenty thousand people who attended the meeting last fall are expected to return, bringing their friends with them. Later in the fall it is hoped to bring the season to a climax with a Harvest Home festival.

Future Farmer Program

After a conference with Dr. J. D. Blackwell, director of vocational agriculture in Maryland, and O. T. Graser, of the Oakland High school, plans are developing for a Sunday afternoon service sponsored by the Future Farmers of America. On that day Maryland future farmers would be hosts to the future farmers of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Extension Days

Two rural gatherings are promised for Sunday afternoon, July 10, and the week following. On Sunday, July 10, Garrett county, under the direction of John H. Carter, county agent, and Miss Margaret K. Burtis, home demonstration agent, will be host to the farm folks of the counties of West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Extension Service of Maryland, will be the speaker and Miss Huff will direct the music.

A week or two later West Virginia will be the host and Dr. Nat T. Frame will be the main speaker. He is director of the Extension Service in West Virgmia.

A community meeting was held on Sunday afternoon in Somerset High school, Somerset, Pa. Approximately 300 people were present in spite of the inclement weather and sang under the leadership of Miss Huff. Miss Elsie Dupstadt, chairman, was in charge. Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the Park Institute, was also present and outlined the program for the summer.

On Monday evening an audience of approximately two hundred filled the Odd Fellows Hall at Loch Lynn for the weekly sing. Any community organization, grange, church or other society desiring a meeting is asked to communicate with County Agent Carter and he will arrange for Miss Huff and Mr. Middaugh to visit the community.

Dates for Training School Set at Meeting of Mountain Top Ministers' Association

The dates for the Standard Teacher Training School for religious workers were set at the regular meeting of the Mountain Top Ministers Association held Monday morning in Oakland. The sessions of the school will begin on June 26 and continue until July 1, and all pastors, Sunday school officers, present and prospective teachers are being urged to make arrangements to be present and participate in the school work.

Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director of the Mountain Lake Institute, and Miss Sara Huff, music leader, were present at the meeting and outlined the tentative summer program for the county.

Rev. Walter B. Brock presided at the meeting, and Rev. W. E. Waybright, secretary, tendered his resignation, as he is leaving to assume a new pastorate in the State of Pennsylvania on April first.

RELIEF COMMITTEE AIDED BY ROTARIAN SUGGESTION

Approximately $75 Worth of Food and Clothing Collected

Following a suggestion made by a member of the Rotary Club at its meeting held at the William-James Hotel last Friday night, containers for the reception of food and other merchandise needed by the Relief Committee were placed in the stores of Oakland on Saturday morning and on Monday the material contributed by the general public was collected and delivered at the relief depot, the approximate value of the goods thus collected being seventy-five dollars, and consisting of canned goods, flour, meats, coffee, corn meal, dried vegetables, etc., and a considerable quantity of clothing. After emptying the containers Monday they were left in the stores and at this time many of them are being filled. A second collection of goods will be made tomorrow (Friday) by the committee in charge of this branch of Rotary work.

Stores where the containers may be found with the placard bearing the inscription, "SHARE A MEAL" are Lauer's Bakery, F. A. Smouse, Fraley's Market, J. P. Treacy, Daniel Smouse, Brown's, A. & P., Owen Treacy, Warnick & Broadwater, Gortner's, Coffman & Fisher's, H. L. Miller's, Oakland; Stanley Supply Co., at Crellin, and C. P. Martin & Son's, Mountain Lake Park. Other stores in the community will be outfitted with placards yet this week.

HEALTH OFFICER REPORTS ON SCARLET FEVER CASES

Erroneous Reports Circulated About Grantsville, He Says

There have been a great many erroneous reports regarding the number of scarlet fever cases in and around Grantsville, according to George E. Clarke, health officer. From February 1 to March 15 there were only 21 cases reported. In a school of 325 pupils this is not an alarming number. Of these 21 cases only 14 were of school age. Two were in adults and five in preschool children. There were only 13 families quarantined, which means that in some families more than one had the disease because the first case was not sufficiently isolated from the rest of the family. In the daily inspection of the school any child who had a sore throat was excluded from school for seven days and watched for other symptoms of scarlet fever. If none appeared they were allowed to return to school. They were not carried as scarlet fever cass.

No new cases of scarlet fever from the Grantsville school have been found since March 6. The health officer is continuing his inspection of the school to make sure that no mild cases are allowed to return and expose the other pupils. Some children were kept out of school to avoid contact with the other pupils. It is very likely that when these children return to school there will be more new cases reported, because they did not have the benefit of frequent inspection and some mild cases may have been missed at home.

Many children over the county have had hard, dry coughs which in a great many cases caused vomiting and resembled whooping cough. I do not feel that these cases are any more than a hard cold contracted as a result of our rather sudden changes in temperature. These children should be watched carefully by the family physician in order to avoid the complications of pneumonia.

Snow of Recent Storm Is Fast Disappearing

Snow, which has covered Garrett county and the adjacent sections of Pennsylvania and West Virginia for the past ten days or more, is fast disappearing on account of the rain and warm weather which have prevailed since Tuesday.

Although the Government weather bureau at Weber's shows that only about 8 inches of snow fell, the high winds caused it to drift in many places to depts of eight to ten feet, and in consequence there was much inconvenience and hard work in keeping the State highways clear and open

The thermometer registered around the zero mark on several mornings during the week, and the cold winds continued until Tuesday afternoon, when they subsided.

The first real snow of the winter is fast disappearing.

OLSON'S SWEDES TO MEET OAKLAND A. A. SATURDAY

Outstanding Road Basketbell Team To Play Locals On Oakland High School Floor

CONEY WINS CLOSE GAME

Olson's Terrible Swedes, of Humansville, Missouri, America's outstanding traveling basketball team, will meet the Oakland Independent basketball team here Saturday night in the Oakland High school auditorium.

The Swedes specialize in backhand passing and are well known in this section of the country, having played at Terra Alta and Cumberland. They are making their third eastern trip of the season.

Admission prices will be 25 and 35 cents. B. O. Aiken will referee.

Coney Wins Overtime Battle

The Goodwill Firemen of Lonaconing defeated the Oakland A. A. in an extra-period battle at Naylor's hall last Friday evening 30 to 29. The game was played for the benefit of the Central Relief committee.

Lonaconing led at half time 18 to 10, but a second half rally knotted the count at 22 all, and from then until the end of the game it was nip and tuck affair, the final gun sounding as the score stood 28 to 28. In the extra five-minute period Lonnconing shot a field goal, while Oakland garnered one foul.

Lonaconing won from Oakland about four weeks ago in an extra-period battle, the score at the end of the regular game standing 28 to 28. After the five minutes extra, however, the score stood 34 to 30.

Lineup and Summary:

Oakland 29.		Lonaconing 30.
Pollock	F	Darnley
Hanst	F	Turnbull
McComas	C	Wilson
Nally	G	McPartland
Lee	G	Eichorn

Drops Dead on Oakland Street Returning Home From Sister's Funeral at Midland

Delbert B. Knight, of West Union, West Va., returning from Midland, where he had attended the funeral services of his sister, Mrs. Hugh Brenager, dropped dead in front of the Central Hoel, Third street, Oakland last Thursday evening about 5 o'clock.

The man, in company with members of his family, were driving an automobile and at a point along the highway north of Oakland something went wrong with the machine and it is thought that overexertion in correcting the trouble, coupled with the intense cold, contributed largely to his sudden death. Arriving here Mr. Knight took his car to a garage and spent an hour or more there while repairs were being made and then repaired to the hotel where he was in the act of opening the door to the restaurant when he was stricken.

The body was taken to West Union where funeral services were held.

Contracts Are Awarded

That the McCabe Construction company of Salisbury, Pa., and Sam Faline, of Fairmont, W. Va., contractor, had been awarded the two road contracts open in Garrett county, was unofficially announced in Oakland this morning.

No official word has come yet from the State Roads commission. The McCabe Construction company will get the Swanton road contract, while the Fairmont contractor gets the Gorman-Loch Lynn stretch.

Work will begin in the near future, in all probability.

Gets 8 Years at Moundsville

Elza Rumbles, of St. George, W. Va., who cashed a county order belonging to John Jones, of Crellin, several weeks ago, was tried in a Tucker county court on a forgery charge and was sentenced to serve eight years in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va.

SCHOOL BUS PUPILS GET REGULATIONS FOR SAFETY

Rules Governing Transportation of School Children Distributed by County Superintendent

FOR DRIVERS AND PUPILS

Folders containing regulations governing the transportation of school children of Garrett county are being given out this week to each school child transported in the school buses with the primary idea in mind of safety, according to County Superintendent Franklin E. Rathbun.

Each folder shows the time the bus is scheduled to call at each home station, and includes fifteen rules of safety for the pupils to observe and 20 rules for the driver.

The most important rules laid down in the folder are as follows:

For The Pupil

The driver has absolute control of the bus and the conduct of those on it.

Girls should be given first place in entering the bus.

Never put your head or hands out of the bus windows.

Never get off or on while the bus is in motion.

Never ride on outside of bus, fenders, running board or step.

Positively no smoking, use of profane language or misbehavior of any kind will be tolerated.

Use common sense and thereby escape injury.

Take full advantage of the opportunities the taxpayers of the county and the State are giving you.

Children whose homes are on the opposite side of the road from where the bus stops are not to cross over to the other side of the road until after the bus has pulled away.

Note carefully signs along State improved highways erected by the State Roads Commission, reading as follows: Walk to the left—facing traffic.

For The Driver

When in doubt, take no chances—for human lives are in your hands.

Never speed.

Always stop at railroad crossing. Do not drive bus on track until you are positive there is no danger.

Give the other fellow half the road.

Never start the bus until the children are inside and the doors closed.

Never open the doors to let children off at their regular stopping places until the bus comes to a full stop.

Do not back bus on school grounds unless it is absolutely necessary and you are positive no child is behind the bus.

Never pass another school bus while it is loading or unloading children on the public road without first bringing the bus to a full stop for at least a minute and not less than fifty feet behind the other bus.

Report to the principal any misconduct of any passenger or the violation of any rules.

A special caution states that the buses should not be run while containing school children when the roads are dangerously slippery or in any way endangers the safety of the passengers.

Safety, first, last and always is the principal message to be conveyed by the folder.

Attempting to Eliminate Disease From Certified Seed Potatoes

In an attempt to produce seed potatoes as free from diseases as it is possible to do, an experiment is being carried out with Garrett county certified seed potatoes, to determine whether potatoes can be tuber indexed in Maryland without the facilities of a green house, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

John W. Hughberger, of the plant pathology department of the University of Maryland was here on Monday and Thursday taking 200 samples of tubers from certified seed, obtained two years ago from Canada and planted last year in this county.

The samples from the tubers will be planted this week on the Eastern shore, and will have grown enough by the time potatoes are ready to be planted in Garrett county, to tell whether or not they are diseased. If any one of the samples are found diseased, the balance of the potato, from which the sample was taken, which is left in the county, will not be planted.

In this way, it is hoped to get rid of any existing disease in certified seed potatoes.

Found Guilty of Charge

Jefferson Burch, of near White Rock, who was arrested recently on charges of driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants and for reckless driving, was given a hearing Saturday before W. A. Gonder, Justice of the Peace, and was fined $100 and costs in the first case and $1 and costs in the second. In default of paying the fine, he was remanded to the custody of Sheriff Haenftling.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS HIGHEST IN ATTENDANCE

Garrett Places First Among the Counties for Month of January

Garrett county elementary and two-teacher schools placed first among the other counties of the State in percentage of attendance for the month of January, according to a bulletin from the State Department of Education just received at the office of the local education board. Elementary schools had a percentage of 93.8, while the two-teacher schools had a percentage of 95.5.

This was the first time during the present year for the two-teacher schools of the county to attain first place, but the second consecutive time the elementary schools had led the other counties of the State.

Graded schools of the county which have been first for the last three months were second compared to other counties of Maryland with a percentage of 93.8. One-teacher schools were third with 93.3, having dropped from second place last month.

High schools were eighteenth among the counties, with 94 percent.

PAT HELBIG AND OTHERS CAUGHT IN LIQUOR RAIDS

Eight Are Gathered In by Prohibition Officers Yesterday and Last Night, Harry Stahl One

TWO ARE OUT ON BOND

A series of raids yesterday and last night by Federal Prohibition Officers Harvey and Ford, working out of the Cumberland headquarters, resulted in the arrest of eight people, six of whom are still in the Garrett County Jail in default of bond for their appearance. Two of them are women.

Harry Stahl, of Oakland, who operates a bus line between Oakland and Kitzmiller, and also maintains a taxi station here, was one of those arrested. At his taxi office on Green street the officers found several kegs and bottles filled with intoxicants, the raid being made unexpectedly netted about forty gallons. This was destroyed and Stahl placed under arrest. He has given bond for his appearance when wanted in court.

Pat Helbig, of near Deer Park, was picked up on the highway by the officers, charged with possession and transportation of intoxicants. His car in which was found the liquor, was confiscated and is being held at the Kerins garage under Government seal. Helbig also furnished bond for his appearance.

Others arrested on manufacture and possession charges include Harry Griffith, of near Red House; Andy Miller, of near Gortner; Harry Dennis and son Alvey, of near Bayard; Mrs. Laura Leach, Shallmar, and Elizabeth Aronhalt, of Gorman.

Central Relief Committee Urges Planting of Gardens

The Central Relief committee, following its regular meeting last night, urges that every citizen of Garrett county plant a garden this spring. If in the habit of planting a garden, the one this year should be a bigger and better one. By planting an extra row, it will be possible to help out next year in case of a demand for relief.

The Central committee will provide seed to people who are unable to purchase them. The committee cannot be in sympathy with people who have an opportunity to plant gardens and fail to do it.

Oakland Relief Committee Reports on Card Party and Donations Received

Snow and severe cold did not deter enthusiastic citizens from attending the benefit card party held last Thursday evening in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Oakland, to raise funds for the local relief committee. Over 80 persons attended and the total receipts amounted to $88.19. This sum includes the income derived from ticket sales as well as the generous individual contributions made to the party. The use of the Knights of Pythias Hall, the food served and the prizes were generously donated.

Recently numbers of gifts of cash and clothes have been received by the committee from the following sources: Clothing, Mrs. Falkenstein, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Grover Stemple. Cash, Miss Eva Falkenstein, Mrs. Loraditch's Sunday school class of the Lutheran church, Mrs. D. E. Offutt, Mr. F. A. Thayer.

GROVER STEMPLE CHOSEN MAYOR FOR SECOND TERM

Walter Hardesty, R. Carlton McComas and Ralph T. Thayer Are Elected Councilmen

HARDESTY LEADS TICKET

Grover C. Stemple was re-elected Mayor of Oakland for the ensuing two years at the municipal election held on Monday at the polls in the town hall, having been nominated for the office at the meeting of citizens on last Thursday evening without opposition.

Walter Hardesty, Carlton McComas and Ralph Thayer were elected as members of the Town Council, the latter two succeeding themselves as members of that body. Walter Hardesty led the ticket with 351 votes. Frank A. Smouse and J. Frank Browning were the two unsuccessful candidates.

Miss Frances Hamill, who was unopposed, was re-elected Treasurer. A total of 489 votes were cast, which is 84 more than was cast last year, but 84 less than was cast at the election two years ago when Mayor Stemple was chosen the first time.

On account of weather conditions which prevailed Monday, the day being as stormy and as cold as at any time within the past five or six years, the vote was considered heavy, with much interest shown by the townspeople.

Nominated at Meeting

The candidates voted for on Monday were all nominated at the citizens meeting held last Thursday evening at the City Hall, where only one ticket composed of five councilmanic candidates, the mayor and the treasurer, was named. From the five candidates for council, three were chosen—those receiving the highest number of votes. The mayor-elect and the councilmen-elect will serve terms of two years, while the treasurer-elect will be in office but one year.

The results of the election are as follows:

For Mayor:
Grover C. Stemple	381
For Councilmen
Walter Hardesty	351
R. Carlton McComas	338
Ralph T. Thayer	259
Frank A. Smouse	224
J. Frank Browning	178
For Town Tresurer
Miss Frances C. Hamill	367

Howard P. Stuck is the only retiring member of council and he was not in the field for re-election. Present councilmen who are hold-overs are Cheston H. Browning, William Whorton and George Kerins.

The new council will organize at the next regular meeting to be held on April 4.

Allegany High Paper Wins First Honors Among School Publications

The "Alcohi Mirror," publication of the Allegany High School, Cumberland, won first place award in the national competition for scholastic publications, held in conjunction with the Columbia Press Association's eighth annual conference at Columbia University, New York, last week.

The Cumberland school paper was entered in the class for news publications of schools with an enrollment of from 301 to 800 students. Eight hundred and sixty student magazines and newspapers were entered in the competition, among them being publications from Canada and Alaska.

The "Alcohi Mirror" has been composed and printed in the office of The Republican, Oakland, for the past four years.

Banks To Observe Two Days' Holiday

Friday and Saturday of next week being declared legal holidays by virtue of a proclamation issued by Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, the banks of Oakland will not be open for business on these days but will resume the regular routine on Monday following.

To Assist in Syrup Inspection

Mr. W. C. Beaven, federal-state inspector for maple products, will be in Garrett county for several weeks to assist the maple syrup and maple sugar producers in grading their products. He arrived here last Thursday and will remain in the county several weeks and can be reached through John H. Carter, county agent.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 20

JESUS DIES ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—John 19:17-22; 25-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dies for Us.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Christ Died.

This lesson presents the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is in a real sense the climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of life and liberty for all the world. It is highly important that every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for himself and then endeavor to get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death. We escape judgment because the judgment we merited fell upon Christ.

I. The Place (v. 17).

It was on a hill called in Latin "Calvary" and in Hebrew "Golgotha," which in shape resembled a skull. This hill is a few yards outside Jerusalem. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as a result of sin—life and intelligence gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern.

II. His Companions (v. 18, cf. Luke 23:33).

Two malefactors were crucified with him. Their names are not given. This was in fulfillment of Isaiah 53:12, "He was numbered with the transgressors." He was sinless, but became sin for us.

III. The Inscription over Him (vv. 19, 20).

It was customary to place an inscription over the cross, stating the crime for which the victim suffered. Although Pilate did this in bitter irony and contempt, he uttered a great truth, affirming more than he intended.

IV. Gambling for the Garments of Jesus (vv. 23, 24).

This was a fulfillment of the scripture, "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture" Ps. 22:18. This is an exhibition of how men's hearts may be so calloused as to plan an act for present gain under the shadow of the cross of Christ.

V. Utterances from the Cross (vv. 25-30).

1. "Behold thy son—"Behold thy mother" (vv. 25, 26). In this crucial hour he forgot his own bitter anguish and interested himself in those he loved. This is a fine example of human sympathy, and especially of filial love at its best.

2. "I thirst" (v. 28). As the sinner's representative, he suffered not only untold agony of mind, but of body as well.

3. "It is finished" (v. 30). While no one can fathom the depth of meaning in these words, they no doubt indicate a. That the calumnies and indignities heaped upon him were at an end. His trial was grossly illegal. False witnesses were employed to incriminate him.

b. His awful sufferings were at an end. The penalty of the unnamable and indescribable sins of the world were resting upon him, wringing from him the pathetic cry, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

c. The fulfillment of every type and prophecy.

d. His life of perfect obedience.

e. The great work of redemption. "Finished" means more than ended. It means "accomplished." All that he started out to do was now completed.

f. The judgment of the world and the casting out of Satan. (See John 12:31.)

"From this point on there was no more humiliation, insult, or outrage. From the moment when the spear-thrust made it certain that he was actually dead, no cherished infant form could be more tenderly taken in arms, wrapped in clean linen with aromatic spices, and laid at rest in a faultlessly clean chamber. Neither was he ever again seen by an unfriendly eye. Truly, as to all sorrow and suffering and vicarious agony, it was finished."

VI. His Death (v. 30, cf. Luke 23:44, 45).

His death was voluntary. It was unlike any other death in all history. By an act of sovereign will he dismissed his spirit. No one took his life from him. He had power to lay it down and power to take it up again. So shocking was the crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday.

An Ode to Snow

While Terrence Tamburini, Turk Shartzer, Hugh Teets, Tom Compton, and Skip Liller were trying to get out of the drift at Sebold's Turn on that fateful Sunday trip to Pittsburgh with the Boys' Band, Turk jotted down a few words while he was trying to hold the wind from his ears:

The snow is falling thick and fast
And across these mountains sweeps a blast
That would freeze you to the liver.
You can't go east, you can't go west
No matter if you try your best—
You just stand there and shiver.

The guy who wrote some time ago
That stuff about 'The Beautiful Snow'
Was certainly full of prunes.
For this dernstuff blows through our clothes
And forms icicles on our nose
And soaks our pantaloons.

After reading these lines, I suggest, Turk, that you remain in the meat business with Harry Miller, who is a good boss.

Dogs! Dogs! Dogs!

Among my many anonymous communications this week was the following:

Dear Scoop:—If you want an interesting subject for your column next week please write something about "dogs."

Did you know that they were changing the name of Pennington street to Dog street, and that a resident on that street had leased property and ground to take care of all the stray dogs and ones belonging to the people of Oakland for the next year to come? Please don't forget.

Inasmuch as I live on Pennington street, I believe they ought to consult me before changing its name. If this request had come the day Ray Teets accidentally ran over my "up and coming" puppy, Broker, I could have written a tear-wringing essay on dogs. But right now the only interesting things I know about dogs are that they bark at night, they have cold noses, and use their tails to register joy, anger, contentment, restlessness and indecision, and a lot of other things too numerous to mention.

All I can say is that if they hold a convention for stray dogs up on our street, I certainly hope it isn't under my window.

Hold Everything, Sez You!

Turned into Scoop by a merchant of Oakland:

Fifty years ago women wore hoop skirts, bustles, petticoats, corsets, cotton stockings, high button shoes, ruffled cotton drawers, flannel nightgowns, puffs in their hair. They did their own cooking, baking, cleaning, washing, ironing, raised big families, went to church on Sunday and were too busy to get sick.

Men wore whiskers, square hats, Ascot ties, red flannel underwear, big watch and chain, chopped wood for the stoves, bathed once a week, rode bicycles, buggies and sleighs, went in for politics, worked twelve hours a day and lived to a ripe old age.

Stores burned oil lamps, carried everything in stock from a needle to a threshing machine, trusted everybody, never took an inventory, placed orders for goods a year in advance, and always made money.

Today women wear silk stockings, low shoes, an ounce of underwear, have bobbed hair, smoke, paint and powder, drink cocktails, play bridge, drive cars, have pet dogs and go in for politics.

Men have high blood pressure, wear no hats (and some no hair), shave their whiskers, shoot golf, bathe twice a day, drink poison, play the stock market, ride in airplanes, never go to bed the same day they get up, are misunderstood by women of the home, work five hours a day, play ten and die young.

Stores have electric lights, cash registers, elevators, never what a customer wants, trusts nobody, take inventory daily, never buy in advance, have overhead, markup, markdown, quota, budget, stock control, annual and semi-annual, end-of-month, dollar-day, founders-day, rummage-economy-day sales and never make money.

The picture this week was taken a long time ago, but not so long for those who are in it. It was taken in front of the Grammar school, and as far as can be learned Col. Bell was not the photographer.

GRANTSVILLE

Wintry Weather Continues

This community, and indeed all sections of the county, is still experiencing extremely cold and stormy conditions of the weather. A rise in temperature last Thursday was followed by a lowering temperature on Friday and Saturday and a snowfall on Sunday and Monday, accompanied by a high northwestern wind which lasted until Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Bender Entertains

Mrs. Byron Bender was hostess to the Bridge Club at her home at Little Crossings last Tuesday evening. Three tables were in play and the prize was won by Mrs. N. R. Davis.

Home Hygiene Class

The lesson for the home hygiene class last week was "Temperatures and Thermometers," and the demonstration on the use of thermometers was given by Mrs. J. F. Fahey, one of the public health nurses of the county.

Will Hold Bake Sale

The Methodist Ladies' Aid Society will hold a bake sale on Saturday afternoon, March 26th. The proceeds will be used for improvements on the parsonage.

To Conduct Services Good Friday

At the Holmes-Wallace Studios a brief Good Friday service will be conducted in the afternoon, March 25, at three o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

Teachers' Bridge Club

Miss Mary Miller entertained the Teachers' Bridge Club last Thursday evening, when three tables were in play. The hostess served delicious refreshments. A very pleasant evening was spent.

School Attendance Low

The public schools reopened here Monday morning after having been closed for a week because of the cold weather and inability to heat the school building and also on account of the scarlet fever epidemic in the community. An attendance of about 40 percent of the enrolled students was present.

Personals and News Briefs

Dr. Clarke, county health officer, of Oakland, was a professional caller in Grantsville on Monday.

Attorney A. T. Matthews, of Oakland, was a business caller here on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Edwards and family spent Sunday with relatives of Mrs. Edwards at Grindstone, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. William Petry, of Salisbury, Pa., were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bill.

Rev. A. C. Bell is spending several days with friends in Clarksburg, West Va.

Loy Miller has moved with his family to Jennings.

Among those of the community on the sick list are John Zehner, John Hanft, Mrs. B. T. Keller and Mrs. W. D. Mullinix.

Joseph Livengood and George Oester, of Greenville, Pa., spent the week-end with the former's family in this place.

ACCIDENT

Church Notes

Church of the Brethren, Rev. A. D. Scrogum, Pastor—Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., and worship at 10:30.

Zion Lutheran Church, Rev. A. W. Gode, Pastor—10:30 a. m., the Sunday school session; 10:30 a. m., confirmation service, and on Good Friday at 10:30, English service.

Birthday Surprise Party

Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Richter, near Accident, a very pleasant birthday party was held in honor of Mr. Richter's anniversary, when the following named composed a party who took advantage of the sleighing snow and went to the farm home of the couple in the old-fashioned manner—by sleighs. Mr. Richter was not expecting any guests and was somewhat surprised when the party arrived: Mrs. William Miller, Carl, Edward, Hildegarde, Amelia, Martha and Lena Miller, Margaret Harmon, Rose and Fred. Miller, Leslie Deal, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Callis, Ben and Gordon Callis, S. K. Schlossnagle. Delicious refreshments were served.

School Notes

Owing to weather conditions and the consequent drifted roads, the play, Miss Fearless and Company, which was to have been presented in the auditorium on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, has been postponed indefinitely.

All school busses are making their regular trips this week with the exception of the Bittinger community conveyance, which has been unable to get through the drifts since the beginning of the storm which struck here on Sunday afternoon, March 6.

There is an attendance of about 75 per cent in the grammar school.

The teaching staff of the school, some of whom were absent last week owing to the storm and drifted highways, are in attendance this week.

Six boxes of library books have been received from the Maryland Public Library in Baltimore. These books have been loaned for use in both the grammar and high schools and books suitable for all grades and the high school students as well can be secured.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Catherine Goehringer spent last Saturday in Oakland.

Miss Gladys Hetrick returned home Monday after having spent ten days with Miss Mildred Everly in the Cove.

Miss Hildegarde Miller spent last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Spoerlein.

BITTINGER

There's something that's nice in the homliest guy,
There's always a rainbow somewhere in the sky,
There's room for a smile on every one's face,
But a frown never found a legitimate place.

Snow-bound all last week, visitors were few and news for the week, like traffic, was at a stand still.

The mail service from this village was interrupted on Monday of last week by the snow storm, but the remaining days of the week had their regular mail brought by sled and team.

John J. Oester, of Keyser's Ridge, was a caller among us one day last week.

Hilleary Resh, of near Jennings, made a business trip to this settlement a few days ago.

Orville Kinsinger, of near Jennings, was snow-bound in this neighborhood all of last week.

Owners of local sugar camps are utilizing the snow for hauling more coal to their several camps on sleds.

The lowest temperature reported in this vicinity last week was six degrees below zero, and that was plenty.

Miss Edna Wiley returned last Wednesday from a few days' visit with relatives in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Baker, principal of the village school, was unable to get to her school until the middle of the week.

He Put It Over

By H. IRVING KING

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

ALTHOUGH Roderick McKesson was guardian for his niece, Alice Randolph, and for Gerald, the son of his deceased friend, Simon Cuthbert, he had no idea of allowing his two wards to marry. He regarded Gerald as too lacking in business ability to ever really get on in the world. He was too light and airy in his talk and behavior to suit old Roderick, who was a ponderous person and liked solemnity and ponderosity in others.

Roderick's idea of the proper sort of a husband for Alice was Gilbert Anderson. Anderson was a hustler, always in business up to his neck; full of schemes for making vast amounts of money. He had not made any yet, but there had always been a plausible reason why the particular scheme he had been trying to put over had not succeeded. Gilbert had marked Roderick as his own and deferred to him.

Alice detested Gilbert and told her uncle she was going to marry Gerald. Her uncle said emphatically that she was not and she replied: "You just wait and see." When she had said "No" to Gerald upon his proposing, he had replied: "Say, old girl, you don't really mean that—do you?" To which she had answered: "Why, of course I don't, you silly. Only we have got to wait. Uncle is dead set against you and is touting for that Anderson person. But I'll be twenty-five in six months and my own mistress. Under the terms of father's will if I marry before I am twenty-five without uncle's consent, I forfeit my money, and I don't want to do that. In six months you come and ask me again."

This set Gerald to thinking. Six months was a long time to wait; but Alice was a level-headed girl and quite right to want to avoid sacrificing her fortune. When Gerald had turned twenty-one Roderick had called him into his office and shown him a lot of figures, of which he comprehended only enough to know that they represented a considerable fortune, and he had insisted that the old man go on managing his affairs.

The next day Gerald went to call upon Roderick McKesson. "Oh, you?" said Roderick, "what is it? Make it short, I am busy."

As a rule Gerald was a trifle loud in his dress; today he was attired soberly. His manner was generally a trifle frivolous; today he had an air of seriousness and suppressed energy. You would have spotted him anywhere for a business man accustomed to deal with important questions. It was not for nothing that Gerald had been a star in amateur theatricals. "Sir," said he gravely, "I called to ask if you could not reconsider your objection to my marriage with your niece?"

"No," roared Roderick, "I never reconsider."

Gerald saw a large envelope lying on Roderick's desk in the upper left-hand corner of which was printed in large type, "The Agawunsk Finishing Company." "Have you—er—have you, if it is not an impertinent question, invested anything in that concern?" And he pointed to the envelope.

"I have," snapped Roderick, "what of it?"

"Well," replied Gerald, "I have been taking rather an interest in business matters of late; especially new enterprises, and the Agawunsk company is a rather doubtful concern."

"Nonsense," cried Roderick, "they have contracts ahead for twenty years."

"Yes," said Gerald, "and they show these contracts to lure investors. The fact is they are losing two cents a yard on every yard of cloth they finish."

"I am too busy to talk further with you today," said Roderick. The old man got exceedingly busy after Gerald left, calling up credit concerns and financial men who kept well informed of all that was going on. Roderick himself had been rather "out of it" for some years, jogging along in old ruts. He had been lured into the Agawunsk scheme by Gilbert Anderson—and he had invested ten thousand dollars of Gerald Cuthbert's money in the concern.

When the old man had finished his investigations he had a grim look. The first thing he did was to transfer the Agawunsk bonds to his own account and deposit a certified check for ten thousand to the account of Gerald. "The young whippersnapper has business ability after all," he grudgingly thought.

As a matter of fact Gerald was so intensely jealous of Gilbert Anderson that he kept his ears open for anything concerning him. Having overheard two business men mention Gilbert's name at the club in a slighting manner he had taken one of them aside, demanding further information. And it had taken Lester Craddock an hour and a half to get through Gerald's head a full comprehension of the status of the Agawunsk company.

"Alice," said Roderick to his niece that night, "young Cuthbert is getting to be quite a business man. I have changed my opinion of him."

"And he plays a rattling game of tennis," said Alice.

Roderick frowned. "In spite of that," said he, "you might do worse than marry him."

They were married, and the Agawunsk Finishing company blew up two months after their marriage.

Birds of a Feather

By JANE OSBORN

(WNU Service)

THERE was always something cheerful about the atmosphere of O'Grady's store that stood on one of the corners where the state highway crossed the old Main street of the village called North Hill.

There were always plenty of people waiting for the bus, young men who bought cigarettes as an excuse to hang around an hour or more, older men occasionally talking politics, girls sitting at the tables giggling over their ice cream. If you had been a resident of North Hill and had had a son you would have taken it for granted probably that he would occasionally join the loiterers at O'Grady's.

But if you had had a daughter you would have passed on to her the unwritten law that girls didn't hang about O'Grady's. They went there for ice cream, or to buy a paper or candy or a quart of milk. But having made their purchase or eaten their ice cream they left. Even boys who spent too much time at O'Grady's were looked upon as idlers and loafers.

It was at O'Grady's that Lois Granger first saw Malcolm Kent. She had gone to buy bird seed and Malcolm was with the loafers leaning against the tobacco counter. Lois cast a glance in that direction just to see who was there and naturally enough noticed Kent. He was a stranger and looked so different from the usual O'Grady frequenter, she assumed that he was waiting for a bus.

But when a day or so later she went to O'Grady's with her little sister to get an ice cream cone and noticed again the tall, rather well-dressed young man loitering there beside the cigarette counter apparently feeling very much at home, she concluded that he had got the O'Grady habit.

"Who is the good-looking stranger that's been hanging around O'Grady's lately?" Lois' uncle asked that evening at supper.

Lois tried to look indifferent, while her older brother informed the family that the loafer was named Malcolm Kent and that he was a cousin or something of the Robinsons who had a big farm out beyond the creek. Tom further announced that he had met the young man, liked him and if there was no family objection, would bring him around to supper.

"He can't be much account," observed Lois' mother, "if he's always hanging around O'Grady's."

"Still, just because he goes there isn't any sign he's like the other O'Grady loafers," Lois said.

"Birds of a feather flock together," pronounced her mother.

"You're right," said the uncle. "Every time I've been in there he was having the time of his life."

Still it was agreed to permit Tom to bring the young man to supper. And that was where Lois met him.

Malcolm called again two nights later and when he was told that Tom was not at home he asked whether he might see Miss Lois. Yes, he had actually come to see her. He had an idea that Tom wouldn't be home.

Almost every night at supper when Malcolm wasn't present Lois' family spent some time in discussing Mr. Kent. He had said something about having had some sort of a job on a newspaper. But certainly he couldn't be doing any news gathering out here at North Hill. And always Lois' mother would observe that birds of a feather flocked together. It was a matter of common talk that he spent more than half his waking hours at O'Grady's.

Then, one Saturday afternoon, Malcolm and Lois went walking down country lanes in the mellow autumn sunshine, and Malcolm asked Lois to be his wife.

"I think I'd like to, but I don't know how my family will feel about it. They know you aren't working, and you spend so much time at O'Grady's."

"Just because I hang around O'Grady's doesn't mean that I am like other O'Grady habitues, does it?" asked Malcolm with a mystifying smile.

"Only mother says that birds of a feather flock together."

"Well, it happens that the reason why this bird flocks around O'Grady's is because he is of an entirely different feather."

Lois told him, in a rather hurt tone, that she hadn't the least idea what he was talking about. "It seems to me that if you really care enough about me to want to marry me, you wouldn't hang out there all the time—that you'd be making plans to do something some time."

So Malcolm explained, but he made Lois promise not to tell the others until he left. He had written a novel—a darned good novel, too. Malcolm frankly admitted. "But, you see, I've always been something of a bookworm, never spent enough time talking with the kind of birds that stick around O'Grady's. And there are chapters in that book of mine that need the kind of talk you get at O'Grady's. Came out to see the Robinsons one day and happened in at O'Grady's—found it was just the sort of thing I needed—the publishers have accepted the book—that is, when I put in a bit more first-hand work on those chapters. And now I've got my regular job on my paper. Book reviewing, you know—I've been carrying on as usual while I've been away."

And Lois was satisfied.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S LABORS PRAISED BY TAIT

Chairman of G. O. P. State Committee Delivers Address At Hagerstown

LAYS TROUBLES TO WAR

President Hoover's "self-sacrificing labors" for the financial regeneration of the nation "are meeting the just reward of a widening sense of appreciation and a more accurate appraisal of their high value in this great emergency of our history," Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, said last Friday night at a meeting he addressed at Hagerstown, which was attended by Republican workers and executives of the Sixth Congressional District.

"One splendid constructive plan after another—like the seven great labors of Hercules—have proceeded from his pen and brain," he asserted.

Says Test Is Being Made

"In these days of world-wide financial depression there has been an organized effort made by the national opposition to capitalize human suffering and to attempt to hold the Republican party and the present administration and its leaders responsible for the country's financial ills," Mr. Tait said.

"It has ben said," he continued, "that the character of an individual is tested both by days of prosperity and the times of adversity. The principle is also true with respect to the character and conduct of a political party, which is a great living, social organism. It applies to the Republican party, which, under its great leadr, is today heroically meeting the test of calumny and adversity. This test is being met in the brave and unconquerable spirit expressed in the poem 'Invictus':

'It matters not how straight the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate,
I am captain of my soul.'

"The opposition party opens the gospel of politics at Revelations. I think it fairer to begin at Genesis. They prefer to discuss only results, I desire to refer to original causes.

"Our troubles, as in past epochs of history, are largely due to the horrifying waste of life and the colossal destruction of capital in the Great War. That is a condition which has followed every general war among nations for which our present national administration and leadership are not responsible.

"Are the memories of people so short that they do not recall that while feverish preparations were under way, President Wilson and his party were given a renewed mandate of power in 1916 by reason of the deceptive slogan: 'He kept us out of war?' Can our people fail to remember the unequalled waste and extravagance which were incident to the management of the war by the opposition party?

Huge Loans Made

"They have forgotten that after the hostilities had ceased and the armistice was declared 1,500 millions of dollars were poured forth in additional loans to the countries of Europe.

"These loans were unauthorized except to those responsible hid behind the technicality involved in the fact that what the sword of General Foch, of General Haig and of our heroic American soldier, General John J. Pershing, had achieved on the fields of battle, had not been formally written into a peace treaty.

"The great cost of our war effort and the stupendous loans we made European countries were paid for from the receipts derived from war time taxes and from proceeds of the great Liberty Loan drives. The Wilson opposition administration at Washington left in the laps of the succeeding Republican national administrations public debts owing to our own people of 24 billion dollars? What have we done? We have kept up the Government and reduced this debt from 24 billion to 16 billion dollars.

"Men of all parties shared in the price, the patriotism and the glory of the great world struggle. They shared equally in the sacrifices of treasure and blood. But they never approved of the waste of the war. They never approved these loans made after the war had ceased. They regreat that several billions thus alienated are not now in our national coffers to wipe out the present deficit, avoid increased taxation and lessen the burdens of the depression.

Talks of Responsibility

"Nevertheless, Mr. Raskob, the chairman of the opposition party, and Mr. Shouse, the director of his committee, Mr. Michaels, the high-powered publicity expert, and Governor Ritchie and other leaders, attempt to malign the Republican party and to smear President Hoover with blame for distressing aftermath of war, for which their party is more responsible than ours. 'First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.'

"As for Governor Ritchie his attacks have been partly agninst the present national administration, but chiefly directed against our national institutions. Free Maryland State idolatry and extreme outworn states rights fanaticism have obscured his vision of our nation's flag and supremacy. Let Governor Ritchie point to tributes paid or loyalty rendered while Goyernor of Maryland, which would justify him in aspiring to be Chief of the nation whose authority for years he has flounted and disdained.

"Let us, therefore, not be disturbed by detractions of these political opponents nor fail to have confidence in the future.

"After the war, General Dawes visited the old country estate of the English branch of the Dawes family, from which he came some seven centuries back. In a letter to his mother he said that engraved in stone over the entrance portal was the family motto: 'He that faces the sun will never see the shadow.'

Urges Confidence in Future

"Let us adopt this motto and like the pilgrim who passed through the valleys of gloom keep our eyes toward the sun of hope which will rise above the peaks of the Delectable mountains.

"I believe no man in our country is better fitted than President Hoover to remain in the seat of Washington and of Lincoln and to lead us through the economic crisis which involves our country and the world.

"In the spirit of the resolutions you passed at your Lincoln Day dinner, in the spirit of earnest solicitude for our country's good, I say:

"Let us again put our trust in Herbert Hoover."

LOCH LYNN HEIGHTS

Community Singing a Success

Many surprises were in store for those who attended the community singing here on Monday night. Misses Mary and Kate O'Donnell, committee from the Catholic church, put on a splendid program, which was in charge of Mrs. James P. Treacy, of Oakland.

A group of young people of Loch Lynn, including the Mayor, opened the program with a greeting song to the "Oakland Folks," Rev. Fr. Wm. J. McVeigh, George D. Browning and Miss Sara B. Huff. Mrs. Richard Maroney sang two song of old Erin, and Rev. McVeigh sang Thomas A. Edison's favorite, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen." Estelle and Mary Catherine Treacy did two folk dances, which were enjoyed, and Regis Kerins rendered a saxophone solo.

Mrs. Maroney, Bernadette Maffett and Mr. Browning sang "The Church in the Wildwood" and "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton." A group of boys from the Gilbert-Brown band rendered very acceptably three numbers.

Helen Gibson, Margaret Rathbun, Dorothy Gibson, Mae Ford, Betty Hardesty, Vivian Clary, Dicky Hardesty, Reginald Ford, Robert Ford, "Bus" Messenger, Willard Gibson and Joe Turney sang three nonsense songs.

Miss Sara Huff was introduced by I. S. Middaugh and took charge of the group singing, beginning with America, followed by the Star Spangled Banner and repeating the pledge to the flag; Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, Jingle Bells, etc. Everyone joined enthusiastically with Miss Huff in the singing.

We are looking forward with pleasure to the summer's program of music and singing as outlined by Miss Huff to be held in Mountain Lake Park this summer. Mrs. J. P. Treacy presided at the organ. The I. O. O. F. donated the use of its hall for this occasion.

Surprise Party

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Paugh gathered at their home here recently and gave them a delightful surprise party in honor of their birthday anniversaries. Mrs. Paugh has been confined to her home for approximately seven years by illness.

Personals and Otherwise

Mr. M. L. Sisk, of Keyser, spent several days with his family here recently.

The Mountain Lake-Loch Lynn Community Club held its regular monthly meeting at the Aid Hall here on Wednesday afternoon.

"Bill" Browning, of Oakland, attended the community singing here on Monday night. When Miss Huff asked if there was anyone in the room just twenty-two years of age, he and Mayor Hardesty knocked a chair over in trying to be the first on their feet.

There will be the usual services in both churches here on Sunday as follows: U. B. Church, Sunday school at 10:00 a. m.; Christian Endeavor at 6:45 p. m. This society is making plans for a sunrise service on Easter morning. Baptist church, Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.; morning worship at 11:00 a. m.

BABIES NEED SUNLIGHT, PROPER FOOD, GOOD CARE

Rickets Usually Develop When These Things Are Lacking

"Babies are like plants: They have to have sunlight, the right sort of food and intelligent care," Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said recently. "Every gardener knows that when plants are deprived of sunlight and the right kind of plant food, they soon show the effect of it in weakened stems as well as in other ways.

"When babies are deprived of the right sort of food and sunlight, they show the effect of it in what corresponds to their 'stems'—that is, in the bony structure of the body—the bones of the arms, legs, spine, ehest—in faet, in any part of the body. Sunlight helps in a very wonderful way to convert some of the elements in the baby's food into bone-strengthening substances. When sunlight and the right sort of food are lacking, the baby develops what is known as 'rickets.'

"This means that the bones have not had a chance to stiffen. They are soft and pliable and are easily deformed; the muscles are also weakened. Some babies develop bow legs; others have crooked spines; other have deformities of the ehest. In some babies with rickets the bones of the head near the 'soft' spot do not close at the normal time. In some, teething is delayed; others have disturbances of the digestive system or of the nervous system. Babies who have rickets are very susceptible also to colds and to other infections. Rickets may result in misshapen pelvie bones which may make childbearing difficult in later years.

"Fortunately, rickets are preventable. It is curable, also, provided the start is made soon enough. The remedies are the right sort of food, sunlight and cod liver oil. There are also certnin vegetable oils that have been especially treated and that can be used instead of cod liver oil. Cod liver oil has been called 'bottled sunshine' because it has much the same effect in helping to strengthen the substance of the bones that direct sunlight has. Accordingly, eod liver oil is used both to prevent and to cure rickets.

"One way by which rickets may be prevented in the young baby is for the expectant mother to eat plenty of the right sort of food, sueh as milk, fruit, eggs, green vegetables, butter and other dairy products, with meat or fish once a day, and with a small amount of eod liver oil every day, both before the baby comes and during the nursing period. Another way, is to begin giving the baby a few drops of eod liver oil every day, when it is a month old, increasing the amount gradually, under the doctor's direction to from one-half to two teaspoonfuls twice daily."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

No matter what we may think as individuals as to the extent of the depression and the length of the road we have yet to travel before we shall start up out of the valley, it must be admitted, even by the pessamists, that there are now certain constructive factors apparent, which could not be discerned a few short months ago. To realize the change in international psychology we have to think back only a short distance in national and world affairs.

* * *

Only a few short months ago it looked as though the predictions of the extreme pessimists, to the effect that the end of modern capitalist society had been reached, were not far out of the way. Central Europe seemed to be sinking into financial chaos. It seemed that Germany might be forced to repudiate all debts both public and private and that Great Britain too was in for bankruptcy. What seemed like the final straw came with the abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain. Conditions in the United States seemed little better. Great Britain's apparent collapse was followed by what amounted to a financial panic here. Banks were soon closing by the dozens and Europe was withdrawing its gold from American as rapidly as possible.

* * *

But a new year has gotten under way, and while we are still in the through of the depression, and there is no appreciable improvement in actual business conditions, it must be admitted that there are signs of hope on the horizon that were not apparent a few months ago. In Great Britain, especially, has there come improvement. That nation is balancing its budget. It has paid off the greater part of the money it borrowed from the United States and France in an effort to bolster the gold standard in England, sterling is going up on the world markets and British employment is picking up due to the adoption of the protective tariff, and the safeguarding of the English market for home industries. In the United States the closing of banks seems to have been definitely checked. The stock market has established what the experts call a "triple bottom" and for the past three or four months has seemed disinclined to go any lower, while there has been a distinct improvement in the bond market, always the first sign of stability. While many raw commodities do not yet seem to have reached the bottom, it is true that the decline has greatly slackened. And what remains persistently above the low price established last fall which would seem to be a good sign of stabilization in that important commodity.

It seemed that last year all the news was bad news, especially that which came from Europe. Now we are getting an encouraging dispath from across the waters occasionally. Among the constructive factors have been the new national government in Great Britain, the decline of hording in Europe, the constructive program put under way in the United States with the consequent clearing of the financial skies and the tendency of securities and commodies to establish a bottom.

* * *

Of course we are not out of the woods yet. We will doubtless have many ups and downs before we get on the highway of prosperity once more. The pessimists say that the improvement is only temporary, due to desperate remedies taken by the Federal government to resuscitate business, like oxygen administered to the patient who is critically ill, as a last desperate hope. Nevertheless there are enouraging signs on the horizon, and we are now beginning to see that the pessimists who a few months ago predicted the end of our modern business structure, were as far wrong as the optomists who, in 1929, told us that hard times and bear markets were gone forever.

GORTNER

Mr. John Fike, of Eglon, preached in the Union chapel here on Sunday morning on "Character Building—add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, to knowledge temperance, to temperance patience, to patience godliness, to godliness brotherly kindness." Mr. Fike was accompanied to Gortner by Ray Harsh, of Eglon, and Clinton Heckart, of Aurora.

Henry and Edward Schmidt spent the week-end at Lynndale, where they visited their sister, Mrs. Walter Beckman.

Miss Lela Mosser spent several days last week with her sister, Mrs. Artie Dodge, who is quite ill as the result of an infected finger.

Mrs. P. P. Gortner is confined to her bed by illness at this writing.

Simon Burkholder returned Monday from Accident, where he had spent Sunday with relatives following a visit of a week with home folks near Bittinger.

Miss Anna Beachy, Walter Wiles and Elmer Beachy left here on last Tuesday for Meyersdale, Pa., where they attended the wedding on Thursday of a cousin of Miss Anna Yoder.

Elwood Beckman is at the Noah Slabach home for a short time. We are glad to note that Mr. Slabach is much improved after having suffered for some time from a carbuncle on his knee.

Harold White spent several days recently with his parents at Fairsweep.

Mrs. Savilla Sanders and daughter, of Sunnyside were visiting at D. L. Swartzentruber's on Tuesday.

A TALE OF TWO NATIONS

A dispatch to the Chicago Tribune from its correspondent in Belgium reports that the Belgians still resent the official apology given Amabassador Gibson for the satisfaction of the United States, certain Belgian publicans having been nasty in their comments on th altruistic adventures of the Amerian government and people in Europe, especially in Belgium.

Probably the only people whose squawks should astonish Amercicnas are the Afghans. Of them we could truly say that we did not understand why they should be against us. We never tried to do anything for them. It was silly, of course, to make Belgian newspaper criticism a matter of state concern. Belgian newspapers are free to slander the United Statcs as they please, and should be. It is a dull day pleasure in all Europe. It is also a proper recompense for the Amerlcan prcdilection for doing good.

Japan entered the war before America. Its objective was the German territory and fortifications in Shantung. The German garrison made a formal resistance for honor. The Japanese did the garrison the honor of an investment and assault. Japan thereupon occupied the territory, intending to keep it. After this military exploit Japan virtually withdrew from the war. Although it had a fine army the use of it in Europe was not seriously considered even in times of the greatest allied distress. Japan turned to commerce and war profits, without reproach from Europe. Its manhood was saved from erosion. Its markets were rich. Its policy was self-interest, and that policy was accepted by the allies as an honorable one. It had no altruistic motives. It undertook no self-sacrificing enterprise. It wanted nothing for any one except for itself, and when territory was divided at the Peace Conference it took all the Gcrman Pacific possessions north of the equator. It had and retained the respect of the world.

The United States entered the war to end war. It was to make the world safe for democracy. It wanted nothing for itself it did not want for all humanity. It raised an army of four million men. It fairly flooded Europe with money during and after the war. It made every other country its debtor and every one its enemy. It asked for nothing and got a radio privilege on the Isle of Yap.

It has since been berated for what it did and for what it does not do. What it thought were benefits conferred assume the substnce of injuries done. It lost men, money, and good will, all of which Japan retained. The world proceeds on the motto: Always see to it that the sucker never gets an even break.

THE PACIFISTS SEEM TO WANT WAR

Sensible men have tried to warn the internationalists and pacafists that they are ldiotically belligerent in demanding that the United States slap an embargo on trade with Japan as a coercive measure. The boycott is vested with moral worth to persons who are addicted to peace pacts and international conferences. It is a vent for the indignation with which the illusionists see their world upset and their theories routed. Senator Borah has his soft spots, but he has endeavored to subdue the enthusiasms which would start the United States upon these wild courses.

A boycott is a warlike measure. Regardless of its economic effect upon the nation adopting it as a policy, it is an invitation to retaliation, and inasmuch as trade relations have caused many wars it is an open door to warfare. A nation which breaks its commercial relations with another and tries to coerce it by starving its industrles and its people should be prepared and ready to follow that up with coercion undertaken with its armed forces. In this case the American pacifists, true to tradition and form, demand that the United States step out alone with a gun to protect another country which would not be in the fix it now is if it had not become just what the pacifists want to make of their own country. The American pacifists would do just that.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Dr. Henry W. McComas, while driving on Hooppole Road in a conveyance was thrown from his seat and wedged between the wheel and body of the vehicle and dragged a considerable distance when his horses became frightened and ran away. He was not seriously injured but the conveyance was damaged to some extent.

A meeting was held here for the purpose of making an effort to reorganize the Masonic lodge, which existed in Oakland from shortly after the Civil War and which ceased in the middle seventies or early eighties. Among the prominent Masons interested were Messrs. D. E. Offutt, Sr., G. S. Hamill, S. L. Townshend, George A. Spedden, J. M. Jarobe and Dr. J. Lee McComas.

At Bittinger, fire was discovered on the roof of the Lutheran church in which services were being held. The worshippers marshalled their forces and by using quantities of snow and water the fire was extinguished. At the same place on the Wednesday before Henry Bittinger's cooper shop was burned to the ground.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Dr. Henry W. McComas was elected Mayor of Oakland for the fourth time, defeating G. Semmes Hamill. John W. Davis, Henry Lauer and Dr. B. F. Selby were named as councilmen.

Editors of the hlgh school notes were Leah Sincell, freshman; Bernard Faherty, sophomore; Robert White, junior, and Proctor Kildow, senior.

Carl B. White, formerly of Oakland, purchased the Uniontown Hardware and Supply Company's business at Uniontown.

Overland automobile advertisement appearing in The Republican boasted that the factory where the car was made turned out 64 cars daily.

Frank Augustine, Keyscr's Ridge, died suddenly while a number of the young men of the community were gathering to serenade some newcomers at the home of Clarence Ringley.

Pupils of Miss Daisy Grant were to give a recital at the high school. Dr. John G. Robinson and C. Edward Bender were to assist in the entertainment.

An Interesting Fact

BACK OF THE BEGINNING

Avalon—No. 2

Lady Baltimore had been spared the rigors of the winter of 1628-1629, as she had sailed for Jamestown, Virginia, prior to that early experience. In the fall of 1629 Lord Baltimore also abandoned the Avalon project for the milder climate of Virginia without waiting for a reply from the King as to his suggestion that he be granted a province in that Colony.

The fact that his welcome was cordial in some quarters, while in others he was received with a degree of suspicion, is not to be wondered at when we consider that the population was made up of those of opposite views in matters of religion. The element that most vigorously opposed Lord Baltimore was composed of those who knew him as a converted Roman Catholic and as one who was in the royal favor as well as a member of the commission which had wound up the affairs of the Virginia Company. These and other prejudices were so pronounced that the Virginia Council attempted to force on Baltimore an oath of temporal allegiance (to which he did not object) but as well an acknowledgement of the spiritual supremacy of the king. To this latter oath Lord Baltimore refused to subscribe.

Notwithstanding the fact that many priters have sought to place undue emphasis on these differences between Lord Baltimore and many of the citlzens of the Virginia Colony, George Calvert departed for England, leaving behind him peace and good will—at least among those in authority. It is apparent that he intended to make his sojourn in his home land a temporary one and that his plans called for a return to Virginia, as his wife and several of his children remained in that Colony for several months, where he had also left much of his personal effects. Lord Baltimore apparently had his heart set on acquiring a province that would include the southern part of Virginia and the northern part of North Carolina and the king was of a mind to issue hlm a charter accordingly. But much opposition to the plan developed in Virginia, as well as among those who had been members of the old Virginia Company.

Lord Baltimore, as a study of his life reveals, was not only broad-minded and possessed of a spirit of conciliation (on proper occasions) but the faculty of heing able to change his plans when the success of his enterprises would be assured thereby. These qualitles are essential to a successful colonizer. So it was when Baltimore realized the extent of the opposition to his plan for acquiring a part of the Virginia territory. He then sued the king for a tract of land north of the settled portion of Virginia instead of south of it.

In spite of the difference in religion, adherence and the evident desire of the king to keep Lord Baltimore at home and in his government, the fact that Charles I agreed to issue Baltimore a charter (which, it is said, Baltimore wrote with his own hand) for the land desired by him, is evidence that the founder of Maryland still retained his prestige with the kmg.

Lord Baltimore at first suggested that his new colony should be named "Crescentia," the land of growth and increase. The king then suggested that it be given name in honor of the queen—Mariana. But after Lord Baltimore had recalled the fact that a Jesuit by that name had written against monarchy, the king proposed Terra Mariae (Mary Land), which name was inserted in the blank space Lord Baltimore had left in the charter for the name.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

"Over his keys the musing organist
Beginning doubtfully, and far away,
First lets his fingers wander idly as they list,
And builds a bridge from dreamland for his lay.
Then, as the touch of his loved Instrument
Adds hope and fervor, nearer draws the theme
First guessed by faint auroral flushes
Sent along the wavering vista of his dream."

Thus James Russell Lowell opens his Vision of Sir Launfal with a lyric, which breathes the splrit of music while it proclaims the divine plan of a God-directed evolution. Just as there can be no music wlthout a musician, so there can be no truth without an author. As the organist develops his theme from a few elemental sounds to rich harmony, so does the Grand Artificer draw His plans and execute His designs until seemingly meaningless lines finally merge into the Temple of Truth.

The fathers of the Maryland Bible Society in like fashion builded, better than they knew. In 1810 our great Republic was yet in its infancy. The central planes were the resort of huge herds of buffalo, and Indians ranged freely over happy hunting grounds undisturbed by the advance of civilization. The great west was largely undiscovered. It was the wilderness later to become the promised land for millions of God's children, who were to come seeking liberty, happiness, and a new opportunity unhampered by the bondage and tradition of the past. It sems more than mere coincidence that the Maryland Bible Society should have been born at this crucial period in the life of America. Proclaiming with its open Book to all comers: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The first officers of the Maryland Bible Society were Rev. J. G. J. Bend, president; Dr. James McHenry, and Rev. John Glendy. Vice-presidents; Rev. James Inglis and Rev. J. Daniel Kurtz, corresponding secretaries; Mr. Thomas W. Griffith, the author of the Annals of Baltimore, recording secretary; and Mr. Baltzer Schaeffer, treasurer. Dr. Bend was a man of broad sympathy and very wide interest. A lover of good books, he was one of the founders of the Baltimore Library Company, and a vice-president of it in 1802. He also was one of those who united in 1810 to form a society for promoting vaccination generally. This required great courage in that early day of preventive medicine. There are many, even in our day, who are ready to exclaim—Can any good thing come out of a laboratory of experimental medicine? Another evidence of Dr. Bend's scientific interests is found in his association as one of the originators of the Maryland Society for Promoting Useful Knowledge. Upon his death on November 25, 1812, the Board of Managers of the Maryland Bible Society paid this tribute to his noble characters and sterling worth: "He was a man eminent in all walks and offices of life, and whose services, in particular, at the head of this institution, entitles his memory to the benediction of all its friends and patrons."

It may be truly said of the entire group who formed the original Maryland Bible Society, that they were men of marked ability and standing, some of them men of genius whose contributions to the life of their city and state will remain forever crystallized in these institutions. They were not one-sided, half-baked individuals like Ephraim, a cake not turned, but men of great versatility who were friends of science and devoted to the progress, but who realized that truth is one as God is one, and that the Bible is the Highest expression of spiritual truth the world has yet received. They were men who believed, as Robert E. Speer declared more than 100 years later, that: "The best thing men can do is to spread the Bible and to get it read and obeyed. This would be the end of hard times, of poverty, of unemployment, of injustice, or wrong, or war."

To Organize Normal Alumni of Garrett County

Members of the faculty of the State Normal school, Frostburg, will visit Oakland Saturday to organize the Garrett county chapter of the State Normal alumni. The meeting will be held at the William-James hotel.

Frank Getty, Grantsville, is the chairman of the committee on arrangements. Covers for 100 will be laid. A chapter was formed at Hagerstown for Washington county about three weeks ago.

Has Recurrence of Trouble With Crippled Foot

Fred. Koch, employe of the Kingwood Baking Company, and son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, is confined to his home at Kingwood because of a recurrence of trouble with his crippled foot. Koch was injured in a football game while playing with Kingwood High School six years ago, and an operation on his foot was made necessary. He has been able to get around without much difficulty until recently when he experienced considerable pain in the injured member and he is now confined to his bed.

Mr. Wellington Yutzy spent last Friday in Cumberland.

EIGHT MARRIAGE LICENSES GRANTED LAST WEEK

Blocked Highways Cause the Decrease at Marriage Bureau

Only eight marriage licenses were issued during the past week ending Monday at noon from the office of the clerk of the Circuit court. Blocked highways and heavy snows were said to be the cause of such an unusually low number. Six of the eight licenses were issued on Saturday, one permit was marked "don't publish," while two applicants were refused licenses.

The total for March thus far is 24. Seventy-two were issued for the entire month last year, while the record of 82 was established in 1929 and equaled in 1930.

Braxton Claud Gainer, 35, finisher, and Grace Shaffer, 19, spinner, both of Parsons, West Va.

Arnold D. Sparks, 21, skidder, and Reva Ware, 21, both of Valley Head, West Va.

Paul Clarence Stout, 21, glass worker, and Ruth Elizabeth Bateman, 21, student, both of Weston, W. Va.

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church Services

Next Sunday being Palm Sunday, following the Sunday school session and the 11:00 o'clock service, palms will be distributed in St. Matthew's Episcopal church in Oakland, to the children and the congregation.

On Good Friday, March 25th, there will be the customary three-hour memorial service in this church lasting from 12:00 noon until 3:00 o'clock. Everyone is welcome to attend these services.

St. Paul's M. E. Church Notices

At 10:45 a. m., Holy Communion. Epworth League at 6:45 p. m., with Catherine Moon, leader. Let all the young people of the church be there.

At 7:30 p. m., sermon. The theme will be: "Which way shall I take?"

"Methodists," says Pastor Dawson, "please keep two things in mind: that on Easter morning we are to receive such into the church as may wish to join, either by letter or otherwise, and that we are to have a week of evengelistic meetings following Easter, closing April third. Be much in prayer during Holy Week and the week following."

Garrett Memorial Presbyterian Church

Sunday morning, the pastor will continue the series of "Messages From The Cross," with a sermon on "The Mystery of the Cross." Miss Helen Jones will sing "The Palms," by Faure.

Easter Sunday, an augmented choir will render Dr. Geibel's cantata, "The Glory of the Garden," at the morning service. The pastor will bring to a conclusion "The Messages From the Cross" with a brief sermon on "The Splendor of the Cross" and the Sacrament of Holy Communion will be celebrated. A special Easter service, "The Riven Tomb," will be given by the Sunday school at ten o'clock.

Approaching Services In St. Mark's Lutheran Church

St. Mark's Lutheran church will observe Holy Week with special services during the period beginning with a service on Tuesday evening, when Rev. W. L. Dise, of Aurora, will deliver the sermon.

On Wednesday evening Rev. W. E. Waybright, of Red House, will be in charge of the services, and on Thursday night Rev. A. B. Harper, of Accident, will preach the sermon. Friday evening will conclude the services for the week when Rev. C. A. Shilke, pastor, will conduct the devotions. A special preparatory service will be held at this time with adult confirmation.

Easter will be observed with a service at six o'clock in the morning with Holy Communion. There will also be Holy Communion and confirmation at 10:45 o'clock, with the Easter sermon.

There will be special music by the church choir at the evening hour, 7:30.

To Hold Good Friday Services In St. Paul's M. E. Church

Good Friday will be observed with a union service, to be held in St. Paul's M. E. church, from one until three o'clock when the union choir will render the oratorio of Sir John Stainer, "The Crucifixion." The choir will be under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Thayer and Dr. John G. Robinson. The offering will be devoted to the needs of the Daily Vacation Bible school.

Shilke, of Oakland, bringing the message on Thursday evening. Friday, March 25, Grace church, Friendsville, at 7:45 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

Homemakers' Groups to Take Up Yard Improvement Work

During the months of March, April, May and June homemakers from three communities plan to take part in a flower gardening program. The following women will meet at the Court House on Tuesday, March 22, for their first meeting this year:

Mt. Lake-Loch Lynn Club, Mrs. J. S. Elliott, Mrs. E. O. Fouch; Oakland Homemakers Club, Mrs. Wm. Frazee, Mrs. T. C. Bittinger; Sunnyside Homemakers Club, Mrs. J. W. Baker, Mrs. O. S. Ridder.

Since the success of the outdoor garden depends upon early and careful planning, the group will first take this up.

Mrs. Fouch will give a demonstration covering arrangement of the home grounds, location of flower beds, varieties best settled to sun and shade and the selection of colors which will make the grounds attractive.

Besides the arrangement of the garden some time will be given to the use of cuttings and bulb diversion in planting the grounds at low cost. An exchange of bulbs and seeds will be carried on throughout the project.

Following the monthly meeting at the Court House the demonstrators will carry the work back to their communities and take it up with interested women there. Any woman in the community desiring to do so may join this group. Further announcement will be made concerning these meetings.

Expression of Appreciation

To the Citizens of Oakland.
Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I desire to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to you for the confidence and trust you have reposed in me by again choosing me as Mayor of our town.

I greatly appreciate this and truly hope that you may never have an occasion to regret having elected me, and I shall certainly endeavor to serve you to the best of my ability.

Sincerely yours,
GROVER C. STEMPLE,
Mayor of Oakland.

TO THE VOTERS

I wish to express my thanks to the voters of the Town of Oakland who supported and elected me to the Council, despite the utterly misleading statements circulated against me just prior to the election, and for the express purpose of defeating me. Records of the deliberations of the Council during the eight years I have served, are open to all and will fully support my statement that I have always advocated partiality to none, and a just and lawful administration of the trust imposed upon the Council; and further, that I have voted my convicitions in all matters coming before the Council.

R. T. THAYER.

APPRECIATIVE OF VOTE

I want to thank all most heartily for the splendid support given me in electing me to the City Council of Oakland at the polls on Monday, and assure you that I shall do everything in my power to justify the confidence reposed in me by the splendid citizens of Oakland.

Gratefully yours,
WALTER HARDESTY.

R. CARLTON M'COMAS IS VERY APPRECIATIVE

To the Citizens of Oakland:
Ladies and Gentlemen:—To those of you who voted for me Monday, I wish to say I appreciate my vote most highly, taking it as a tribute of approval of my services as a member of the City Council in the past. I again wish to assure you that there shall be nothing in my record for the next two years that will make you regret having re-elected me to office. I also wish to thank my many friends who worked for me so faithfully, whose efforts, I feel, contributed in a large degree to my success.

Sincerely and respectfully yours,
R. CARLTON M'COMAS.

Most Glorious of Professions

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

OUT of four brothers Myron Brown alone turned his face toward intellectual pursuit, or at lenst, he turned his face, at the age of seventeen, toward his state's university, graduated there at twenty-one, nad without aay particular intent or purpose drifted into teaching. At twenty-fivo he was holding down the chair of English history in the university from which he had graduated.

His three brothers, thrown on their own resources at early age as he had been, drifted, the two younger ones, aad the third his twin, into business pursuits that were ultimately to cast them all into the destiny of big affairs.

Harold and Steve, the younger boys, struck it well in the radio industry while the vast industry was still in its infancy. Bartlett, Myron's twin, was reputed at twenty-five to be worth three-quarters of a million dollars from fortunate investments in copper.

The three brothers, successful all at an early age, were none the less prideful of Myron. He represented the intellectual status of the family. He lent eclat and distinction. Had he permitted it, the three brothers would willingly and generously have aided and abetted his modest earnings as professor.

That, however, was not necessary. Myron's scale of life fitted and pleased him well. A pleasant suite in a boys' dormitory, where he incidentally held the position of dean. Varied if modest summer vacations, going tourist fashion to Europe, or camping in the north of Canada with two or three of the members of the faculty. Books. Good music from the second galleries of the concert halls. Pleasant leisure. Campus quiet. Mild intellectual divertisement among the members of the teaching staff. All in all, there was little, in Myron's opinion, that his brothers could contribute to his well-being.

Then, too, there was this difference. The business boys had all married. There were three attractive and personable sisters-in-law, and five or six neices and nephews in whom Myron felt a sort of benign impersonal pride. But the domestic aspect of the lives of his successful brothers helped to further estrange him from the walks they had chosen for themselves. Christmas, New Years and birthdays, they met. And on one occasion, more for the sake of quieting their importunings than anything else, Myron had accompanied, as guest, two of his brothers and their families to Europe. There acting as guide and interpreter to the cultural pursuits of the wives and children.

But in the main, Myron remained not necessarily aloof, for he was a gregariously inclined fellow, but more or less secluded among his own kind and the books that as the years marched on he was accumulating about himself in a modest library.

Then, one New Year which he was spending in New York where the annual gathering of his clan took place, Myron, stimulated by all the Wall Street gossip which he heard among his brothers, hut which never was even intended for his ears, took what he called a flyer in a stock which he selected for the euphonious quality of its name.

He bought one thousand shares of Green Agate Copper stock for seven hundred and fifty dollars, took it home without even revealing the purchase to his brothers, who would have joked him, locked it in a desk drawer, practically forgot it until the next annual visit with his brothers, when once more, his interest stimulated for the moment by their hear and bull talk, he remembered his flyer in Green Agate.

Two days later, before his return to college, he sold his Green Agate, one thousand shares for twenty thousand dollars, creating among his brothers a fnrore of hilarity at his acumen. The shrewdness, they called it, of a babe in the wood.

It turned out to be more than that. With that twenty thousand dollars as his cornerstone, Myron was destined for a career in high finance that was far more spectacular than the career of any one of his brothers, even of his twin, who already was reputed to be twice a millionaire.

By the time Myron was thirty-five, his teaching career lay behind him as dim as a dream, and the library which he had accumulated in his home in Briarcliff-on-Hudson was estimated by itself to be worth as much as his brother Steve's or his brother Harold's entire holdings.

It was one of those spectacular, everything-he-touched-turning-to-gold successes. Myron simply made money hand over fist. In copper. In steamship stock. In General Motors. In hotel stock. In coffee, in real estate. Even in books, frequently achieving a first edition at high price, and turning it over at fabulous profit.

Strange, too, apparently temperamentally unfitted for the uncloistered, competitive race of the business world, he took to it as the proverbial duck takes to water. Business men, financiers, bankers, magnates, industrial captains found him quick, sympathetic, shrewd and eager to match his wits against theirs.

He was the surprise of their lives to his three brothers. He was more than that, he was apparently a surprise to himself, because more and more, as his fortune climbed and his authority in the business world became more established, Myron found himself too dazed, when he took time to contemplate, to quite realize what it all was about.

He was rich. He was influential. He was in a position to gratify his whims for travel, books, erudition, music, and cultural pursuits of any and all kinds. He was a person miles removed from the college professor, and yet at heart and soul he was that college professor, strangely endowed with a power which seemed to be no part of him.

It was not unpleasant. There was never a time when he found himself consciously hankering for the old days of the simple suite in the boys' dormitory where he had acted as sort of overseer of their conduct.

That was all passed now. The innocuous professor since those days had endowed the very university where he had taught English history with a library of books on that special subject, said to be the finest in the world, and it was more than possible that similar gifts from him would be forthcoming.

No, as Myron grew older and more influential and certainly richer, it could not be said of him that he entertained regrets for those simple teaching days that were gone.

Except, every time he made a noticeable disposition of his money, it found its way into college coffers. Dormitories for men. College libraries of one sort or another.

Then, when he was fifty-eight and reputed to be worth more than ten millions of dollars, Myron, unmarried, drew up his last will and testament.

It was a simple will, because it diverted all this huge fortune in one direction.

Ten million dollars as a permanent fund to help keep the male teacher in that "most glorious of professions," by rewarding him an income over and above his modest salary, and so make speculation and adventure into business as remote a possibility as might be.

Co-Operate With Child in Desirable Behavior

The child of today works with, rather than for, the parent in the matter of his own training, says Dr. Margaret Wylie, child guidance specialist from the New York State college of home economics.

Desirable behavior may result from other methods than the old one of demanding strict obedience. Today the parent, knowing that certain ways of behaving are necessary for health and safety, and social acceptance, tries to gain the co-operation of the child in developing them. The parent sees that the child understands what is desired, and that the child has an opportunity for self-expression and independence even while the child practices the necessary habits.

The old method established obedience without the child's co-operation or desire, by a system of punishment. This resulted in undesirable behavior of a different type. The child became antagonistic, hard, and cruel; or repressed and fearful; or took refuge in evasion and dishonesty. The new method makes it possible for the child to keep his self-respect, to see and profit by his mistakes, and to gain in independence, in self-control, and in personality.

The child's first lessons in co-operation are gained through his daily routine and through his play. Regular health habits, suitable companions, recognition and approval of desirable behavior, are some of the first ways in which the child learns what is good and what is not.

Dam to Fill Prince's Caves

With the raising of the waters of Loch Ericht, Scotland, by the dam of a large hydroelectric project the many caves said to have been used by Prince Charlie may be obliterated. It has also been disclosed that some of these "historic holes" are not authentic. At the southwest corner of the lake is "Cluny's Cave," a cluster of boulders, where Prince Charlie hid during September, 1746. In Glenmoriston is another cave where the prince was sheltered by a faithful bodyguard. Both these places are well authenticated. On the west coast, however, is a hollow at the roadside near Kinlochmoidart, which has been called "Prince Charlie's Cave," and on the banks of the Shiel at Cliff is a similarly called "cave." Neither of these has any connection with the ill-fated prince. After Culloden Charles never crossed Loch Shiel.

Snuff "Dipping"

Snuff was used from the beginning in America by the white settlers, the women "dipping" and the habit permeating all social grades. For the dipping, a stick about three inches long, and about as thick as a lead pencil was used. One end of this was chewed until the fibers separated, giving a brush-like result, which was dipped in snuff and held in the mouth, between the teeth and the cheek. Rather sloppy in general effect, but comforting to the nerves, we are told.

Origin of a Name

Downing street, in which the British prime minister has his London residence, was named after Sir George Downing, "a sider with all times and changes, skilled in the common cant, and a preacher occasionally." Downing was sent by Cromwell to Holland as "resident" there. After the Restoration he espoused the king's cause, and was knighted and elected M. P. in 1661.

Ties That Bind

By BERTHA LEAH CROSS

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

NAOMI STEVENS sat on the back porch watching the dusk as it settled over the garden. To her, this time of day was the loneliest, and the hour when she felt the most let down, tired, old and disillusioned. This night she was feeling unusually so because of the letter from Laura, the second she'd had that week. In the latter she pleaded even more urgently with her to accept her invitation to go to Europe as her traveling companion.

"If I only could," she whispered. "But here I am, as always, tied hand and foot by mother. If mother could only see, could realize how terribly she hampers me in everything I want to do. Talk about the selfishness of the young—it's nothing in comparison to the old. They think only of themselves!"

All of her life Naomi had craved a good time. She longed for travel and excitement.

First it had been her father, who, parsimonious to the point of miserliness, had forced both her and her mother to scrimp and save; to go without and make over, while he hoarded his money. Then when he had died, ten years ago, each had lacked initiative and urge to get out of the rut into which their lives had settled. It had taken but these letters, however, to light the flame of desire in Naomi's crushed ego.

"There's money," she told herself, "plenty of it, if only mother can be aroused . . ."

But the mother—a self-effacing little woman who had lived for forty years under the domination of her husband. Cowed, timid, shrinking, after these years of bondage. What force could galvanize her and make her forget her husband's reiterated statement: "Women's place is in the home." Could she be freed, emancipated from that obsession?

Naomi was now forty-five. She had let youth go by as she had love. Fred had become tired of waiting.

She had been a lovely girl with a wealth of curly, brown hair and large, wistful eyes filled with dreams. Other men had been attracted. But they, like Fred, had been appalled by too much interference, and later by too much prospective mother-in-law. They had passed by to other less hampered girls.

Now had come this opportunity. Galvanized into life, she let her thoughts dwell on this chance of a lifetime. Even the words in the letter were etched on her mind: "Come on, Naomi," her friend had written. "Check your mother with her sister and come with me."

The tears came now, faster and faster, stinging her eyes, overflowing—a perfect torrent of heart-breaking tears of longing.

Suddenly the tears stopped and she set up with a snap. The fire in her eyes dried the tears: "I'm going!" she said aloud. "I'm going to Europe with Laura. Mother can go to California with the Lawsons." Red spots appeared on her cheeks. She had decided.

She began formulating in her mind her plan of procedure. First she would write Aunt Hattie that her mother was coming, if she could make her, and ask for her help. Then she would write Laura that she would arrive in New York ready to sail the seventh of July.

"I'm going to spend, spend, spend!" she said recklessly. "I am going to make myself young again and see life. For every dollar I've denied myself, I'll spend two."

After supper she walked to the village for the evening mail. She posted a letter to Laura telling her she would meet her in New York the sixth. "I've burned by bridges now," she thought. "I'm going straight home to break the news to mother. I'll find new interests, and new life, and youth," she told herself.

"Mother," she said abruptly. The swaying rocked stopped at the tenseness in Naomi's voice.

"Yes? What is it, Naomi?" Her tone held no mild surprise.

"I'm sailing the seventh of July with Laura."

"Sailing?" In a bewildered tone.

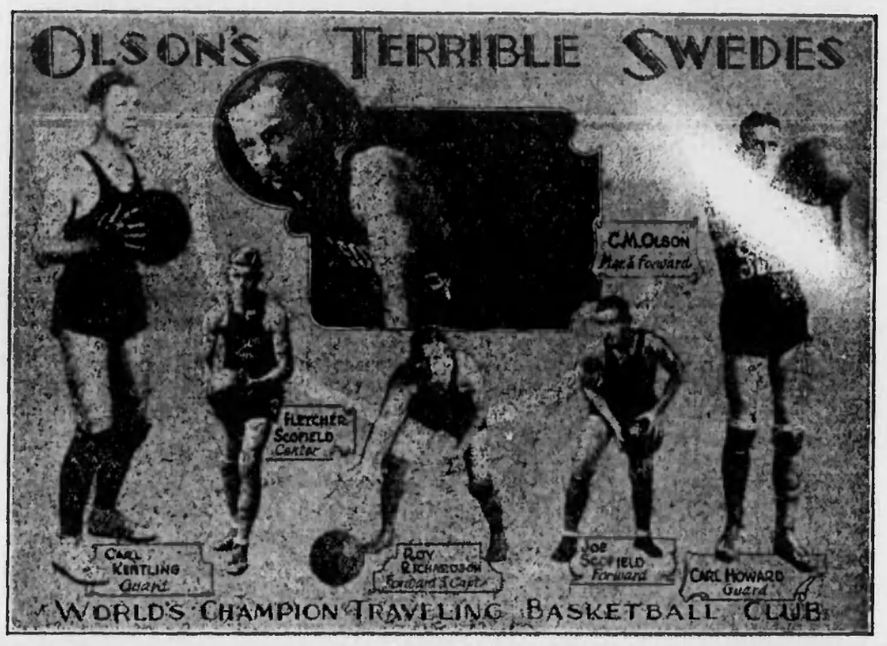
"Yes, sailing for Europe on the seventh. And I've made arrangements for you to stay with Aunt Hattie while I'm gone."

"You've made arrangements?" lcily. "I haven't lost my mind, have I? Well, you've certainly taken a pretty independent step." Her quick anger cooled. She laid a hand on Naomi's with a quick pressure. Suddenly she laughed. "Child, you was afraid to tell me? I wondered what you had on your mind for a week."

"Yes, I was afraid. I was afraid you'd not want me to go. Oh, mother," her voice breaking, "I've got to go. I can't let this go by, as I have everything else in life." Her voice as growing shrill and rising a little. "Can't you see? Can't you understand?"

"I certainly can see," her mother replied slowly. "I have wanted a vacation for years and always thought I had to stay here at home on your account. But from now on, Naomi, these ties that bind are going to be elastic. They are going to stretch. For a month I've bin trying to get up courage to tell you that I'm dying to go to California. I've always wanted to go—and now I'm going."

To Play Here Saturday Night, March 19



While Mr. Friend Did Not Explicitly State in a Communication Appearing In The Republican a Few Weeks Ago Who Was Responsible For the Tax Rate Now in Force In Garrett County the Only Inference Left to the Casual Mind Was That He Held The Board of County Commissioners Responsible, While That Body, Following the Mandate of the Law, Must Provide Salaries, Money For Schools, Roads, Bridges and a Multiplicity of Other Items To Keep the County Government Going; He Now Questions the Law and Hints that the Locally Elected Officers Have Abdicated Their Power When as an Intelligent Man He Knows That Annapolis, Through Governor Ritchie, And His Subservient Legislature, Has Taken Away the Right of Local Self Government.

Another letter has been handed The Republican by Mr. Clifford Friend, of near Accident, for publication, which appears below and without comment except that contained in the caption above:

To the Editor of The Republican.

I have read with interest an article appearing in The Republican last week which refers to a manuscript prepared by myself on taxes a few weeks ago. In the preparation of the manuscript I took care to refrain from laying the blame for high taxes at anybody's door, giving only facts as to conditions confronting the taxpayers in our county today. However, it seems that there are some guilty minds who have felt in reading over the article in question that the blame for some of the woes enumerated therein should be laid at their door. It is plain enough that the shoe fit somebody or else why the ugly insinuation, and why also did the author refrain from affixing his signature?

We are told again that our commissioners are responsible for only about 25 per cent of our expenditures, the other 75 per cent being mandatory. We are aware that if our schools are to continue to get the benefit of the equalization system our commissioners must appropriate up to a certain amount for school use, but is it mandatory? If it is, then our local elected government has completely abdicated its power and turned over to a board sitting in Baltimore the power to levy our taxes and name the salaries of our employes. While this is being done so far as our schools are concerned, we are doing it for the sake of the equalization fund, and, I believe, we are free to withdraw.

However, we feel this question is of secondary importance. Our only aim is for economy, our only hope is in quick and effective relief. If we are to avert the impending crash we must have assistance from some new source. Already our property owners are facing defeat. To own property is no longer evidence of wealth. On the other hand, our county employes have benfited for nearly three years from high public salaries and steady employment. Those persons whose livelihood depends upon the continuation of these salaries, and those who are sufficiently interested in the county to want to see it survive, should be willing to lend their assistance thru this emergency.

At Unlontown, Pa., certain county employes donated 20 per cent of their earnings back to the public treasuary.

Who shall say that our own county has not as fine a set of employes as any other, and what could be more fair than for our employes to get together and authorize the proper authorities to withhold 25 per cent of their salaries until such time as conditions warrant the resumption of payments on the old schedule?

The greater part of our school teachers, at least, are young girls and men who pay no taxes. Why not give them the opportunity to help through this emergency? What better example of good citizenship could they set for our young generation of Americans whose ideals they are helping to shape?

In n program of this kind we should also have the able leadership of our County Superintendent of Schools. He is, I believe, the highest paid executive in our county. What better evidence of sincere devotion could he give to the county where he has labored for so many years?

There is a principle involved in all of this that is of fundamental importance in itself. That is that the public should not be charged any more for a service than that same service would be worth in private business. We know that the service that is being rendered by our public employes clear through, though that service be first rate, would not cost so much in private business.

Let those persons who claim that there is no necessity for such action at this time remember that there is a pressing need for some drastic economic changes in our local government if we are to keep our farmers in the field, our merchants behind the counter and our children in school.

This, too, should provide a good test for our responsible officials. If they will aid in carrying out an emergency program of this kind and set the example by cutting their own salaries and then call upon the others to follow that example, they will not only have performed a patriotic duty themselves but they will have earned the just praise of the entire county. It is not likely that such a program could be defeated if our county leaders would get squarely behind it. There may be some who will argue that this would be the equivalent to falling down on our educational program, and hence our right to the equalization fund would be forfeited, but this would not be the case. Our educational machinery would function as before and school employes together with other county employes would merely be lending their aid over an emergency.

No honest person should be opposed to any system of economy that is designed to keep our educational and governmental machinery in motion until normal conditions have returned.

Regardless of all efforts to pass the buck to a state Democratic administration, and admitting that administration is at fault, we cannot place the blame for our own extravagance and consequent failure there. We hold our fate in our own hands. What better can we do in this time of stress than to adopt a program that is calculated to place a part of the financial burden upon the shoulders of those who are most able to help? What stronger weapon can we fling into the teeth of our radical citizen, and what better consolation can we give to our overburdened and embittered taxpayer?

In every community we have our struggling farmers, less fortunate than some others, who are fighting to keep the wolf from their door, and trying some how to manage to keep decent clothes on their children to go to school. Our county will be the loser if we continue to allow fat public salaries and high taxes to confiscate the homes of those stout hearted citizens.

In the name of all that is right, and fair, and just, we conjure our county officials and leaders everywhere to stop playing dirty politics and turn to the task of administering to the legitimate needs of our people.

MT. LAKE PARK

Town Ordinance

An ordinance has been recently passed by the Mayor and Council of the Park to the effect that when taxes are levied against any person or corporation, whether resident or non-resident, the same not being paid and can not be made out of the personal estate of the tax payer, the said taxes may be collected out of the rents of his, her or their real estate by due process of law, or the Town tax collector may sell the real estate for the payment of the taxes, after complying with the same general requirements of law as the county treasurer.

It is further provided that all taxes shall be due when billed by the tax collector, and discountable on or befor October first next following the levy and interest to begin the first day of January following, at the rate of one-half per cent per month.

Under the ordinance no property shall be offered for sale unless the same shall have the approval of a majority of the said mayor and council.

As we view the matter, the passing of this ordinance is nothing out of the ordinary and is only a proper effort on the part of the council, as a tax-levying body, to place themselves in a position occupied by other like levying bodies in this and other counties whereby they will have the power to collect the taxes levied, which is essential to a proper administration of the affairs of the town.

Dogs At Large

We have been requested by the deputy fish and game boys to call attention to the law relative to allowing dogs to run at large between the first of March and the first of September and chase and kill birds and game. Irrespective of our personal views, the fact remains that such is the law of the State, and we are advised the Conservation Department has decided its rigid enforcement.

St. Patrick's Day

Today is set apart for honoring St. Patrick, an Irish Saint, said to have been born in Scotland. Various miricles are attributed to him, particularly the expulsion of all venomous creatures from Ireland. If such a miricle could be performed in Garrett county the bootlegging industry would receive a blow from which it would not soon recover. In such event, fishermen would have no excuse in taking along their usual bottle of snake bite remedy.

His religious zeal prompted him to cross the channel for the conversion of the pagan Irish, probably between 440-460. He established there a number of schools and monasteries. The order of St. Patrick, the third in rank of British orders, was instituted in 1783.

A Reminescenee

Our friend, Murray White, says we are all wet as to certain statements made in an article published in The Republican a few weeks ago in relation to the first term of court held in the county. Well, we gleaned our facts from a standard history of Western Maryland, but even the best of historians make mistakes. Murray White has a remarkable memory, and was a man of mature years when Garrett county was born. But any correction, if correction is necessary, will have to wait a future issue. He sent us a little poem, however, written about the time, by Gus DeLawder and published in one of the county papers under the name of "Angler." It may be of interest.

Long live the Court that doth preside
And justly all disputes decide;
To calm the mind, allay discord
Between John Reed and Peddicord.

The roll was called, the jury sworn,
They then adjourned to take a "horn";
"Silence, back there," Bill Smouse did yell;
"Go there yourself," cried Brother Bell.

The Court House is an ancient hall—
We scrutinize its knotty walls;
Saw quilts hung up to stop the cracks,
For the wind did chill the judges' backs.

* * *

On them the liquor question fell
To say who should the "kritter" sell;
They all declared it was no use,
For they were bound to have their "juice."

After all did have their say,
They marched right up to get their pay—
Heard some remarks from Col. Schley,
And then we bid the Court goodbye.
—ANGLER.

We can't brag much about the poetry, but it does give us an insight as to what the writer was thinking about.

SWALLOW FALLS

The first snow storm of the season last week blocked the roads of this section, and the mercury dropped to below zero. The postman was unable to cover his route.

Some callers in town Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Ream, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Winters, Mr. and Mrs. Z. L. Mellott, Messrs. Percy Martin and Hugh Ream.

Rev. Moses Fike, who had a severe cold, is able to be out and around again.

Miss Olive Lewis is spnding a few weeks at her home near Oakland.

Henry Arnold, formerly employed by Z. L. Mellott, is now employed by Scott Harvey, near Deer Park.

The many friends of Mr. W. S. Nestor, of Terra Alta, W. Va., were saddened to hear of his death last week.

Robert Lipscomb, of near Crellin, was visiting his brother Albert over the week-end.

AVILTON

A great surprise to the people of this community came with the recent heavy snowfall, the drifted roadways and consequent blocking of traffic.

George Groves was a caller at the Otho Fike home a few days last week.

Rev. Archie Hoskings was a guest at the home of Jesse Merrill last week.

The students of this community enrolled in the Grantsville High School were unable to attend classes last week on account of the storm. No classes were held in the Avilton and McKenzie schools for the same reason.

Hilleary Broadwater was a caller at the home of Jesse Merrill last Wednesday afternoon.

Miss June Merrill is spending the winter with her aunt, Mrs. Cecil Michaels.

Orville Stark, Herman Broadwater, George Groves and George Fike were storing ice in Mr. Stark's ice house last Friday.

Robert Merrill was visiting friends in Frostburg on Sunday.

Mrs. Ernest Hutzel, of Meyersdale, Pa., returned home Saturday after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chancy, for three weeks.

O. C. Glotfelty made a business trip to McHenry Monday.

Milton Johnson was visiting his mother, Mrs. Simon Beachy, recently

Miss Lucille Glotfelty, who has been ill for some time, is now improving.

A MEMORIAL

A well deserved tribute of love and respect may well be penned in memory of Gilbert Benton Moon, who departed this life at his home in Cleveland, Ohio, March 2, 1932.

Mr. Moon, who was born and reared to early manhood in Garrett county and who was a former county school teacher, took up his residence in Fairmont, W. Va., in 1911, where he was employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for several years, later being transferred to Clevcland, where he resided until the time of his death.

"Honor to whom honor is due," might well be inscribed as an epitaph to his memory in the hearts of those who knew and loved him. He was always faithful and conscientious in the performance of his duties, which might be attested to by his employers and by whom he was steadily advanced until he had been promoted to the position of general car foreman of the railway shops at Cleveland and which position he held until his death.

He was a loyal and devoted husband and father and had provided a splendid home and income, which was inherited by his wife and two daughters.

The beautiful floral tributes and the many words and acts of kindness by the host of his sorrowing friends, who with his loved ones, now mourn their loss, was indeed inspiring and evidence of the noble Christian life which he had lived.

He had a passion for helping the needy and never spared himself but was always ready and willing to go on errands of kindness and mercy, carrying food to the hungry. He had organized a relief unit for the unemployed and for any family or person needing help.

Through his efforts and leadership similar units were organized by the different railroads operating in and out of Cleveland.

He never considered his own comfort or welfare in ministering unto the hungry and helpless and when he would learn of a family in need, regardless of race or creed, tears of compassion would roll down his face as his big, generous and loving heart would go out to them, and would immediately go to their rescue at any hour of the day or night with baskets of food.

The comforting words of the Savior Himself, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto Me," might well be the welcome home to our beloved brother.

We take great consolation in this thought and feel in our hearts that he has indeed "entered into the joys of our Lord." G.

The tomato is a peculiarly important food, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. No other vegetable gives quite so many kinds of value for the money, and no other is more readily available, in one form or another, in all parts of the country at all times of the year. We have nothing to match the tomato as to flavor, in color, or in variety of possibilities for the table.

Tomatoes, Corn and Cheese on Toast

Three tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons melted butter or other fat, 1 onion (sliced), 2 eups tomatoes, fresh or canned, 2 cups canned eorn, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ lb. sharp cheese, shaved thin. Brown the flour in a heavy skillet, remove the flour from the skillet and blend with 2 tablespoons of the fat. Brown the onion in the remaining fat, add the other ingredients except the cheese and cook for about ten minutes. Stir in the cheese and when melted serve on thin crisp toast.

Tomato Jelly Salad

Three tablespoons gelatin, ½ cup cold water, 1 quart tomatoes, fresh or canned, 2 or 3 slices onion, 1-1½ teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped), 2 tablespoons celery (chopped), 1 tablespoon parsley (chopped), 1 cup shredded cabbage. Soak the gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes. Boil the tomatoes and onion for 5 minutes, strain through a fine sieve, pour the hot tomato juice over the softened gelatin, and stir until it is dissolved. Add the salt and sugar and chill. When the gelatin mixture is partly set add the finely chopped vegetables and mix well. Add more salt if necessary. If the mixture is not tart enough, add a little lemon juice or vinegar. Pour into wet custard eups and place in a cold place until set, turn out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with salad dressing.

Tomato Cocktail

One quart tomatoes, canned or fresh, 2 stalks celery (chopped), ½ green pepper (chopped), 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons tomato catsup, 1 teaspoon onion pulp, 1 teaspoon of horseradish. Boil the tomatoes, celery, pepper and salt for about 5 minutes and rub through a sieve that is fine enough to keep back the seeds. To the tomato juice and pulp add the catsup, onion and horseradish. (A little lemon juice is a good addition if the tomatoes are not very acid). Stir the mixture well and put in a cold place to chill. Beat before serving and pour in small glasses. Finely chopped parsley sprinkled on top adds attractiveness. Thinly sliced cucumber may be used in place of the parsley.

May Ask State to Aid Unemployed

State and Baltimore City officials have been considering the possibilities of a special session of the State Legislature to enact relief measures to alleviate distress throughout the State caused by unemployment and diminishing funds of relief organizations.

The suggestion of the special session was made public following a conference between Governor Albert C. Ritchie, Mayor Howard W. Jackson and others. The special session to pass a state bond issue for relief purposes was considered the most likely of the three plans discussed by the group.

Approximately $3,000,000 will be needed to relieve the distress in the State, the group felt. Of this it was stated that about $2,000,000 would be needed in Baltimore, while the other $1,000,000 would go to the rest of the State outside of the city.

Maryland Reserves Space at the World's Fair

Maryland yesterday reserved a 2000 square foot space for an exhibit at the 1933 world's fair in Chicago, and it was announced that the Legislature meeting next winter will be asked to appropriate $10,000 to pay the expenses of the enterprise.

The decision to have the space reserved for the state was reached by Governor Ritchie and State officials during a conference in the quarters of the Board of Public Works. The 2000-square-foot plot is the minimum allowed to any state, it was explained.

LAKE FORD

Mrs. Mildred Lewis was taken to the hospital early Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs Ora Teets have been confined to their home on account of attacks of influenza.

Mr. William Riley has been confined to his home for several months.

The Sunday School at Lake Ford has been having good attendance this winter. Ross Teets is superintendent. Prayer meeting is held every Wednesday night and the young people meet on Sunday evening.

Mr. Clerence Male has moved from this community to Bray.

Arthur and Walter Teets attended a surprise party Thursday night at the home of John Matheney.

A bad snowstorm has stopped all spring work of farmers who had been busy plowing and putting up their lime kilns. One farmer had already planted peas in his garden.

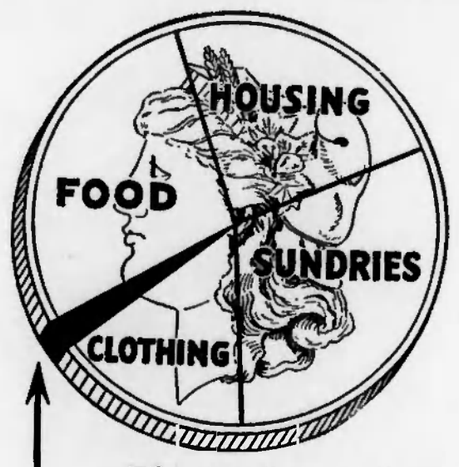
HOW YOUR DOLLAR IS SPENT



This small part of your dollar is spent for gas

Food	34.6 %
Clothing	13.75%
Housing	21.0 %
Sundries	27.6 %
Gas Fuel	3.05%

WHEN you stop to consider how your family budget dollar is spent it will surprise you how little you spend for gas.

Then too, consider for a moment how much in the way of convenience, comfort and genuine utility you get for the small sum you actually pay.

The expenditures shown in the chart are United States Government statistics. They are not our figures. They represent the average expenditures of all families in the United States. This trifling expenditure for gas fuel serves you well in many ways. It cooks three meals a day for a family of four persons at a trifle less than 3/10ths of 1¢ per person per meal. It provides you with heat for hot water. Continuous or intermittent, as you like, heating service for your home. Remember—you pay for what you use after you have used it. Not before.

Gas is the cheapest, cleanest, most convenient and economical of all domestic fuels. Piped into your home—ready for use any time you want it. Its nominal cost urges further use.

Continuous automatic service for all household purposes costs much less than you think.

GRAND JURY CHARGED BY CHIEF JUDGE D. L. SLOAN

Term Begun Monday Morning—Walter W. Savage, Friendsville, Foreman of Body

MUCH WORK LOOMS AHEAD

Monday morning the March Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened with Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan on the bench who charged the Grand Jury, of which body Walter W. Savage, of Friendsville, is foreman.

An unusually small number of people were in the court room when the charge was delivered by the Court, which fact was commented upon by some of the attaches of the court.

Judge Sloan's charge was delivered extemporaneously and was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:—As you know perhaps, it is customary for the Court to deliver a charge to the grand jury. The general charge is more or less superfluous, and sometimes I think unnecessary, because no matter what our instructions and advice may be they are no more comprehensive than the oath which you have taken, and in that is contained everything that you can do in the way of grand jurors.

The grand jury is an ancient institution and its beginning was centuries ago when it not only investigated and charged offenders with crimes but also tried those whom they indicted, so that they became the accusers and then either the convicters or the acquitters of those whom they accused. In the course of time, however, it developed that that system was not altogether fair, in the first place arising from the fact that the grand jurors in the investigation of the case and the subsequent trial all were necessarily residents of the immediate vicinity where the crimes were committed so that because of their familiarity with the circumstances and parties they were often disqualified to follow the prosecution from start to finish. Since then has developed trial by petit jury as a consequence of a charge by the grand jury.

In your investigation of cases presented you will find they are mostly already set up for you, because in the majority of cases of serious consequences at least the alleged offenders have already been arrested and are held for the action of the grand jury, either in jail because of their inability to furnish bail, or out of jail on bond awaiting the action of the grand jury, so that those cases can ordinarily be handled expeditiously because the witnesses are known and the offenders are already within the jurisdiction of the Court.

Aside from that, however, you have broad and complete inquisitorial powers and you can initiate prosecutions of your own motion or can hear anything outside of the cases in which the accused are already detained. If any grand juror knows anything of his own knowledge of any apparent violation of the law in his community it should be brought to the attention of the grand jury and it is his sworn duty to do that. Or, if he knows of any crimes that may have been committed in his community and knows of witnesses who would be likely to possess information about it, then it is his duty to see that they are summoned. It is your duty, indeed, in any case, where you think or have any reason to believe there is any reasonable prospect of a conviction to make that fact known to the grand jury as a body and to see that witnesses are summoned and the matter fully investigated.

It is desirable that the work be done as expeditiously as possible but you must not sacrifice thoroughness for speed.

There are certain things in the law which the court is required to call specially to your attention. The statute against the crime of abortion is one of this character. It is, however, questionable whether that does any real good. This is an offense which is always clandestinely performed, and knowledge of it seldom becomes known to any oustide of the offender and immediate participants unless untoward results follow. Nevertheless I ask that you investigate fully and make all efforts to obtain full information as to these offenses if such should happen to be brought to your attention.

Another very important law and one, the violation of which results in most serious and far reaching consequences is that against the sale of narcotic and habit-forming drugs. I take pleasure, however, in stating that I have not heard so much of the violation of that law in this county, as in more thickly populated centers. It is usually much more common in places where there is a congested population where the traffic in opium, cocaine and other dangerous and habit forming drugs becomes more or less of a public evil and scandal.

The statute against the carrying of concealed weapons is another that we are required to call to your special attention and is one that in its results is perhaps in even greater proportion, the really serious crimes are committed because of the fact that concealed weapons are carried upon the person. Strange to say the public at large does not as a rule regard the carry-

A POULTRY CONTEST WILL BE CONDUCTED IN COUNTY

Trophy to be Offered to Winner in Improving Industry

A "Healthy Grow Chick" contest will be held in Garrett county this year, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

A number of business men in the county are interested in seeing the poultry industry grow and the contest is being sponsored only for the improvement of it. The Grange Milling and Supply company will offer to the winner of 25 or more contestants a silver trophy. It is not necessary to buy feed from that company or use the same kind of feed to enter the contest. The prize is offered as a token of appreciation and recognition of the good work of the winner in his effort to improve the poultry industry in Garrett county.

This contest will be under the supervision of the Extension service and the winner will be determined by the number of pullets housed compared with the total number of chicks started. Scoring will be based on mortality, condition of pullets housed, source of chicks, incubator used, condition of brooder house and ground, method of feeding, management, laying house.

If planning on growing chicks this spring, full information about the contest may be obtained from the county agent.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR YARD-GARDEN CONTEST

More Time Is Being Taken To Beautify Home Property

With fifty-three already entered in the third annual yard and garden contest, being sponsored by the Oakland Civic Club, and the soliciting of members just barely begun, the prospects for the biggest and most interested year of the whole campaign are very bright, according to Miss Lottie M. Loar, president of the club. With the economic conditions such as they are, many are taking more time to beautify their yards and it seems like everybody wants to help improve the looks of Oakland, Miss Loar stated.

Mrs. Edward Offutt, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Julius Littman, Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, and Mrs. Bernard Gonder, members of the committee in charge of the contest, will continue to solicit entrants personally, so that all names may be obtained before it is time for the judges to make their first inspection.

The ultimate goal of the contest is to give every home in the city more attractive surroundings so that living will be more enjoyable. The opportunity to make homes attractive by setting out trees, shrubs and flowers is the first direct benefit that comes to each family joining in the contest, and secondly a clean city will impress strangers, tourists and visitors, it was stated.

Each home entered in competition will be visited personally and inspected by the judges. Three inspections will be made before the end of the contest.

It is expected that the contest, as now being conducted will immediately result in a general cleanup of home grounds, vacant lots, streets and alleys, eliminating fire hazards and eradicating breeding places of disease.

High Winds Strike Oakland Early Tuesday Morning

Oakland and Garrett county were barely touched by the series of tornadoes which swept five states Monday night and Tuesday, the extent of the damage being a few broken windows, the loss of several shingles, and an interruption in the electric light service for about two hours.

The wind, however, reached such a velocity as to become alarming at times, and its force shook houses. Shingles were blown off the H. A. Lordaitch home, while windows were broken in the Hamill house and that of Chas. A. Tower, in East Oakland.

Three hundred twenty-nine persons were killed, hundreds of others were injured and made homeless during the storm outside of Maryland, Alabama bearing the brunt of the high wind. Reports trickling in today from communities cut off by littered roads and broken communication lines brought the death figures in the five states to 329. Unofficial estimates placed the injured in excess of 2,500, and the homeless at 7,000.

Deaths by states were: Alabama, 269; Georgia, 37; Tennessee, 18; S. Carolina, 3; Kentucky, 2.

PITTSBURGH COMMITTEE WORKING FOR TABLELAND

Meeting Called to Develop Tentative Program for Developing Allegheny Area

Within the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, events are taking place which may mean much to the Allegheny Tableland area, I. S. Middaugh, secretary of the Allegheny Tableland stated yesterday. Mr. Joseph T. Miller, who is secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Water Company, has been appointed temporary chairman of the Allegheny Tableland Council within the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Miller is much interested in the development of this area and is developing a group of men from the Chamber of Commerce who will work with him in the promotion of the Tableland Council and the Allegheny Tableland Association, Mr. Middaugh states.

Pittsburgh is coming to realize the importance of its great metropolitan area and welcomes this valuable mountain as part of its industrial and social development. On Friday, March 11, Mr. Miller called a meeting of the sub-committee to develop a tentative program. Attending this meeting besides Chairman Miller were Thomas Liggett, of the Izaak Walton League; Henry Tranter, chairman of the highways and bridges committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, and Frederick Bigger, of the City Planning Commission. This new committee is directing its work for the definite development of that area in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, which is in reality the potential playground of Pittsburgh.

It is of great importance to Oakland and Garrett county that local membership be developed and a committee organization achieved which shall be in position to sit with the Pittsburgh committee and plan together for the fullest development of the Tableland program, Mr. Middaugh emphasized. All business men, farmers, professional people and their organizations should consider seriously accepting Tableland membership.

Somerset Chamber of Commerce

The newly elected Somerset Chamber of Commerce has concluded to back the program of the Allegheny Tableland Association and especially the musical program as it relates to the music festivals, pageants, and the community meetings being directed by Miss Sara B. Huff. This is of special interest, since this year there will be three major festivals. The first at Deep Creek Lake, the second at Fort Necessity and the final one at Somerset.

FORESTERS PREPARE FOR COMING FIRE SEASON

Towers Are Now Being Placed in Readiness by District Forester

Special warnings of the approach of the year's greatest forest-fire period and instructions as to prevention are being sent throughout Maryland by the State department of forestry, and already some of the forest fire towers on the Eastern shore have been opened.

Lingering snows in Garrett and Allegany counties have retarded the arrival of the usual spring forest fire conditions, according to H. C. Buckingham, district forester. Towers are being placed in readiness in Western Maryland and telephone lines damaged by the recent blizzard are being repaired, so that the towers can be placed in operation should spring temperatures and March winds melt the snow and dry the forests.

It is a considerable task to reduce the number of conflagrations in the woods at this season, Walter J. Quick, Jr., assistant forester stated. In the period from March 20 to the middle of April last year fifty percent of the forest fires of the year occurred. The majority of the blazes are caused by brush burning and the burning of grass or debris in a general clean-up of property.

Cecil Ramsey, of Oakland, recently assigned as principal forest guard, is assisting District Warden A. L. Sines to prepare the forest wardens for efficient fire fighting. Organization of special fire fighting crews is being emphasized.

Schools Closed at Noon Today

All elementary and high schools of Garrett county were closed at noon today for the Easter vacation period, and will reopen Tuesday morning at nine o'clock.

SEVEN MORE ARE NABBED BY PROHIBITION AGENTS

Conclude Their Series of Raids Here on Friday—Total of 15 Must Appear in Court

SECOND OFFENSE FOR ONE

Concluding their series of raids in Garrett county on Friday, Prohibition agents Harvey and others added six more violators to their list, bringing the total captured to 15. More than thirty others were arrested in Allegany county during the past week-end.

Practically all the purchases were made by Agent David H. Walker, who was moved to the Cumberland prohibition office in October. He worked under cover until March 16, when he was assigned to the Cumberland office permanently.

The Garrett county cases include the following:

Samuel W. Tasker, Shallmar, was arraigned before Magistrate George Poole, Kitzmille, and held on $500 bond for action of the Grand Jury on charges of sales and possession.

Laura P. Leach, Shallmar, charged with manufacture, sales and possession, was held under $500 bond.

Patrick Leon Helbig (second offense in State court), near Deer Park, charged with sales and possession, held under bond of $1,000.

Harry M. Stahl, Oakland, charged with Sales and Possession, is held under bond of $500.

Andrew J. Miller, near Gortner, charged with sales, manufacture and possession, is held under bond of $1,000.

Harry Griffith, near Pierce, West Va., charged with sales and possession, held in default of $500 bond.

George A. Aronhalt and Elizabeth Aronhalt, Kempton, each released under bond of $500, charged with sales and possession.

Thomas J. Hanlon, near Gormania, charged with sales and possession, held under bond of $500.

Perry E. Dennis and Alvin R. Dennis, held under bond on charges of manufacture, sales and possession. Agents seized a 50-gallon still on the premises.

Arthur W. Culp and Ernest Culp, of near Gormania, charged with sales and possession, held under bond of $500.

James Fazenbaker, Bloomington, charged with sales and possession, cited to appear at Oakland today. Officers seized 67 bottles of home brew and a gallon of whiskey on Saturday.

Oliver Miller, Bloomington, was also cited to appear on a charge of sales.

MINISTER CONCLUDES HIS PASTORATE AT RED HOUSE

Rev. Waybrigth's Resignation Accepted—Leaving Tuesday

Rev. Walter E. Waybright, pastor of the Eglon Parish of the Lutheran Synod, who resigned to accept another charge at Chancefort Lutheran Parish of the West Pennsylvania Synod at Red Lion, Pa., will leave Tuesday with Mrs. Waybright for his new field.

Rev. Waybright has completed a pastorate of almost five years in his present charge, having graduated from Gettysburg Seminary in 1927, coming to Red House shortly afterward. His new charge consists of two churches, both about the size of the Red House Lutheran church.

The joint council of the St. John's and St. Luke's churches will meet early in April to decide on a successor to Rev. Waybright. His resignation was accepted last Sunday by the congregations of both churches.

During his pastorate at Red House, a total of 97 new members were received at the three churches, St. John's, St. Luke's and Grace; 73 infants were baptized; the communicant membership of St. John's increased from 73 to 192; 88 weddings were performed; graded lessons were instituted in the Sunday school; and a Women's Missionary Society, Luther League and Light Brigade are now active. Church buildings and the cemetery adjoining St. John's were improved.

Alleged Postal Law Violator Arrested

Alleging that he had violated a postal regulation, John Mitchell, of near town, was taken to Baltimore on Saturday night by a Federal officer and was released from custody by the officials there when arraigned on Monday, when he returned home.

MT. LAKE MAYOR RESIGNS; UTTERBACK IS APPOINTED

Subsequent Vacancy in Council to be Filled Monday Evening

Upon the acceptance of the resignation of McClellan Clayton as mayor of Mt. Lake Park, Floyd R. Utterback, a member of the council, was appointed in his place, at the last meeting of that organization.

Mr. Clayton is enroute to Mt. Lake Park from California, by way of the Panama Canal, but he has written that his health is such that he will not be able to assume his obligations as mayor upon his return there. During Mr. Clayton's absence the past fall and winter, Mr. Utterback has been acting mayor. There is no president of the council.

Mayor Clayton stated in his letter of resignation: "It is out of the question for me to act as Mayor. I am sorry to say that it is as much as I can do in my present state of health to attend to my personal affairs. I will consider it a great favor if you will explain to the Councilmen my position in the matter. You have plenty of good young men among whom to make a choice."

By the appointment of Mr. Utterback as mayor, to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Clayton, this leaves a vacancy in the council, and this appointment will be made at the next meeting of the council on Monday, March 28. Present members of the council are Wilson L. Camden, Thomas O. Schooley, Albert Schrock, and James Elliott.

CIVIC CLUB TO SPONSOR PLANTING OF 2000 TREES

To Re-Forest Hillside Above Washington Spring Park

The plan to re-forest the hillside across the state highway from Washington Spring Park, just at the edge of town, will be realized about the middle of April, according to members of the Oakland Civic club. The club has arranged for 2,000 trees of the Red Pine species to planted there under the direction of Mr. E. R. O'Donnell. Eight hundred will be transplants while the remaining 1,200 will be seedlings.

The planting will be done by high school children, it is planned, and when completed, the trees will be dedicated to George Washington. This is expected to make the approach to Oakland more beautiful.

Scouts to Plant Trees

The Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will plant about 1,000 trees on the Herrington State forest for the Oakland Civic club, as has been the custom for the past two years. The trees are purchased by the Oakland Civic club, and during the past two years more than 2,500 trees have been planted there, under the direction of H. C. Buckingham, district forester.

Good Friday Afternoon Services to be Held in the M. E. Church

The churches of Oakland and the surrounding community will share in the union Good Friday services at the M. E. church from one until three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The liturgical part of the service will be short, the chief part being given over to the rendition of Sir John Stainer's oratoria, "The Crucifixion," by a union choir, under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Thayer and Dr. John G. Robinson. Miss Sara B. Huff, who has assisted in the work, will be present with the chorus.

The offering for the day, along with the offerings of the other union Lenten services, will be devoted to expenses of the daily vacation Bible school.

Local Legion Post Supports Rankin Pension Bill

Following a meeting of Proctor Kildow Post No. 71 American Legion, on Monday evening, telegrams were sent to Senators Millard E. Tydings and Phillips Lee Goldsborough, and Congressman David J. Lewis, urging their support of the Rankin Bill now before Congress, concerning pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans.

Plans are being made for a dinner dance, sponsored by the Legion post, to be held in May. An electric sewing machine will be given away at this time.

The Legion post has been requested to assist in getting applicants for Citizens' Military Training camp this summer, beginning early in July.

SIXTY-TWO ARE INDICTED BY COUNTY GRAND JURORS

Session Adjourns Yesterday Evening After Three-Day Examination of 53 Witnesses

TRIALS BEGIN TUESDAY

Fifty-three witnesses were examined and sixty-two indictments were returned by the Garrett County grand jury, which adjourned Wednesday evening about 5:30 o'clock after being in session since Monday morning.

The charge to the grand jury was delivered by Judge D. Lindley Sloan, after which the grand jurors began the examination of witnesses summoned to appear. William Walter Savage was foreman of the jury with H. L. Porter and Britton Martin, clerks.

Criminal trials will be taken up on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock with Judge Albert A. Doub on the bench.

Following is a full report of the grand jury:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

The grand jury for the March Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland, hereby submits its report as follows:

We have had before us and have examined 53 witnesses and have found sixty-two indictments.

Following the instructions which were delivered to us in the charge by His Honor Judge Sloan, we have carefully considered all matters which were brought to our attention and have returned indictments where the evidence warranted.

We have made an inspection of the Jail and find it to be in excellent condition and well taken eare of by the sheriff of Garrett county, and we desire to commend him for the good appearance of the property which is in his charge.

We have examined the Court House and the several offices and find them to be in good condition and well taken care of by the officers in charge. The records in the several offices are in good condition and neatly kept and all information asked for was ready, available and cheerfully given.

We desire to call attention to the splendid effort that is being put forth by the officers of the county in the enforcement of the law, and also wish to thank the State's Attorney, Walter W. Dawson, for the cooperation and assistance given us during our deliberations. We extend our thanks to His Honor, Judge Sloan, for the assistance he has given us in performing our duties as Grand Jurors.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAW W. SAVAGE, Foreman.

H. L. Porter,
Britton Martin, Clerks.

LOCAL BANKS TO OBSERVE THE TWO-DAY HOLIDAY

Good Friday and Saturday, Both Legal Holidays

The banks of Oakland as well as the banks of other sections of Maryland, will observe a double holiday this week. Tomorrow, Good Friday, a legal holiday for many years, and Saturday, being Maryland Day, is also a legal holiday, made so by proclamation by the Governor, in consequence of which the banks will remain closed until Monday morning.

Scouts Take Moving Pictures of Hike; Court of Honor Monday

Moving pictures were taken on a hike Sunday afternoon when a number of scouts of Oakland Troop, No. 1, in charge of Bernard Gonder, Jr., assistant scoutmaster, went to Coddington's Riffle, on the Youghlogheny River. The pictures will be shown at a meeting of the troop to be held at a later date. Those taking part in the hike included George Browning, Ralph Kahl, Kenneth Lawton, John Morgan, Maurice Treacy and Robert Altstetter, scouts; and Charles Davis and Edward Markley.

The regular meeting of the Court of Honor will be held Monday, March 28, in the Masonic club room, according to Harland L. Jones, chairman. A number of second and first class scouts will be prepared to pass their merit badges at this meeting, according to the scoutmaster.

Good Friday and Easter Services In St. Matthew's Church

There will be the usual three-hour service in St. Matthew's Episcopal church tomorrow (Good Friday) lasting from 12 o'clock noon until 3:00 o'clock p. m.

Easter will be celebrated by a Sunday school missionary pageant at 9:45 in the morning and a service of Holy Communion with sermon at 11:00 o'clock. Everybody is invited.

Lesson for March 27

JESUS RISES FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Living Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Conqueror.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Serving the Risen Lord.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fact and Meaning of the Resurrection.

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ or give any proof other than that the tomb was empty, and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested himself after the tomb was found empty. To see the body of Christ with a spear-thrust and nail prints and the empty tomb was all that faith needed.

1. The testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1, 2). This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to him for his kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was yet dark."

2. Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10). The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought with breathless haste so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate. When John came to the empty tomb, he gazed into it, but when Peter came he entered it. This investigation convinced them of the reality of the resurrection. The removal of the stone from the sepulchre, the arrangement of the grave clothes, convinced them that the enemy could not have done this.

II. The Manifestations of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18).

a. Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home, but Mary could not. She stood weeping. Home was nothing to her while her Lord was missing. Earnest love need not to weep long for Jesus is found of those who love him. She should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty, for the empty tomb was eloquent proof of his messiahship and deity.

b. Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13). Through her tears, she saw angels at the tomb, who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow.

c. Jesus revealed himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize him in his resurrection body, but his voice was familiar to her. As soon as he called her by name, she recognized him and fell at his feet weeping.

d. Jesus forbade her to touch him (v. 17). This showed that she was coming into a new relationship to him.

e. Mary's testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the disciples (vv. 19-29). He appeared to several of his disciples at different times during the day. This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. The rumors of his several appearances on that day caused the disciples to assemble to talk over the matter. For fear of the Jews, they met in a private room and barred the door. While they were discussing the strange happenings of the day, the Lord mysteriously appeared to them.

a. When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23).

(1) His message of peace (v. 19). This revealed his attitude toward them. He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion.

(2) He showed his hands and his side (v. 20). Having calmed their fears, he gave them unmistakable evidence of his resurrection.

(3) He commissioned them (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent me even so send I you." This commission was not simply to a class, as the eleven, but to all Christians (Luke 24:33).

(4) He bestowed the Holy Spirit upon them (v. 22). This was their equipment. Only as empowered by the Holy Ghost can one go forward as a successful witness for Christ.

(5) The disciples' authority (v. 23). This authority was not by virtue of office, but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost. This spiritual gift gave spiritual discernment to know who had or who had not repented and consequently to pronounce pardon or withhold it.

b. When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29).

(1) The victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-28). The Lord graciously supplied the evidence which Thomas needed. The Lord does not rebuke those who sincerely seek light.

(2) Greater blessing for those who believe, not having seen (v. 29).

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Personal and Local

Personal and local notes of interest, or what have you:

A. T. (Slim) Shaw was seen in the West Penn office one day last week.

Terrence Tamburini took dinner at the Manhattan Hotel on Tuesday.

Richard West motored to Keyser's Ridge and return on Monday. Ditto Tuesday and Wednesday.

Joe Gonder called at the homes of a number of Oakland people on Saturday. He got only as far as the front door, however.

Mr. James Treacy drove back and forth to his meals last Saturday.

The Boss Editor took lunch at his home one day last week.

Scoop was sober last Thursday. So was Wellington "Doc Yak" Yutzy.

Harland L. Jones was transacting business in the Garrett National Bank one day recently.

Judson Loar and Harry Stemple attended K. of P. lodge last Friday.

Mike Maroney was seen on the streets of Oakland on Saturday.

C. A. Fleegle met the 3:29 train at the Oakland station on Monday.

James Towler entertained a number of people at dinner one day last week.

F. D. Bittle was at the high school on Tuesday.

A telegram was received by Bernard I. Gonder on Wednesday. He refused to divulge its contents.

Bill Grant was employed Wednesday in excavating. He moves to the big fill tomorrow.

Harold Rook motored to Rosedale in his snowplow one day last week.

A marriage ceremony was performed at the home of Rev. Dawson on Tuesday.

Helen Hinebaugh has finished reading her set of detective stories.

Nell Nethkin was seen with a marriage license in her hand last week.

Neil Fraley purchased a few articles from H. C. Sincell recently.

Harry Mickey took a day off and went hunting last Thursday.

Doctor Hinebaugh was a little restless on Monday but had patients the rest of the week.

Walter Hardesty voted for himself on Monday, March 14. Likewise Ralph Thayer, Cot McComas and Frank Browning. Frank Smouse would have if he had been in town.

Cecil Smith has no trouble in being granted permission to leave home on Thursday nights.

William Butt is still bald. So's your Aunt Fanny.

Corporal Currie's application for membership in the Bachelor's Club has been accepted.

The other members of the club are trying to impeach Bill Browning for breaking the rules.

Bill Gibson had a tooth pulled on Monday. The dentist had no trouble inserting the forceps—in fact he didn't find them until two days after.

Russ Brown is receiving sympathy cards from Terra Alta.

Jim Kerins spent the day at Kerins Brothers Garage one day last year.

Mr. F. E. Rathbun went to sleep, got lost, or something, on Monday night. Anyway, he didn't show up at the high school basketball banquet until after the dinner was over.

E. Ray Jones was a pleasant caller at the home of an even more pleasant Mr. Messenger near Terra Alta one day recently.

I. Romanus Rudy spent Saturday in Flatwoods shopping.

John Carter called to see a few sick cows on Friday. He advised hospitalization for some and a nurse for others.

Treasurer Ashby called on George D. Browning the other day. William Frazee conversed with Mr. Friend. Jim Lee gabbed with the other commissioners. In fact, it's quite a gab fest every day up at the Court House now that the lawyers have assembled there to attend to court.

Doe Clarke says he does not like maple pecan ice cream.

Walter W. Dawson was interviewing a number of people on Monday. He was talking to 23 at one time. He asks some awfully embarrassing questions, so it is said.

Berne Teter ran up against a lot of money upon opening for business one morning.

Turk Shartzer slashed a cow with a butcher knife recently, clear to the bone. And then sawed through the bone. And what's more, he charged somebody else for doing it.

The rest of you fellows—Bet Dawson, Archibaldson, Mayor Stemple, Colonel Bell, Andalusia Harned, who are expecting to find locals in here about yourselves, are going to be disappointed.

The Boss of the paper,
A few weeks ago,
Ambled on to his lawn,
His face all aglow.

And well might he smile
With a grin 8 x 10,
For his wife had just yelled
"Look here! O Ben!"

For there 'long the fence
With colors so bright,
Were snowdrops and jonquils.
My dear, what a sight!

He was proud as a peacock
As he plucked a bouquet
And broke for his office,
The sight to display.

But alas! and alack!
Now his countenance is grim;
His smile is has vanished—
He's grouchy as sin.

For the blasts of late winter
Tolled the flowers' death-knell,
And, as a strict Lutheran deacon,
Ben simply says: "O—Well."

WHO REMEMBERS?

HOW MANY DO YOU KNOW IN THIS WEEK'S PICTURE?

The picture this week was taken on the streets of Oakland at fair time. We are not sure just what year, but from the crowd shown it is evident it wasn't taken during the past three or four fairs. Incidentally, it's coming close to planting time now. Plant the best seed you can get, use plenty of fertilizer, work through your growing crops during the summer and pray for the best of crops by next fair time.

AGRICULTURE SECTION IS IN NEW HEADQUARTERS

More Space Is Afforded for Shop Work and Class Rooms

The new building, placed in rear of the Accident main school building, has been completed and is now being used for the Agriculture department.

The new building affords more space for class room and shop work for the agriculture department. The boys of the department, directed by H. W. Beggs, Agriculture, arranged the equipment and did the necessary work in the new building. The building was painted inside and outside by Kahl brothers.

Part of the room is used for home room for junior and senior boys, and for a class room. The remaining part is used as a work shop. The furniture from the old department has been moved into the new building. The building has been wired for electric bells and lights. Four large lights were placed in the new building, one in attic, and one in vestibule. This is the first experience in electric work the boys have had.

A vestibule was put to one end. It was sealed inside with beaver board and a new floor was put in. This room will be used as a store room for chemical laboratory supplies, for partly finished shop products, coats, and lunches.

ACTIVITIES OF FRIENDS COMMITTEE IN MINE REGION

Organization Contributes Relief Work In Local Community

By Lucy Meacham Thruston,
American Friends Service Committee

Did you ever run across that poem of John Oxenham's beginning,

The hearths are cold and the cupboards bare
And the hearts of the old folks are heavy with care
Down there in the grim black coal lands?

Oxenham was writing of the coal lands of Wales, but the words are equally appropriate to the soft coal regions of the United States, and the words of the second verse seem even more so:

And the children are scantily clothed and fed,
They are wanting boots and wanting bread,
Down there in the grim, black coal lands.

Neighborhood, local and state communities began relief work more than two years ago, the Red Cross aided districts in which mines were closing and suffering great, but it was not until the fall of 1931 that organized relief work was begun among the destitute miners in thirty-one counties of seven states. It was then undertaken by the American Friends Service Committee which was requested to administer relief in these regions, since its work in this line in Europe during and immediately after the World War was well known. The A. F. S. C. began work early in September. A thorough survey was the first step. It was seen that quick and actual feeding must at once be started—or else thousands up in the coal valleys and about the closed and deserted mines would starve. Twenty-four thousand school children are now being fed, 33,174 pre-school children and expectant mothers, and there is prospect of adding five more counties in the immediate future to those now receiving aid.

About 47 workers, mostly volunteers, are engaged in the work. One of these was in relief work in Russia and she declares she has seen no greater want and suffering in Moscow than in these coal valleys. Also she states that she has seen women buying frocks in the exclusive shops of Paris, but she has seen none of them manifest more joy than over the old clothes sent out to be distributed. Tons of clothing have been baled and sent out to the distributing points, and clothes or gifts sent to the American Friends Service Committee, 20 S. Twelfth street, Philadelphia, Pa., are promptly sent to the places where help is most needed.

A sum from the American Relief made the beginning of the work possible. Since then sums have been received from other sources and more, much more—food, clothes, money—is needed. But the especially encouraging feature is the manner in which firms and factories have given of their wares. Oregon sent a carload of prunes; 200 cases of milk have been donated by the Carnation Milk Company; 100 cases from Defiance Milk Co.; 25 from Nestle's Milik products; 5 carloads of milk from Pet Milk Co.; 900 pounds of crackers from Loose-Wiles Co.; 500 pounds of chocolate from Whitman Co.; 100 gallons of cod liver oil (much needed) from Mead Johnson Co., while President Hoover has recently sent his check for $2,500.

At present, state the field notes, in every district there are many schools closing for the year, but the children remain just as needy as ever, so arrangements have to be made for lunches to be cooked and served, either in some home or permission obtained to use the school for that purpose. Every effort is being made to encourage men and women to take up some sort of constructive work to help themselves and their neighbors. An extensive gardening project is being undertaken; cobbling is becoming an essential part of the program. The clothing committee is now attempting to ascertain the number of sewing groups in the field and the extent of work being done. When unsuitable second-hand clothing is received, it is made over into children's garments, and every scrap not usable for clothing is made into comforts and quilts. Our workers are asked for every kind of assistance and they gladly respond whenever humanely possible.

From early morning until late at night they make the rounds of buying, delivering, settling accounts, in straightening out tangles of personnel, conferring with mine operators, attending conferences of welfare organizations, making family visits, delivering clothing, working with church groups, and many other activities. Many of these activities relate to efforts to find employment for miners in districts where mines will not be reopened—for here is a new—and tragic—situation before the country: that of a decadent industry and necessary efforts at helping workers adjust themselves to new methods of living and making a livelihood. This is being done in Wales, of which Oxenham writes. It is the future of the committee's work in the soft coal regions.

And for their gratitude the miners themselves seem to find no adequate words. Not only is the relief from starvation given the gift of friendship, of hope, is also made. Oxenham had this in mind when he wrote:

Just to know someone is caring is breath of new life
To the hearts stricken down in the pitiful strife
Down there in the grim black coal lands.

And to know that in the midst of such difficulties and perplexities there is this encouraging work being effected, to know that a part of it, no matter how small, nor how blessedly large, can be undertaken by almost any one of the thousand of people anxious to aid the unfortunate—this to quote Oxenham once more, is a "breath of new life."

SELBYSPORT

Rev. T. E. Shea preached an interesting sermon here on Sunday morning. After the service the women of the town presented Rev. and Mrs. Shea with a beautiful quilt.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Frazee and Mrs. Maude Watson, of Webster Springs, W. Va., were week-end visitors of Mrs. Elizabeth Frazee.

Earl Bowser and family attended church at Accident on Sunday.

Mrs. Jennie Frazee was shopping in Friendsville, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Humberson and family and Miss Olive Umbel were visiting in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Sunday.

Mr. Floyd Fisher, of Confluence, Pa., was a Sunday visitor of Mr. Albert Fisher.

Miss Gladys Humberson, Blooming Rose, was here on Sunday where she visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fike.

N. R. Selby was transacting business at Uniontown last Thursday.

Harry Grove, of Mill Run, was here on Saturday.

There are quite a number of cases of illness in this community, the result of attacks of influenza, colds and other diseases.

Miss Agnes Frazee was calling on Miss Cecelia Frazee on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bowser, of Selbysport, and Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Lint, of Buffalo Run, were transacting business in Friendsville on last Thursday.

"Leave dinner in the oven?"

"Of course—I'll be right over. I have an Electric Range, you know."

No, it's not an exaggeration. When your Electric Range is installed, you're free to spend your afternoons as you wish. Slip your dinner in the oven before you leave—set the automatic timing device—and when you return there's your meal all piping hot.

Meals are better because they're cooked with the accuracy only found in the Electric Range. Costs are low because electricity is cheap. And what a boon all that free time is!

WASHINGTON PROTECTED FRONTIER FROM INDIANS

How He Did It Is Interestingly Told By Newspaper Writer

Scarcely a citizen of the Potomac Valley realizes what a debt of gratitude their forefathers owned to Gen. George Washington for his organization of those early Virginia troops that risked their lives in protecting the homes of the settlers of the Potomac and South Branch Valleys during the period of the French and Indian War from 1754 to 1763.

From the coming of the first white settlers to this section to the year 1752, a period of nearly thirty years, the white man and the Indian dwelt together in peace and harmony.

The Shawnees had their wigwams at "Old Town," Maryland, opposite the mouth of the South Branch; another site of the wigwams of the tribe was at "Old Indian Field," now in Hardy county, W. Va., in the valley of the South Branch, and still another at "Shawnee Springs," now Winchester, Frederick county, Virginia.

A band of the Tuscaroras lived on Tuscarora Creek, near Martinsburg, now Berkeley county, West Va.

Previous to this time the Miamis, the Delawares, the Wyandottes, the Mingoes and the Ottowas had moved west of the Ohio River.

In about the year 1753 emissaries of the Western Indians came among the Indians of the Shenandoah and Potomac Valleys and invited them across the Allegheny Mountains. Thus in the spring of 1754 these Indians suddenly and unexpectedly moved away and left the valleys east of the Allegheny Mountains. This movement was evidently made through the influence of the French as trouble had already been brewing between the French and English over the possession of the Ohio Valley.

After the disastrous defeat of Braddock at the battle of the Monongahela, Washington withdrew from service in the front ranks of the English army and at the direction of Governor Dinwiddie spent his time in organizing Virginia troops and building forts to protect the frontier settlers from attacks by the Indians. This line of forts commenced on the Potomac at Fort Cumberland at Wills Creek (now Cumberland, Md.), extended up the South Branch and down the Shenandoah Valley almost to the border of North Carolina. Only one of these forts, Fort Ashby, is still standing. Others were Fort Ohio, on the present site of Ridgeley, West Va.; Fort Sellers, at the mouth of Patterson Creek, Mineral county, W. Va.; Fort Cox, at the mouth of Little Capon; Fort Cooke, near Burlington, Mineral county; Fort Parsalls, at Romney; Fort Pleasant and Fort Buttermilk, near Moorefield; Fort George, opposite Petersburg, Grant county; Fort Seybert, on the South Fork, Pendleton county, W. Va.

These forts together with about twenty others, were built in this period to protect the early settlers of these valleys.

Around these forts "border warfare was carried on for seven years, in all of which the French and Indians carried death and desolation all along the frontier of civilization. The pioneers nevertheless stood their ground and aided by the companies raised in Virginia by Washington warred successfully again their barbarian enemies till the close of the war in 1763.

During this period more than a dozen companies of Virginia rangers were organized and directed by Washington to keep the savage red man west of the Allcghenies. The depredations of the French and Indians upon the white settlers during the years of this war were in many cases quite fatal. They destroyed completely the settlements of Fayle and Tygarts on the Tygart's Valley River; that of the settlers on Dunkard Bottom on Cheat River and at the mouth of Decker's Creek (Morgantown) on the Monongahela. Scalping parties overran all the region of the Shenandoah and Upper Potomac Valleys, then carried death and desolation to the New River and Greenbrier settlements.

In the spring of 1756 Lieutenant Rutherford and his company of men were defeated by the French and Indians on Patterson Creek and made a retreat to Fort Ashby which stood nearby; everywhere dark, mysterious clouds of malignant spirits hung over the horizon, threatening every moment to overwhelm and exterminate the half-protected pioneer in his wilderness home, and there was scarcely a settlement in all the region of the Potomac, South Branch, Cheat or Capon Valleys that did not experience some of the fatal effects of some of the storm of savage warfare that raged all about them during this period.

The battle of Great Capon was fought in what is now Bloomery District, Hampshire County, on April 18, 1756, between a detachment of one hundred men of Col. George Washington under Capt. Mercer on one side and the French and Indians on the other. The battle of Lost River was fought in the spring of 1756 in what is now Lost River District in Hardy county, between a company of Virginia frontiersmen under command of Capt. Jeremiah Smith and a body of fifty Indians under the command of a French officer. The battle of the Trough was fought in 1756 in what is now Moorefield District, Hardy county, between a body of seventy Indians and a garrison from Fort Pleasant, near that place.

The massacre of Fort Seybert took place in May, 1758, in what is now Bethel District, Pendleton county, on the South Fork of the South Branch River twelve miles east of Franklin.

About the same date an assault was made upon the settlement at Dunkard Bottom, a few miles east of Kingwood and within sight of the bridge crossing Cheat at Caddell, on West Virginia Route 7. Here every white person with the exception of a young girl met death. The remains of some of the victims of the massacre lie buried near the spot, the graves being protected by a white pailing fence kept in repair by the owners of the property. It is said that in this small plot lies the body of Morgan, an intrepid Indian fighter of his day.

In the summer of 1756 a desperate battle took place near Fort George on the South Branch River nearly opposite Petersburg, in Grant county, between a party of Indians and a company of whites composed of Job and Jonathan Welton, Samuel DeLay and others. The Indians, having been driven off after wounding Job Welton, six of them attacked the home of Samuel Bingamon who single handed killed five of them and the remaining Indian declaring that Bingamon was a "devil" took to his heels for safety.

During this dreadful period of seven years many other Indian massacres took place throughout the valleys of the streams named in this article.

ing of a pistol with the same concern that we do violations of other laws. Most murders and serious assaults and many burglaries and robberies are committed as a result of the carrying of a gun and the most serious consequences can arise from that practice. If you learn of anybody who is carrying a pistol or other dangerous or deadly concealed weapon and he is indicted and upon trial found guilty he will find out just how serious that offense is regarded in this court, because the offense of carrying a concealed weapon is not going to be punished by the mere imposition of a nominal fine.

Another statute to which we are required to call your attention, but one which has become more or less obsolete in a sense, is that requiring officers of the law charged with the collection and receipt of public funds to account for them in accordance with the law specifying time and method of accounting.

The greatest number of cases with which you are likely to have to deal involving the violation of any single statute are those concerning the local liquor law for Garrett county, a law that is much more effective than the Volstead Act, because the penalties attached to the commission of that crime in this county are much more serious. We seem to have more offenses of this character because some people seem to have formed the idea that because of the passage of a national law that the state law has become obsolete and they can violate that statute with impunity, but the law against the manufcature, saie or possession for the purpose of sale of intoxicating liquors in Garrett county is still on the statute books and is the most effective law that we have for the punishment of violations of any liquor law, and it is still as much an offense to sell or manufacture or possess for purposes of sale intoxicating liquor in Garrett county as it ever was. Indeed I am not so sure that it is not a more serious offense than it was before the passage of the national law, because violators are of those who habitually flaunt the law for purposes of gain, and the court can not look upon with any degree of leniency those who systematically engage in the violation of law for purposes of profit and gain. We are not required by law to call this to your attention but because of the impression that many people have formed that they can violate this law with impunity we want to make it thoroughly understood that it can not be done in this county.

It is your duty to inspect the public buildings of the county—the courthouse and jail—and to make a report of the conditions which you find in these places with any recommendations which you may have to make with regard to conditions generally and with respect to any suggested improvements to the court house or jail, which, of course, will be submitted to the county commissioners or the custodians of the buildings.

There is nothing else I know of which particularly should be called to your attention. Several of you have been grand jurors before and are acquainted with the duties which you have to perform. The public has never yet had any occasion to complain of the kind of service they have received from any grand jury in Garrett county and I am satisfied from the personnel of the present jury that this will be no exception to the rule of efficiency and thoroughness which has applied in the past.

KEMPTON

The Parent-Teacher association held their regular monthly meeting at the school building on Wednesday night. After the business session the following program was rendered:

Vocal duet, "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen," Misses Lucille Sowers and Nina Povish; talk, short biography of the life of John Philip Sousa, Miss Viola Broadwater; piano duet, El Captan, by Sousa, Misses Audrey Sowers and Viola Broadwater; talk, "The Community and the Child", Dr. E. E. Sollars.

Refreshments were served. The entertainment and refreshments were in charge of Mr. Walter Reichenbacker, Mrs. R. D. Tate, Mrs. A. J. Wotring, Mrs. G. P. Smith.

General and Personal

The Kempton Sunday school, Mrs. Cecil Lantz, superintendent, will render an Easter program in the community building on Sunday night, March 27, 1932.

Miss Viola Broadwater spent the week-end in Oakland and attended a banquet given in honor of graduates of Frostburg State Normal school, who are now teaching in Garrett county.

Mr. Leslie Grace, Baltimore, visited Mr. and Mrs. George Sowers.

Mr. Andrew Shillingburg, who has been in City Hospital, Elkins, for treatment has returned home slightly improved.

Mr. Asa Lewis, principal of the High School here, made a business trip to Oakland on Saturday.

James Shillingburg, Kenneth Harvey and James Harvey were visiting relatives in Bayard over the week-end.

R. D. Tate and family and Miss Kathryn Speicher spent Sunday in Buckhannon, W. Va.

Miss Elsie Proud spent the week-end with Misses Audrey and Lucille Sowers.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Smith entertained at cards one night last week at their home here.

TUBERCULOSIS DOESN'T JUST HAPPEN, SAYS RILEY

Maryland Among First States To Organize to Fight Disease

Beginning in April, tubereuiosis organizations throughout this country will conduct their fifth annual campaign in the interest of the "Early Discovery—Early Recovery" of tuberculosis. Maryland will have a part in the nation-wide activities and in addition to the clinics held regularly every month, there will be special meetings and clinics. In order that measures for the prevention or control of the disease may be put into effect promptly, an effort will be made to reach persons—children, young people, or others—who have been in contact with the disease or who are run down and underweight and show a tendency toward it.

"Every doctor and every health officer knows", Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said, in announcing the plans for these special activities, "that tuberculosis doesn't just happen. It always is picked up, in some way, from other cases. People, in general, know this too, but they forget it and need to be reminded about the precautions they should take to protect themselves and others from the disease.

"Fifty years ago—in March, 1882—Robert Koch announced his discovery of the germ that causes tuberculosis. All over the world today, people are honoring his memory. Before Dr. Koch made his discovery, people knew very little about the way in which tuberculosis spreads, or about the means by which it can be brought under control. Everybody knows now, that it spreads from case to case and they know that the best weapons to use, not only in the fight against tuberculosis, but against all communicable diseases as well, are sunshine, fresh air, plenty of sleep, nourishing food, living in general, in such a way that the powers of resistance to disease may be kept at their best.

"Maryland was among the first states in this country to engage in an organized fight against tuberculosis. Dispensaries, hospitals, and sanatoria have been established throughout the State for the care of those who are ill with the disease, and the means of prevention have been taught to those who are well. And for the children and young people who have been in contact with the disease, but who have not developed it, we now have a Preventorium—the name gives the key note of what it stands for—where they have a chance to overcome the dangers from exposure to the infection by building up their powers of resistance to disease.

"The results of all of these activities have been shown in a very great decrease in sickness and deaths from tuberculosis in this state. But we still have far too much sickness and too many deaths from the disease, so it is very fitting that we observe the Koch anniversary by joining with all other fighters of the disease in a special effort to bring this dragon of suffering and ill health under control."

LEADS TO PEACE

It was on the hill of Golgotha, a place that is called the Skull. Outlined sharply against the gray sky were three crosses, gaunt and forbidding in their significance, fearful in their portent.

At the foot of the central cross stood a woman, frail, trembling, how long she had stood there she knew not, her weak hands seemed scarce able to hold together the folds of her thin wrap that formed but brief protection from the wind. Her gaze was fixed upon the Figure on the cross, her lips moved wordlessly and her fathomless eyes were dark with the pain of unshed tears.

Memories were stirring upon her benumbed brain, memories of joy and happiness, of sorrow and pain and sacrifice, because through all ages mothers have learned the meaning of that word and it was her Son who was now called upon to make the Supreme Sacrifice.

There was the memory of her annunciation, of her magnificat, of the months of happy preparation and waiting for the coming of her Man-Child. There was the memory of the starry night in Bethlehem of Judea when there was no room in the inn, and there were other memories, tender, poignant and searching that held her there, bewildered, affrighted, hurt with the pain that Motherhood had brought her. Other women stood near weeping, and John, the beloved disciple, watched her with a deep solicitude.

The Figure on the cross stirred slightly. His thorn crowned head moved so that His glance rested upon the form of His mother. His eyes were filled with tenderness for her suffering. His lips parted: "Mother," He said gently, "behold thy son," and to John, "Behold thy mother." Even in death did He remember, that she might not be left desolate.

The watch continued and, at the night hour His voice whispered: "It is finished." Christ had made the Atonement, as the Scriptures had foretold.

Then it was that the earth trembled and quaked and the vail of the temple was rent asunder; pandemonium reigned, terror filled the hearts of the multitude.

Scarcely noting, in her anguish the cataclycm of nature, Mary turned from the scene, her heart filled with desolation, the tragedy of all ages was in her beautiful eyes. Being a mother she, too, had made the sacrifice.

She too, had followed in the Way of the Cross, the way that leads through the valley of humiliation and the path of suffering and self-denial into the Garden of Gethsemane and on to Calvary.

But, in the end, the "Way of the Cross" always leads to Peace.

WHY TAXES ARE HIGH

Self-seeking politicians, irresponsible publishers and soap-box orators are trying their best to make the people believe that federal, state and local governments have gone to hell, is the introduction of an editorial appearing in a recent issue of the Spencer (W. Va.) Times-Record.

As if a depressing economic situation were not bad enough, political quackery has made its appearance and innumerable Medicine Men have bobbed up to reap personal gain from existing conditions.

We do not share the quack theory that everything is wrong, nothing right with modern government. We do not think that all those now holding office should be turned out. Indeed, we are convinced that there is no cure-all for present conditions, in government or out. The needs of the people must be studied and best efforts put forward to lead people to want, and be willing to pay for, the things that they really need.

Present conditions in government are not as serious as the demagogue would have us think. It is the truth that taxes are too high in comparison to other living costs, but no one would have thought so had living costs not come down. From 1916 to 1929 we all spent money as if it grew on trees. It is not strange that the government acquired the same habit.

Why weren't tax reductions simultaneous with reductions in other living costs? That is a fair question and deserves a fair answer:

The very nature of our form of government prevents immediate adjustment to economic conditions. The Governor, for example, as the Chief Executive of the State, does not enjoy the power vested in a private business executive. It is not within his domain to arbitrarily increase or reduce state salaries in proportion to existing circumstances. That power rests with the legislature, which meets every two years! Government salaries were the last to go up, will necessarily be the last to go down. So it is with other items of public expense.

Besides salary increases voted during prosperous times—and which came months and even years after private business had granted even greater increases—the government took on many more extra activities. School boards built expensive school buildings. Teachers' salaries were standardized at a higher figure than ever before. State and county health departments were created. Farm extension work was extended. Federal aid to this and to that enterprise was granted. In general, the government increased its activity because times were good and money was plentiful.

Now times have changed. A world-wide depression has brought unemployment, bank failures, poverty and suffering to the country and to the world. Those in private business met the new conditions by sweeping salary reductions, curtailment of extraneous activities and by lowering expenses in every way possible. They did not have to wait for legislative action.

The government, Federal State and local, on the other hand, finds itself unable to reduce expenses so quickly. It must effect reductions in the same slow, cumberson manner as it effected increases. It must curtail only as the people want to curtail. In the meantime, taxes must remain comparatively high to meet the cost of government.

Unfortunately, such periods of readjustment offer unusual opportunities to the demagogue-politicians. He studies the surface and capitalizes on the crowd's superficial wants, hoping to ride into office on them. He knows that people are worried about their living expenses and he knows that taxes have not yet been reduced. Putting two and two together, he mounts a soap box and begins to shead tears for the "dear peepul." At the same time he promises everything and anything.

Thus thoughtless, though sincere, taxpayers are misled by office-seekers and grumblers who might well be compared to the quack doctor of years gone by. The remedies of the old-fashioned quack doctor always appeared more attractive to the average man than the less-spectacular, sounder remedies of the family physician.

Mr. Burt Wilson, Leesburg, Florida. Is Impressed With The Fact That Garrett County Is As Good a Place To Live As He Has Found in All of His Travels and Is Coming Home Soon.

Mr. Burt Wilson, native of Garrett county, who has spent a good many winters at Leesburg, Florida, where he is extensively engaged in the production of citrus fruits, sends this rather gloomy letter to The Republican following the destruction of the crops in that section of the State of sunshine by an unlooked-for frost of recent date:

To the Editor of The Republican.

The good people of Garrett county will know how to sympathize with Florida farmers who lost most of their truck crops by the recent cold weather, as we are so often caught by frost out of season in Garrett county also.

The winter months were warm, with no frost from November to March, and the vegetable crops were producing nicely. Green beans, cucumbers, tomatoes had begun to move in car lots, but now we will have to wait for these crops to grow again before much is shipped.

Citrus fruits were not injured, and cabbage, which was hardly worth getting to the market, is bringing good prices now.

We expect to return to our Maryland home earlier this year than last. Considering everything, Western Maryland is about as good a place to live as we have found and we are always glad to get back home.

BURT WILSON.

Mr. Russell Thrasher and Miss Ada Thrasher, of Washington, D. C., are visiting their father, Mr. B. T. Thrasher, who has been quite ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thrasher and three children, of Keyser, W. Va., visited Mr. Thrasher recently.

Miss Anna Thrasher, Russell Thrasher and Robert Thrasher were in Kingwood, W. Va., on Monday.

Miss Anna Thrasher, Mrs. Nora Mosser and Mrs. Robert Thrasher attended services at St. Mark's Lutheran church, Oakland, on Sunday morning.

An Interesting Fact

POSTAL SERVICE ESTABLISHED

In the years 1661-1662 there were instituted two important progressive movements destined to materially aid in the development of the Colony of Maryland and the education and add to the convenience of the inhabitants.

In the former year (1661) the Assembly passed "An Acte for Conveyance of all Letters Concerning the State and Publike Affairs." These letters were to be sent from house to house by the most direct way until they should reach their destination. It was provided that each householder was to see that the letters should be dispatched to the next house within half an hour after its receipt, except at nightfall or in extremely bad weather, where water courses were to be crossed.

It was not until 1695 that a public post was established from the Potomac through Annapolis to Philadelphia. The postman was required to traverse this route eight times a year and received for his services fifty pounds sterling. This post route continued for about three years. It was not until about fifteen years later that the British Government established its inter-colonial post routes. Even in these early days complaints were frequent that letters were stolen and their contents embezzled.

Before Benjamin Franklin was appointed first Postmaster-General by Congress, William Goddard, a printer of the then recently established Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser had established an independent postoffice system, which was called "Constitutional Post Office," and on July 2, 1774, announced in the Maryland Journel that—

"The printer of this paper, with great pleasure, acquaints the public that his proposal for establishing an American postoffice, on Constitutional principles, hath been warmly and generously patronized by the Friends of Freedom in all the Great Commercial Towns in the Eastern Colonies, where Ample Funds are already secured, Postmasters and Riders engaged, and, indeed, every necessary arrangement made for the reception of the Southern mails, which, it is expected, will soon be extended further."

Goddard's chain of post offices were successfully operated and Congress appropriated, with few changes, Goddard's plan and turned over to Benjamin Franklin the results of Goddard's labors. Thus Franklin received the credit and a position paying $1,000 a year, while Goddard was rewarded by appointment to an inferior position.

In 1662, the General Assembly, taking cognizance of the fact that when settlers were compelled to meet at any place for the transaction of public business, or when compelled to travel on their private business, suffered the inconvenience of finding food wherever they could, or impose on private hospitality, passed an "Act for the encouragement of Ordinary Keepers," probably the first act passed in America in relation to inns and hotels. It seems, however, that by 1666 the inn keepers had turned extortioners, particularly in charging exorbitant prices for all kinds of "spirritts," such as "Canary, Maderia, Malligoe and Clarrett Wines and Ales," so that the charges on each kind was fixed by special act of the Assembly.

It is indeed a far cry from the humble beginnings of these two enterprises to the efficient postal system of the government and the palatial and super-service operated hotels of the present day.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Work of tearing down the old Totten house, corner Alder and Third streets, the site of which was to be used for the proposed new Lutheran church, was begun on Monday.

The March term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county was called on Monday with Associate Judge Hoffman, of Cumberland, presiding. S. L. Townshend was foreman of the grand jury. Among the jurors were P. P. Gortner, Louis Littman and George D. White.

Gilmor S. Hamill, State's Attorney for Garrett county, in company with State's Attorney Sloan of Allagany county, and Judge Hoffman, agreed upon Tuesday, March 29, as the day upon which the Luteman murder case was to be taken up in the court here, the matter having been removed from Allegany county to Garrett county for trial before a jury.

The Supreme Court set October 17 as the date for a hearing in the suit between Maryland and West Virginia to determine the exact boundary of the two states along a portion of the South Branch of the Potomac River.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The deep well in the Oakland Hotel grounds upon which the municipality had a lease and from which the town water supply was drawn, suddenly ceased flowing and officials were puzzled concerning the future source of supply.

A horse and buggy was driven into the Little Yough, near the Glades Hotel by Carroll Kelly and the swift current swept them down at a lively gait. At the railway station Kelly succeeded in making a landing and both the driver and animal were rescued without injury.

Dr. Henry McComas was summoned to Baltimore to attend his youngest daughter, Martha, who was extremely ill.

A housewarming was held in the new home of the local K. of P. lodge. Speeches were made by G. Semmes Hamill, J. C. Renninger and A. T. Matthews.

Sunday was the only really pleasant day experienced by people of Oakland and Garrett county in three months and reminded one that spring was approaching.

FLOWER GARDEN GROUPS MET IN TWO COMMUNITIES

Definite Plans Made for Ensuing Months' Work

The leaders from the Oakland, Mt. Lake-Loch Lynn, and Sunnyside flower gardening groups have made definite plans for their four months' work of yard improvement and will hold the following meetings:

Oakland—Thursday, March 31, 2:00 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. William Frazee; demonstrators, Mrs. T. C. Bittinger, Mrs. William Frazee.

Mt. Lake-Loch Lynn—Friday, April 1, 2:00 o'clock at the Ladies' Aid Hall; demonstrators, Mrs. E. O. Fouch, Mrs. J. S. Elliott.

Sunnyside—Thursday, April 14, 10:30 at the Grange Hall; demonstrators, Mrs. O. S. Ridder, Mrs. J. W. Baker.

The leaders report that as a result of last year's work several women rearranged their yards in keeping with the ideas presented at the group meeting and are pleased with the results. Many of the members enjoyed the opportunity of exchanging surplus bulbs and seeds with other members of the group and all who attended are ready for the second year's work.

This is to include the making of small inexpensive bird baths, rock gardens and lily pools. Some time will be spent studying the use of native wild flowers and shrubs which can be used in making the home attractive at low cost. The outstanding features of the first meeting will be the exchange of seeds and shrubs and the making of a bird bath.

Anyone desiring to attend these meetings is invited to do so. The following persons plan to take up the work:

Oakland group: Mrs. D. E. Orendorf, Mrs. T. C. Bittinger, Mrs. Mark Moon, Mrs. Paul Mitchell, Mrs. John Robinson, Mrs. Charles Newman, Mrs. Wm. Frazee, Mrs. Oma Bernerd, Mrs. Charles O'Brien, Mrs. Harry Porter.

Mountain Lake Park group: Mrs. Grace Beckman, Mrs. Y. C. Cole, Mrs. Millie Cook, Miss Nell Bittinger, Mrs. J. S. Elliott, Mrs. Bruce Falkenstine, Miss Mildred Ford, Mrs. E. O. Fouch, Mrs. C. E. Hardesty, Mrs. Rosaline Hardesty, Mrs. Mildred Harris, Mrs. Ella Hutchinson, Mrs. J. E. Kesner, Mrs. Mary Martin, Mrs. P. T. Moon, Miss Lizzie Morgan, Mrs. W. C. Reedy, Mrs. John Stevenson, Mrs. H. M. Weeks, Mrs. Florence Rathbun, Mrs. Ida Simmons, Mrs. Olive Sweitzer, Mrs. R. Lyle Weeks.

Sunnyside group: Mrs. Frank Arnold, Miss Romaine Moon, Mrs. Florence Ridder, Mrs. J. W. Baker, Mrs. Hazel Dodge, Mrs. Marie Shaffer, Mrs. Pruda Moon, Mrs. Hope C. Moon, Mrs. Ora Ridder, Mrs. Grace Riley, Mrs. Daisy Lohr, Carrie Gauer.

St. Paul's M. E. Church Services

The theme for Easter morning will be "The Living Christ for Dying Men." The choir will render special Easter music. The pastor will baptize any children brought for that purpose either at this service or the evening service. He will also receive any into the church who may desire to affiliate with the church.

Epworth League at 6:45 p. m.

Beginning with the evening service, there will be a week of evangelistic services, closing with April 3. The themes for the week will be as follows, the services to begin at 7:30 each evening: Sunday, "Conditions of Answered Prayer"; Monday, "Motor Power of the Church"; Tuesday, "Prayer for Harvest Hands"; Wednesday, "The Care of the Soul"; Thursday, "The Spirit Speaking to the Churches." Friday will be Sunday school and young peoples' night, and the theme will be "The Man Who Paid the Price."

For Sunday, April 3, the themes will be as follows: Morning, "God's Anxiety for Man"; evening, "The Closed Door."

Not only the church but the entire city have a welcome to any or all of these services, is the invitation extended by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Dawson.

Many Claim Share In Estate of Miss Ella Wendell, of New York

A hundred lawyers filled the court room of Surrogate James A. Foley in New York on Tuesday and were told that the court would not permit the settlement of the estate of the late Miss Ella Wendell "to drag out and become a subject of ridicule."

A total of 1,622 persons who claim to be relatives, have filed claims to the Wendell estate since the aged Miss Ella, believing herself to be the last living member of the family, willed her fortune of more than a hundred million dollars largely to charity.

Many of the claimants live in Europe and their legal representatives argued against an application made by her executor for a speedy filing of bills of particulars setting forth the lineage of the claimants.

Walter Wendell, farm laborer, of near Oakland, is one of the heirs. His great-grandfather was a brother of the direct ancestor of Ella Wendell. An attorney representing the estate came to Oakland last May to investigate the kinship and nothing further has developed since that time.

Former State Senator Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, spent Friday morning in Oakland on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Haulenbeek, of Versailles, Pa., were week-end visitors to Oakland and Deep Creek Lake relatives.

Miss Adeline Sincell returned to her home for the Easter vacation from Maryland Institute, Baltimore, Sunday afternoon.

Miss Viola Broadwater, of the high school faculty at Kempton, was a guest on Saturday and Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Naylor in Oakland.

Roger Tower, of the State Police force, with headquarters on the Eastern Shore, spent the week-end in Oakland with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Z. Tower.

The banks of the City of Cumberland have adopted the same rules governing service charges as those put in effect by the Oakland banks on February first.

Miss Pauline Hauser, of the Lutheran Motherhouse for Deaconesses, in Baltimore, is spending this week here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Hauser.

Mr. J. Wilson Humbird, of Cumberland, who was here a day or two last week visiting his daugter, Mrs. W. R. Offutt, returned to Cumberland on Thursday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Webster Ravenscroft spent Sunday in Clarksburg, W. Va., where their son-in-law, Leo Lyon, is quite ill as the after-result of an attack of influenza.

Miss Helen Offutt, student at Penn Hall, Chambersburg, Pa., is here for a few days' vacation, which she is spending with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Offutt.

County Superintendent Franklin E. Rathbun and Attendance Officer John L. Fitzwater returned to Oakland on Sunday from Baltimore where they had been attending a conference of school officials from other parts of the State.

Robert Stemple, who has been in the employ of the Weirton Steel Co. at Weirton, W. Va., for the past several months, has been furloughed by his employer, along with many other unmarried employes, and has returned to his home in Oakland.

Mrs. J. P. Allen has sold her farm located on Route 37 north of Oakland, to Earl Enlow, who will take possession of the property in the near future. Carleton McComas represented Mrs. Allen in the sale and transfer of the properey.

Members of the Board of Directors were hosts at the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club held Friday evening at the William-James Hotel when an oyster roast was served the members of the organization. The entertainer, Mr. Harry Riggs, of Uniontown, is an impersonator of no mean ability. His talk was greatly enjoyed by every one present.

Miss Beryl Davis, of Elkins, West Va., will spend the Easter holidays with relatives in Oakland.

The local chapter of the American Red Cross has received as a donation a check for $10 from Mr. C. N. McIntire, of Oakland.

The ladies of the Holy Cross Foreign Missionary club will hold a card party in St. Peter's Hall on Wednesday, April 6. Many prizes will be given and luncheon will be served. Admission will be 50 cents.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bittner, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Compton and her little son of the Park, motored to Baltimore Sunday where the party spent a day or two and where the child of Mrs. Compton received treatment at one of the hospitals of the city.

Mr. Charles A. Ashby, of Deer Park, who recently returned to his home from Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis on February 17, was in Oakland Saturday, apparently in the best of health, much to the delight of his many friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Moore left Oakland Sunday morning in their automobile for Baltimore where they will spend the following several weeks with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Hinebaugh, the former having come here Saturday night by rail and accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Moore to Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Jester, former residents of Oakland where Mr. Jester was county agent for two or three years, and who is now occupying the same position in Elkins, West Va., spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland with friends. Mr. Jester has purchased a farm near Gettysburg, Pa., to which he will move with his family on April 1st, having resigned from the Federal service, his resignation becoming effective on March 31st.

The Republican office had as an interested visitors on Tuesday Mrs. Albert Sisk, who was accompanied by her husband. She is now and has been for a number of years the Gortner correspondent. Mrs. Sisk's interest in the making of a newspaper and the operation of the various machines in the office were a revelation to her, this being her first visit to a newspaper office since the installation of automatic machinery and labor saving devices of various kinds. And then she was celebrating her birthday in addition. May she have many more as happy as Tuesday's apparently was.

Monday the annual noonday Holy Week services, sponsored by the Oakland churches were begun in the Presbyterian church where about fifty persons gathered to take part in the half-hour's worship. These services were continued daily including today with augmented congregations, the messages being presented by various ministers. Tomorrow at one o'clock the Good Friday service lasting from one until three o'clock, will be conducted in St. Paul's M. E. church, when Stainer's oratorio, "The Crucifixion," will be presented by the combined choirs of the churches of town and to which everyone is invited.

Two Dumbells Out of Dubuque

By FANNIE HURST

(©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

WHEN the Kammerer children were asked their father's occupation, they replied "Kammerer the Grocer," with no sense of bumble admission. In their city, "Kammerer the Grocer" was the finest, most de luxe institution of its kind in town. Indeed, there were those who moved away to metropolises like New York and Chicago, who found it necessary to write back to Kammerer for certain delicacies such as exotic spices, fruits, that were obtainable nowhere else.

"Kammerer the Grocer" was not just the corner tradesman catering to the green-and-tinned-needs of a small neighborhood area. Kammerer's baking, delicatessen, vegetable, fruit, tinned and staples departments were so complicated and highly organized as any big business.

The stamp of Kammerer was the insignia of a housewife's ability to supply her family with the best.

Aesop Kammerer, while he did not actually serve the trade, could be found on the premises of the business from early morning until late at night. There were roomy if not particularly luxurious offices on the rear of the second floor, and he could either be found there, or in close and careful scrutiny of the needs of his various departments.

At no time of the day, except the noon hour, was a customer, asking for the head of the concern, likely to be told that he was out, or unavailable. Kammerer, who had built up this business almost single-handed, never relaxed his hold when success came. Nine and ten hours a day, six days a week, he gave it heart and body and soul, importunings of his wife and children to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Aesop, just think, our children have been to Europe six times now in all. Don't you think it high time we were entitled to just one holiday!"

"You're right, mother. That's what I'm planning. Next summer we'll join the young ones and see the world."

"Father, you've been saying that for six years, now."

"I mean it this time, mother. High time we were beginning to get something out of it. Next year this time the business can spare me."

The children, high-spirited twins of eighteen, were also of a mind. "Honestly dad, it's up to you and mother to come over with us next summer. You two darlings make us look snide, being so home grown."

"Never you mind, children, your father and I are going to France and Italy with you next June. It's coming to us."

And, finally, although as mother said, she didn't actually believe it until they were on the boat, the Kammerer family, four strong, did set sail for the European trip, which the older pair had been contemplating, planning, dreaming, for at least two-thirds of their married lives.

The youngsters, pampered in every form of travel and education, and to whom the voyage was an old story, set out upon this one in the high spirit of the adventure of experience leading innocence by the hand.

Within twenty-four hours after landing Aesop Kammerer and his wife were being swung through Europe according to the dictates of their two high-handed effervescent youngsters, who were determined on showing them "how it was done."

The results need not have been surprising, but they smote the parental Kammerers with something akin to humiliated dismay. The older pair who, according to all precepts and precedents, should have been having the time of their lives, found themselves overwhelmed with the most profound sense of inferiority it had ever been their ill fortune to even conceive.

Accustomed in their home city each to position of authority and social and business recognition, here they were, being led around by the noses, to speak, by two youngsters who were versed in aspects of life of which they had never even heard.

It was one thing to hear Amy and Robert recite the expedition of their summer travels, year after year, when they returned from the long and luxurious vacations afforded them by their stay-at-home parents. It was another matter to come face to face with these wonders of European civilization; wonders to which their children were inured, and stand there, as Mother Kammerer finally admitted to her husband, like two dumbells out of Dubuque.

Their mutual admissions, kept hoarded from one another during the first six weeks of the trip, burst forth one night in their hotel room that overlooked the Arno in Florence.

"Aesop, you may not know it, but we're a pair of what the children would call 'dumbells out of Dubuque.'"

He had been sitting beside the window, resting his tired and aching feet upon a pillow when this outburst came, and he turned upon his wife the tired defeated eyes she had been noticing in him for weeks.

"It's terrible, mother. If I have to face another art gallery or another cathedral and pretend to those youngsters that I know what it's all about, you'll about have to ship home my ashes in an urn."

"And the degrading part of it is, Aesop, Amy and Robert love and understand those pictures and the beauty of the architecture. There's just no use my pretending, Aesop, I don't know a Del Sarto from a Raphael, and the worst of it is, I don't care. I'm tired, papa. My neck aches from galleries as much as your feet do."

"The beauty is there alright, mother. It's just that we haven't had the time to prepare ourselves to admire it, the way the children have. The whole world's not crazy, traveling these countries over for the wonders of their art and beauty. It's just that we Kammerers the Grocers haven't had time to become anything else."

"There's something in that, father," said his wife, easing the back of her neck with a ministering of witch-hazel. "I long, just as much as you do, to be able to make the children feel we're up to it, but I may as well confess, Aesop, I don't know what it's all about. Take that lecture today in the gallery on Siennese art of the Fifteenth century, it wasn't easy to follow what he was saying, father, the way it was for the children because they've had enough preparation for travel, to know what it was all about."

"Exactly, mother! While we've been at home, being grocers, our children have been preparing themselves to enjoy the things we will be outcasts from all our lives, if we don't hurry up and begin to lay the ground work for us to enjoy it, too."

"Now, what do you mean by that, Aesop?" asked his wife.

What he meant by that was to come as a great shock in the lives of Robert and Amy when they heard it, and the way they heard it was this:

One evening in the bar of the Excelsior hotel in Rome, over cocktails, Robert said to his sister:

"This trip is an awful frost. Amy. Good Lord, if I had known the governor and the governor's lady were going to be a pair of sawdust babies on our hands! Did you see the poor old duster flop down for a cat nap today in the house of Livia, right in front of the murals?"

"Yes, and it would have to be in front of 'Io Guarded by Argus.' I wouldn't say it to the dears for worlds, but can you imagine how they would welcome taking an earlier boat home? We could hop down to Antibes then for a couple of months on the Riviera."

"I'll be the last to suggest it to them."

"Leave it to me, darling. I know the mother like a book. She will jump at the release!"

It was at this point that Aesop walked in on his progeny who were tossing off the remains of their cocktails.

"Say, Rob, say Amy, what say? Here in this envelope I've two transportations back home."

"Oh, father—not quitting us, are you?"

"No. You're quitting us. Ma and I have made up our minds to stay over in Europe this year, and catch on to this thing called the culture game. I'm going to need you two children back home. Rob, you're going to take charge of the fruit and vegetable departments, A to Z and, Amy, I've wired back to our Miss Punt to take you on in her department and get you limbered up in the fascinating study of imported spices."

"Why, father—"

"Nope. You mother and I aren't going to need you around for the next little while. We're going to get ourselves ready, the way we did you, to know what it's all about."

And so it was, that the house of Aesop Kammerer, Fancy Grocers, found itself presented with a new manager of the fruit and vegetable department as well as an assistant to Miss Punt, in the fascinating department of rare and exotic spices.

Small Food Difference in the Cereal Grains

The cereal grains are the backbone of the nutrition of most of the races of the earth. They are, as a rule, the cheapest sources of food fuel; so that corn, wheat, rice, barley and oat kernels are to be found constituting a third or often much more of the calory intake of the millions of persons involved. Some of these cereal products are used in almost the same form as nature. They may be ground or pulverized and cooked, but not otherwise greatly altered.

On the other hand, a few of the cereal seeds are manipulated or milled so that a part of the natural kernel is discarded. This is notably true of rice and wheat; in lesser degree also of corn. Aside from these alterations, however, there is a running debate as to the relative nutritive values and physiologic properties of the various cereals.

From the chemist's standpoint there is little occasion to attribute any especial superiority to one of the cereal grains over its usual competitors. All are abundant in starch, have a modicum of protein that does not quite match most animal proteins in biologic value, include essentially the same contents of a few inorganic ingredients, and have a complement of vitamins that is not conspicuous or diversified. Despite this, one may observe the dispute of relative virtues entering from time to time into the propaganda for trade preference.—Journal of Nutrition.

Wealth Often Hindrance

People often live as though wealth were the greatest good, sacrificing to it health, happiness, even conscience itself. Don't feel bad if you haven't everything you want. Be glad that you are comfortable and have to strive for the things of life.—Grit.

"BABY STEPS OUT" TO BE SENIOR CLASS PRODUCTION

Characters To Be Chosen Early in the Week—To Be Presented Middle of April

"Baby Steps Out," a comedy in three acts, has been chosen by the seniors of the Accident High school as their class play. A definite date has not yet been selected for the production but it will probably be given the second week after Easter. The play is under the direction of B. O. Aiken, principal.

"Baby Steps Out" is a vivid, dramatic comedy of the Morris family. Elmer, the husband, buys hair nets, needles and almost everything, but finally he balks.

There are many laughs throughout the entire play. Mrs. Morris dominates the scene, but when Baby (the seventeen year old daughter) steps out there are more laughs. The surprise ending, the delightful little romance, the conflict of characters, and the revolt add interest to the comedy.

The characters will be chosen the first of the week and practice will begin immediately.

EGGS FOR EASTER

Not for twenty years have eggs cost so little at Eastertime as now. And spring is the season for quality—more good eggs come on the market in spring than at any other time.

In almost countless ways eggs can be used as the main dish of any meal. For variety, they can be served with different seasonings and sauces: Poached on toast with tomato sauce, for example; hard-cooked with Spanish sauce; curried; baked with cheese; or creamed with ham and served on toast. Omelets may be varied by adding chopped onion, chopped ham or bacon, by folding in jelly, cheese, tomatoes, or almost any flavorful vegetable or meat. Or, for an economical dish, try a fondue made with a large proportion of eggs and enough cheese to flavor. Another good variation is poached eggs served on savory rice. Baked custard with caramel sauce is a nutritious dessert that is economical when eggs are low in price.
